Making Democracy Certain by Means of a City Charter

Expert Frank Putnam shows how European communities excel American in co-operative features of benefit to the masses, even to the extent of a tax on land increments.

Written for the Post-Dispatch
By FRANK PUTNAM,
Author of "City Government in Europe."

THE essential distinction between city government in Europe and in America is one of spirit, more than of form.

Indeed, it is the spirit of a city government, and not the form of its organization, which is most important to the people whom it represents.

In Europe, especially in Northern Europe, the spirit of city government is co-operative and democratic; in America the spirit of city government is individualistic, limited by the Jeffersonian axiom that the country (or city) is governed best which is governed least.

Thus, naturally, American students of city government are found insisting more upon the excellencies of certain forms of government than upon that broad co-operative spirit which characterizes city governments in Northern Europe.

The difference between the European and the American city governments is, I take it, due chiefly if not solely to the difference in age and experience. We shall arrive in due season, with city governments quite as efficient, in all ways, as the best of the German or British city governments. It will be surprising if we do not surpass them.

THE spirit—the animating purpose—of the German city government is to safeguard the individual, high or low, in the enjoyment of the right to work, of sound health, of immunity for involuntary want due to sickness, accident, disease or old age. German city governments have learned that, in order to achieve these desirable results, they must have other sources of income than taxation. Looking about them, they have determined that the public services, to which all citizens contribute, and which derive large revenues from such contributions, ought to be owned by the people of the city in common, in order that such revenues may be applied to the general welfare, instead of to the enrichment of a few individuals.

Going beyond municipal ownership of public utilities for additional sources of public revenue, these cities have determined to take into the public treasury, in constantly increasing ratio, the enhanced value of city lands privately owned.

They argue that since such increase in land values is due not to the separate exertion of the individual owner, but to the joint efforts and presence of all the people of the city, the added value is not a personal but a social or communal creation, and belongs by right not to the individual owner of the land, but to the community. Thus, the "land increment tax," as it is called, has come to be levied by all of the German cities, by all of the states comprising the German empire, and by the Imperial Government.

This significant recognition of the rights of the humble individual citizens comprising the great mass of the people is, in my opinion, of the very essence of democracy. It is, as we shall see, in startling contrast with the animating spirit of our American cities.

IN OUR cities, public utilities, excepting water plants and those services which produce no profit in money, are, with very few exceptions, owned by individuals or small incorporated groups of individuals, not by the communities. Thus in our cities the large revenues derived from these services to which all citizens contribute are taken by a few, for their enrichment, and not by the public treasury, for the promotion of the welfare of all. None of our cities, so far as I know, levies a tax on the unearned increment in city lands owned by individuals or corporations. This vast profit, too, created by the effort and presence of all the citizens, is, like the profits from the public utilities, taken by a minority of private owners of the land so enhanced in value.

Is this democratic? Is it just to the majority of individuals whose low earnings prevent them from becoming owners of land, and thus from participating, even slightly, in the increase of value of city lands socially created? I think not.

Apparently we shall need presently to reconsider the meaning of the word "democracy." Our interpretation of the word, upon which hitherto we have acted, is that democracy means a free-for-all race, in which the wise and the strong and the self-denying shall emerge as winners of prizes, and the unwise, the weak, the self-indulgent, shall finish "out of the money," to borrow a phrase from the sporting page.

I DO not attempt to prove this view is out of accord with natural law; obviously it is not. In the jungle, under natural conditions wholly unchecked by human intelligence, the strong and the swift survive and the slow, the weak, the foolish perish—or survive, if at all, only by reason of extraordinary fecundity. They multiply faster than the destructive forces of nature, the superior orders which prey upon them, can exterminate them.

I do raise the question, "Do we, as rational beings, wish our community lives to be governed on the jungle basis, or are we capable of dwelling

The Man That Built the Dam That Stores the Water That Turns the Wheels, 143 Miles Away, to Make Electricity for St. Louis

Hugh L. Cooper Spent All His Own Money—$150,000—Before He Got the Keokuk Enterprise Under Way

Interesting Personality of "the Engineer on the Job," Who Planned and Promoted the Plant Which Will Generate 310,000 Horse Power—Gives Efficient Workmen Who Leave Him Medals of Merit—Once Did What Lord Kelvin Said Was Impossible.

By CARLOS F. HURD.

IN less time than it has taken the City of St. Louis to build a bridge nearly across the river, one man has welded Iowa and Illinois together with concrete, has put every gallon of the upper Mississippi's water to work, and has created a new unit in the nation's industry—the "power zone," stretching southward 200 miles from Burlington to St. Louis.

This is not written to disparage municipal enterprise. It is written by way of introducing to the people of St. Louis Hugh L. Cooper, builder of the $27,000,000 Keokuk dam, and speedy doer of big things.

The introduction is needed. In a general way, St. Louis has known for two years or more that something big was being done at Keokuk. Most persons who motor out Florissant way know, by this time, that the tall steel towers and their pendant cables have nothing to do with aviation. And two or three business men's delegations have taken the short trip to the Iowa border town and have seen the dam.

But it is likely that more St. Louisans have made the long banana-boat cruise to the canal zone, to see Goethals and his men at work, than have gone the 178 miles to the heart of the new power zone to see Cooper and his men at their big task. Add those who have seen Panama by moving pictures, and the comparative lack of knowledge about Keokuk and Cooper, becomes impressive.

Fond of Telling About the Dam—but Not of Himself.

COOPER likes publicity—for the work. He likes to see news stories printed about the two miles of concrete; about the boat lock, with its gate bigger than any at Panama; about the mammoth turbines, 15 now in place or being placed, and 15 more to come, and the 10,000 horsepower that each of them will yield; and about the manufacturing and industrial opportunities that will be open to St. Louis, Hannibal, Quincy, Keokuk and Burlington when the "juice" is supplied to the transmission lines July 1.

With all this, he is willing that it should be mentioned that Hugh L. Cooper is chief engineer, that he is 47 years old, has worked on several other large jobs and began construction work on this job three years ago. That, he thinks, should satisfy the most avidious appetite for detail.

"Don't write about me; write about the job," he said when I called at his downtown office in Keokuk Friday morning. I argued that the job and the man were inseparable, and he, not disputing this, continued to ignore the man in his talk about the job. When I asked him of himself or his personal relation to the work, he would answer the question briefly and stop. But in talking of the dam and power zone he made sentence follow sentence rapidly enough.

A rugged idealist is this man, whose name will, in future years, be linked with that of Eads when the Mississippi is spoken of. Short and sturdy, he has the appearance of having never missed a meal or a night's sleep. His daily inspections of the work begin at 7 a. m., summer and winter.

He was born to a knowledge of water power. His father was an owner of flour mills in Minnesota and Wisconsin, and moved from one community to another as he found a better water power, or one to be had on more favorable terms. His education extended through a high school course. Then he determined to work for George Horton, a structural steel engineer. Barney Marsh of Des Moines, a friend of those days, tells how he got his first job.

"Cooper went to Horton for a job," says Marsh. "Horton told him there was no chance—that business was not good enough.

"'Now, Mr. Horton,' said Cooper, 'I came here to go to work for you. Where shall I hang my coat, please?'

"Horton decided he could use a young fellow like that."

In his days as a draftsman, it is related that Cooper "ate up" strain sheets, figuring out endurance of various materials. By the time he went into bridge building, he did not have to ask questions. He knew.

Cooper's early work for himself, after his preliminary training with Horton, was on bridges in the Pacific Northwest. In Seattle he built a bridge and took a wife.

But water power was Cooper's hobby, and he quit bridge building for hydraulics. Jamaica, Mexico and Brazil were his successive fields, and he had such experience with the labor available in those lands that, even now, a strong, willing Slavic or Balkan workingman is an object of beauty in his eyes.

On the Niagara Falls power plant job Cooper gained a liking for British capitalists. "They sit tight and don't interfere," he has since said. By sitting tight and letting Cooper carry out his plans the Englishmen saved $4,000,000 of an intended $10,000,000 outlay.

Cooper's Joke on Lord Kelvin—Doing What "Couldn't Be Done."

WITH no land available below the falls for outlet purposes, Cooper ran a tunnel under the middle of the Horseshoe Falls. Lord Kelvin, the eminent British scientist, told his countrymen it couldn't be done, but they said nothing of this to Cooper, until, with the work successfully finished, they were able to tell it to him as a ripping good joke.

From Niagara, Cooper went to a bigger job—the McCall's Ferry water power on the Susquehanna. This work was hampered by financial troubles of the management, but was an engineering success.

When he had nearly finished the Susquehanna work, he was asked to find a water power investment for $5,000,000 of Canadian money.

"I told my secretary," Cooper relates, "to look through all the engineering papers for water power news. He brought me a four-line item from the Engineering News, saying that Keokuk had a franchise to dam the Mississippi, and was looking for an engineer to plan and execute the work.

"I wired to Keokuk that I was on my way, and got there as soon as I could. Yes, they had the franchise. 'How much did you pay for it?' I asked them. They said $10,000, but they proposed to give it to me.

"It didn't suit me to take it as a gift, and I paid them $20,000 for it. That was eight years ago, and I have been working on the Keokuk dam ever since. The biggest and hardest work I did was on the financing it. If I had had experience in that line, and had known how hard it was going to be, I would probably never have tackled it.

"Before one man would invest, 58 turned me down. I went the pickle people, with their 57 varieties, one better in my canvass for capital. The greater part of the money was raised outside the United States—in England, France Belgium and Canada.

"Some of those 58 have since come in, not exactly on the ground floor, either—perhaps you might say, on the second or third story.

"Some of them said they thought I could do the work, but suggested the possibility that I might die. I told them there were dozens of engineers who could take up the work wherever it might be left off.

"IT happened, as I have since learned, that the months when I was out promoting this job were the one time, in the whole eight-year period of my connection with the enterprise, when there would have been any chance of success. It seemed hard enough then, but at any other time, I am now convinced, it would have been impossible. Why, with the feeling that prevails now, I couldn't go out today and give away one-half of this enterprise and borrow what the other half would cost. But at that particular time, men were willing, after sufficient persuasion and demonstration, to give us what we needed. That's just a little of the psychology of the thing.

"Another bit of the psychology of it, as I look back over it, came in the figuring on the stage of the water that we had to calculate on for our work this last spring. By the figures of the last 31 years, we should have expected water this spring, following the high water of 1912. The last two consecutive seasons of high water were 1881 and 1882. I thought at first it was safe enough to figure the experience of 31 years against the occurrence of that one year, and was going ahead with low water plans, but one day, out on the job, it came to me that I must calculate on high water, and I did. The high water came, and if I had stuck to my first idea, there would have been a serious delay in the work.

"The North American people" (James Campbell's name had just been mentioned) "have taken a broad-minded view of this whole investment. If they had not taken this broad view of it, there would probably have been no Mississippi River Power Co. today.

"It meant not only that they must practically scrap a lot of fine machinery, but also that they must put a lot of money into this power project on their faith in its merits. If it had been a failure, Keokuk couldn't have indemnified them."

Spent His Own $150,000 in Promoting the Power Project.

FROM another source, I heard just how the North American Co.'s help saved the day for the power enterprise. A "prospect" whom Cooper approached was attracted by the bigness of the Keokuk enterprise, and expressed confidence in Cooper's ability to do the work, but was skeptical as to the market for the power. When Cooper said that the power could be transmitted as far as St. Louis, the "prospect" scoffe and reminded him that St. Louis was in th midst of the world's cheapest coal.

Cooper asked the man to suspend his decisio went to St. Louis, clinched his previous arguments with the power-using interests here, an returned with a signed contract for supplyin St. Louis with 60,000 horsepower. He got th investment, and others which had been deferre for the same reason.

In promoting the Keokuk dam, Cooper san his own fortune, $150,000. He is said to hav been $500 in debt when he finally put the pla through. But Keokuk, which had dreamed fo a half-century of this work, stood by Coope Once, when he wired from New York that h needed a blanket traction franchise, the Cit Council held a special meeting and gave him th franchise, without stopping to ask why it wa wanted. Then it was discovered that the Stat law required 30 days' consideration before pa ing a franchise ordinance. The Council took a new ordinance, held it 30 days, and again decreed to Cooper the rights he had ask [illegible] need for the franchise, whatever it wa [illegible] and it was permitted to lapse.

Again, the Council appropriated city [illegible]nds aid in the promotion work. This was illegal and anyone could have stopped it by an injunc tion, but with the utmost publicity, no one di so. Later this promotion money, some $4000 was returned by the power company to the city.

A candidate for Mayor seemed destined to defeat until Cooper announced that he desired t see him elected. He went in by so big a plurality that, at the next congressional election h ran for the House. Cooper made no expressio as to the congressional election, and the Mayo did not succeed in his ambition to go to Washington.

Friday afternoon I stood beside the dam builde on the concrete wall of the Government lock, a the upper gates sank beneath the water to let large excursion steamer from Quincy pa through. The sole purpose of the crowded boa load was to go through the locks, visit Lak Cooper—so named by the War Department la month, after a score of proposed Indian name had been rejected—and return through the locks.

Some of the excursionists who recognized Cooper stepped off an[illegible]oke with him, and he pu them in a guide's [illegible]th instructions to show them around be[illegible]'s return. In th meantime he had [illegible]en [illegible]ed by three Keokuk business men and [illegible]y a party of visitin clergymen. FACTS ABOUT THE BIG KEOKUK DAM

COST $27,000,000. Time of construction, following small preliminary work, three years.

Power to be developed at generators, ultimately, 310,408 horsepower. Sold to St. Louis, 60,000 horsepower, to be supplied beginning July 1.

Mississippi's fall above dam, 23 feet in 12 miles.

Men employed at height of work, 2500.

Chief engineering features—Boat lock wide enough for two first-class steamers, with lower gate larger than any one gate in Gatun dam at Panama; 16-bucket turbines generating 10,000 horsepower each.

Transmission lines, south to St. Louis, 143 miles (by rail 178 miles); north to Burlington, Io., 40 miles. Other cities to share in power consumption, Quincy, Warsaw, Hamilton and Nauvoo, Ill., Keokuk, Montrose, Fort Madison, Io., and Hannibal, Mo.

SUICIDE A CRIME AGAINST OTHERS.

CHICAGO, June 19.—Despondent because his eyes had failed him just when he had conceived, after years of dreaming, the picture he hoped would make him famous, Carl Mauch, an artist, took poison and died from its effect. He was 63 years old and rapidly was losing his sight.

This pathetic item is only one of many indicating that the world is not taking its punishment very well these days. How often do we see failure, and honorable failure, linked with suicide. Reputable men, men of honor, who have nothing to apologize for in life, yet seek the most dishonorable and disreputable way out of it. Why should men whose efforts have admitted of no reproach and whose lives have been brave throughout become cowards at the close?

Self-murder is no cure for failure, disappointment, distress, misfortune or the adverse circumstances which no man can control. While it puts one person out of his or her misery, it lays or it increases the burden of woe upon others. Worse than all, it is the crime of murder—the actual murder of others.

The Chicago artist was a victim no doubt to a great degree of other murderers—unfortunate weaklings before him who killed themselves and left him the force of their example. There is no denying the power of suggestion bearing upon this particular crime. Countless suicides have established a grewsome precedent for disappointed genius. By example they have armed other men's failures and other men's defeats with deadly weapons.

Each victim who adds to the force of that example becomes himself a murderer of others. He is particeps criminis, an accessory before the fact. He helps conventionalize and standardize one of the most terrible of deeds, he undermines fortitude, he strikes, underhanded, insidiously, like a cowardly enemy, at the character, the ideals, the noblest traditions of the human race, at the same time that by his self-destruction he deals death to his brothers.

RAILROAD SABOTAGE.

Sweeping reductions in passenger service are said to be threatened by Missouri roads which are forced to lower fares to two cents. Trains of large convenience to the public are to be taken off, it is reported, and general facilities of travel brought down to standards below those to which the public has become accustomed under the old rates.

If any such program really is receiving serious consideration, it should be abandoned. A material lessening in service so soon after the decision and on the eve of the summer season of much travel would result in impressions from which the railroads would lose, not gain.

It would be a reprisal on the public because of the passage of a law having a strong support in public sentiment. It would be a dangerous indorsement by railroads, large employers of labor, of the I. W. W. principle, which leads workers, when an increase in wages to $3 is refused, to refrain from doing any more work than they themselves think is a return for $2 a day. Denied a higher rate of fare, the railroads purpose to give those whom they serve only what the managers themselves think is the equivalent of two cents a mile. It is a resort to sabotage on the part of the roads.

While the change involves difficult accounting and other problems, a competition among roads to be the first to put the two-cent rate into effect would cause a most agreeable impression. Railroads which appeal so often for court protection should set an example in prompt obedience to court mandates.

THE RACE FOR GETTYSBURG.

The race between nearly 90,000 men and 80,000 men for a goal which proved to be Gettysburg had reached an exciting stage just half a century ago.

For eight months the two armies had faced each other across the Rappahannock, disgraceful checkmate and murderous slaughter attending every attempt of incompetent Federal leaders to cross the river and attack. Then, on June 3, Lee left one infantry corps on watch and started west and north around Hooker's army with two corps. By June 8 he had reached Brandy Station and witnessed the spectacular review of Stuart's superb cavalry, newly equipped and newly mounted, which was hardly ended before Stuart was attacked, the picturesque battle between two forces of horsemen, each 12,000 strong, following. On June 13, Lee's purpose being divined, the whole Federal army started on a rush north. With its departure the remaining Confederates hurried after their leader.

Richmond was thus left undefended. Why did not the Federal army turn back and capture it? Hooker wished to, but Lincoln described the true situation when he wrote him that Lee's army, not Richmond, was the object of attack. It was at this time, too, that Lincoln wrote that if the tail of Lee's army had just left the river and the head was 70 miles away, "the animal must be pretty slim somewhere," and suggested breaking it in two. But the Federal army was also stretched to slimness in places. By June 16 it had reached Bull Run, marching over the graves of soldiers killed in former struggles there and through fields still strewn with battle wreckage.

A segment of a great kiteshaped track, on which the Federals had the pole, was the race course. To Gettysburg was hardly 125 miles in a straight line, but though Lee started first, he had to travel nearly 300 miles, or two miles to the Federal army's one, whose problem was always so to move as to keep between the enemy and Washington. With the units of the two armies scattered for miles along the parallel semicircles of their march, it was inevitable that sooner or later some units of one army would come into collision with units of the other and the race would end with the problem of rushing up other units in each army to help those engaged.

Gettysburg was where this happened. Confederates approaching the town, to commandeer, as is said, a needed supply of shoes, ran into a few Federals and the great fight began. A slight advantage in concentrating was with the Federals who were moving on the shorter line. Pickett, in fact, did not join Lee until after the second day's battle and his corps being fresh, was chosen for the great charge.

No other period of national suspense is comparable to that which, 50 years ago, lasted for three weeks, while the great race progressed during weather very similar to that of the present.

YALE'S LITTLE ENGLISH LESSON.

Yale came a bad cropper Friday in its little jaunt into Anglo-mania. In the annual regatta with Harvard, Yale teams, in English boats, with English oars, trained by English coaches and pulling an English stroke got a thrashing, the monotony of which was scarcely second to its severity.

Sadly enough, Eli Old Grads expected it. From the newspaper accounts it appears that all the Old Grad had to do was to observe that their coaches wore pink socks, said "My Word!" and drank tea. All that was left then was to put up one's excess change on the chance something would happen to the Harvard shell. The Yale oarsmen doubtless were sturdy enough. But it was almost certain that the Crimson coaches would be found rough, rancorous-voiced men—men who never saw a lavender sock outside a store window or a burlesque show, who affected ancient jerseys and frayed gymnasium suits, who knew little of the refreshing qualities of Oolong but much of the salubrity of Messrs. Liggett & Myers' choicest product. And how could anybody lick a gang of freshmen into shape without judicious use of the homely, but honest, vernacular of the American training camp?

One must agree with the Old Grad. It is a strange, puzzling matter. Can it be that Yale's history department quit with the early Victorian era? Are Yale students taught the nebular hypothesis and left in ignorance of the present location of the America's cup? Do they know who won the battle of Agincourt and not who won the last Olympiad? Have they read the annals of polo? What do they know of athletic records, from horse-shoe pitching to pugilism? English coaches! Shades of Martin Sheridan, Jim Thorpe, Kahanamoku, McDonald, Kiviat, Lindberg and Sam Langford!

UNSTANDARDIZED ENGLISH.

A committee of research having occasion to conduct correspondence with New York school teachers was amazed at the barbarous English and heathenish spelling of 10 per cent of the letters received. The sample deficiencies which these letters reveal are astonishingly widespread in this land of compulsory education. They appear in the most unexpected places, even in the writings of persons newly graduated from institutions of higher learning. Newspapers which, like the Post-Dispatch, are constantly in receipt of letters representing the literary attainments of the entire public are forced to conclude that there are few walks of life in which similar solecisms are not detected.

A fine old speech is English speech. What branch of study affords better mental training? What branch supplies a more practical preparation for the actual duties of life? Facile, simple expression is not a mere accomplishment. It is an asset in any employment, however humble, and an asset which universal means of education has placed in everybody's reach.

The language was long ago standardized. In the present craze for the standardization of all other things, why is it that so many show no ambition or aspiration above an unstandardized English? The experience in New York may explain the pathetic imperfections and disfigurements in the letters of the masses. If those whose profession it is to teach standardized English have no standards in speech, what can be expected of their pupils?

MORE THAN BOUNDARY LINES.

This is the final week for the winning of the $100 prize in the Contest for the Ten Best Reasons Why People Should Come to Missouri.

An interesting feature of the contest has been the number of letters that have come in, from former residents of the State, even as far away as the Pacific coast, giving reasons why the writers were coming back to "dear old Missouri."

It has sometimes been said that the boundary lines of a state or country are imaginary, fixed merely for political or administrative purposes. Some boundary lines may be of that character, but Missouri's are not. The meaning of boundary lines is determined by what they contain. And it is the incontrovertible fact that within the boundary lines of "good old Missouri" is packed the maximum of love for home, appreciation of opportunity, hospitality towards neighbors and strangers, alertness for progress, and public spirit. All this, in addition to its recognized material advantages, go to make a state that is unique and vital without regard to metes and bounds. Missouri is a community in the best sense. And she will give a cordial welcome to her returning sons and daughters, and to all who may come prepared to join her citizenship.

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

Order in the Philippines.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

I have no idea what manner of man wrote the article in your Friday's issue signed "Valley Forge," but in all my years, and they are past three score, I have never found so much rank sophistry in so few sentences. I do not care to defend what some call imperialism. I do not think there is an imperialist in America. But one thing is past quibbling over, and that is we have got the Philippines. We have got 'em and now what are you going to do about it? Turn them loose and let 'em go for each other or let Japan have them? "It is a condition, not a theory, that confronts us." The civilized world recognizes our rights and duties there and expects us to maintain at least a semblance of order and government in that archipelago. The Moro has no conception of liberty, except the liberty to slay and steal.

We are going to settle this question and settle it on a fair and just basis. Leave our men alone. They are Americans. They are not imperialists. When we turn this great archipelago over to the natives we will deliver them with clean hands. The sons of men who suffered at Valley Forge and fought at Gettysburg can be trusted to make the Malay respect the musket if he don't respect the law.

The Minimum Wage.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

I think the movement looking towards the establishment of a minimum wage both for men and women good. The various unions have done much and are trying to do more for the uplift of the wage-earner, but from the fact that their conception of wages being—that of the flat rate instead of the sliding scale—renders some of their efforts nearly useless. Experience teaches us that nature, early training and environment have much to do with what a man is worth in, say, a given trade. A tall man, an especially muscular man, an even-tempered man, a conscientious man, each in various positions have their special value. The flat rate of wages of unionism ignores this and that accounts for nearly all the repair work in building lines and much of the cheap homes for working people being done with nonunion labor. If the State places a scale of wages as a living wage where the middle-age man may work, if content to do so, at a less wage than when in husky youth and so not be entirely forcibly retired, it will be a gain all round.

I am at one with the writers for $9 a week wage for women.

The Railway Rate Decision.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

The decision of the Supreme Court of the United States, handed down the other day, gives the power to the State to name the rate at which passengers and freight are to be carried on their railroads.

Of course everybody knows that a railroad corporation is a creature of the State to a certain extent. But while this is true, the State never had the power, apparently, before, of fixing the rates and the fares by which the railroad companies can carry on their business and provide an income sufficient to meet all its obligations.

The State by this decision is made master of all the railroads in the most absolute sense of the word, and practically given control of all the roads within her borders on the most vital question—that of revenue.

How does it come that the Supreme Court of the United States has the power to confer on the State at this late date this most vital control? It seems that if this decision has to be carried by the railroads it will be the means of making every railroad in the State bankrupt.

On this same principle of the State dictating its freight and passenger rates to the railroads, every corporation which is in exactly the same sense a creature of the State, can be compelled to sell its wares, sugar, cotton, or anything else at a rate dictated by the State.

What Would a Minimum Wage Mean?

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

Would you or some of your readers answer the following questions? Would not the proposed law to increase and fix the minimum wages for women cripple the little merchant or manufacturer? Can these afford to pay the same wages as the big merchant? Would not the increase of wages revert on the consumer and the little merchant?

If the law can regulate and fix a minimum wage for women why does it not regulate the maximum wages for men and the profit of employers? Are not the above regulations the only means to reduce the high cost of living and to establish human rights on the base of justice to all men?

A Joyous Note.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

Joy to the world! The "doctor" and the "scientist" have come who tell us that we may bolt our meat (because dogs do) and that we may swallow our lunches in all haste. Not to mention the time saved, we save the awful dentist bills. This is a crowning triumph for science and medicine. No more grinding out teeth to fill; no more artificial teeth to sneeze out when we are in company. The teeth are practically useless—made for people through some error of nature. Let us be rid of our teeth as well as our appendixes. The coming man will have neither hair nor teeth, as he needs neither.

SOCRATES ON DEMOCRATIZING THE AUTOMOBILE.

Socrates: I was walking from my home over to the street car this morning when a gentleman in an electric automobile slowed down beside me and asked if I did not want to ride downtown with him. I replied that I would be very glad to do so, and climbed in. He informed me that he was Crites, the contractor, and that he disliked going downtown in his car alone. I replied that I was Socrates, and that riding in Capt. McCulloch's limousine, as I do, I did not know what the sensation of riding downtown alone might be, having never experienced it. He explained that it was one of extreme aloofness from one's fellow beings, and that it made him feel uncomfortably snobbish. I told him I was gratified to learn that some of the people with automobiles sometimes feel that way about it, and ventured the opinion that if the people who are without cars can be of any service in that respect they will no doubt gladly ride with anyone who invites them.

Polemarchus: I am sure I would be delighted.

Thrasymachus: And I. What street does he go down?

Socrates: It occurred to me as we tooled along that this Crites, of whom I have never heard, is probably setting a very good example in practical democracy. It did not strike me at the time that persons with automobiles are necessarily obligated to carry persons who have none, but there are possibilities in the idea, none the less, especially where the thing is done with the tact of Crites.

Thrasymachus: I think so. About what time was it he picked you up?

Polemarchus: I call it great. Did he say where he started from when he went home?

Socrates: Strangely enough, he had never heard of me, which was doubly encouraging.

Polemarchus: Doubling encouraging?

Socrates: Yes.

Polemarchus: In what way?

Socrates: He had thought of it himself.

WINE.

Green vineyards of Arcady's hills,
Where Zephyr lightly blows
The pigments that the vine distills—
To mate with blushing rose!
Fair vineyards of Arcady's fields—
There blooms the sun kiss'd vine,
There Spirit of the Sun that yields—
His golden nectar—wine!

Thou attar from the mystic East—
Scenting the dreamy air,
Thou strain of music from the feast
That breaks the bonds of Care!
Not Shylock hoardings—Croesus wealth,
May hope to vie with thine,
Nor crystal waters wake to health—
That sleeps in ruddy wine!

Thou Knight of Hope—to poet's soul,
Breaking his prison bars—
Thou spirit of his songs that roll
Symphonies to the stars!
Thou breath of Summer from the West —
Helicon's rarest vine;
Thou Rose of Sharon to his breast—
Hygeia's herald—wine!

Fly, prison'd!—to Hope's castle—fly!
'Midst grape embowered walls—
There flayers and the chainers die,
There Hell in ruin falls!
There shackles from the soul shall break,
There minstrel wastrels dine
And banquet with the gods who slake
Imperial thirst—in wine!

Come! Slave of Hunger! Thou shalt pass
Beyond gaunt poverty!
Take refuge in the sparkling glass
That blesses penury!
The fertile vine shall give thee dreams,
And sleep shall come benign,
To waft thee o'er Elysia's streams—
On purpl'd waves of wine!

MINISTER GREY, PEACEMAKER.

From the Washington Post.

The London Times holds that the civilized world owes a great debt of gratitude to the British Government in general and Sir Edward Grey in person for the signing of the treaty of peace between Turkey and the Balkan states. The Pall Mall Gazette searches history back to the long-forgotten treaty between Russia and Turkey in 1774 to find a parallel in "momentous importance," and yet both of these eulogists of Sir Edward are constrained to say that the treaty of London opens the door to further conflict which may bring on irretrievable disaster to victor and vanquished alike.

The continental press is chary of bestowing praise upon Sir Edward Grey for his achievement. The French newspapers regard the treaty as purely theoretical. The Germans are skeptical. The Turkish press points to the superficial character of the treaty, and declares that Turkey must conduct herself as if a state of war still continued. Market opinion of the significance of the treaty is reflected in the collapse of confidence and values in all the great centers, which has been attended by an unloading of American securities that bore more heavily on Wall street than the adverse influences on this side.

VIRGIL'S TOMB IN DANGER.

From the Boston Globe.

The tomb of Virgil is in danger of destruction. This has for centuries been one of the literary shrines in the neighborhood of Naples; whether the ashes of the poet were really placed there, no one can be sure. But it is in the region which he loved, and the tradition that names it his last resting place may easily be correct.

But the base of the hill has been honeycombed in recent years by quarriers of building stone; the work was done carelessly, and a few weeks ago, while all Naples was celebrating the feast of the liquification of St. Januarius' blood the whole side of the hill collapsed, leaving the tomb perched on a shaky pinnacle of rock.

JAPANESE LONGEVITY SOCIETY.

From the Manchester Guardian.

A curious society has recently been inaugurated by Count Okuma, the former Japanese Premier. It is called "Hyakunun-Kai," or the Society of Centenarians. Count Okuma, who believes that under proper conditions we ought be able to live for 125 years, is its first president. In reality persons of 80 years and over are eligible for membership. About 500 members met at its first assembly at the Count's house. The oldest person present was a woman of 113, who traveled a long distance specially to Tokyo to meet her fellow centenarians.

Railroad Problem Must Be Faced.

From the Springfield Republican.

It will have to be recognized that the railroad question is taking its place alongside of the tariff and the currency as of great immediate importance. In some way Congress must be made to see its duty as related to the large situation. President Wilson has plenty of work on hand, but in due time the administration will have to make a thorough study of the railroad question. But before that stage is reached it will be in order to permit an increase in freight rates.

HOUSEHOLD HELPS.

D. M. C.—Keep the soil of ferns always damp, but do not let it get sodden. Very wet soil soon becomes sour. Keep the foliage dry, letting the plant drink through the roots. Water for ferns should be tepid. Do not put tender ferns outside in rains; if you do, their fronds will be beaten down. The best time to pot native ferns for indoor culture is when they are just beginning to come forth in the spring. The root may then be divided without great danger to their flourishing. Pot in soil as nearly as possible like that native to the fern. Do not expect a maidenhair fern to thrive in the ordinary soil in which a geranium would find itself at home. When the roots of ferns have matted into a root ball that fills the pot, turn out the fern, loosen the root-fiber, and replace in a larger pot. Repotting from time to time from small pots to larger ones is better than to start a small fern in a pot many times too large for it, in the expectation that it will grow into it. The larger your ferns become, the less repotting they will require. Always use the cleanest pots, soaking the new pots in water first for several hours, so that they may thus slake their thirst and not rob the newly potted ferns of any of their precious soil-moisture. In repotting transplant ferns from a 3-inch pot to a 4½ inch, from a 4½ inch to a 6-inch, from a 6-inch to an 8-inch, from an 8-inch to an 11-inch, and so on. Pots are designated by the measurements taken across the inside of the pot, at the top.

P. A. D.—For ice cream, have the ice pounded quite fine, thereby involving less labor in turning the freezer, and thus securing a smooth, velvety cream. The quickest and best way is to pound the ice in a burlap bag. Tie the mouth to prevent the ice escaping while it is being vigorously pounded with a flat-headed hammer or mallet. Be lavish in the use of salt. Have the ice and salt well packed around the can before the mixture is put in, and be very careful that there is no possible chance of the salt or water getting into the can. When ice cream is wanted in blocks or cakes, a special mold will be needed. The mold should always be set in ice and salt while the cream is being frozen; as soon as the beater or mixer is removed, the frozen cream should be packed into the molds as quickly as possible. Press the cream down smoothly and firmly, lay a piece of stout muslin or waxed paper over the top and then put on the cover. Pack in fresh ice and salt and let stand several hours before using. Two quarts and one pint of pure cream will, when frozen, nearly fill a 4-quart freezer. The Baltimore News says: When freezing, fill the freezer as usual with ice and salt. When the ice melts down, however, pack damp newspapers tightly as possible up to the very top. This keeps the cold air from escaping, and it is surprising in how short a time the freezing process is finished. When packing the ices to ripen, pack with a layer of ice and salt, then a thick layer of damp newspapers, and so on, having a newspaper layer on top. This method takes just about half the usual quantity of ice.

The dog [illegible] of the Egyptians extended from [illegible] 4 to Sept. 14. The rising of Sirius, however, has been so accelerated by the procession of the equinoxes during the passage of more than 2000 years that the corresponding conditions for the ancient dog days would not include them within July 3 and Aug. 11, so that our modern dog days have no connection with the rising of Sirius or any other star, but the name still holds for the hot, humid days which we call dog days. The rails travel 22 inches in 24 hours, 669.5 feet in a year. Seventeen miles of single rails have crossed the bridge since it was opened in 1874, or enough rails to lay a track from St. Louis to Kirkwood. One rail (33 feet long) crosses in two years and seven months. The track advances the length of one rail every three weeks. Eighty-one and a third rails pass over every year, and 2,765.34 rails have passed over since it was built.

SEED PEARL.—The earliest theory of the production of pearls was that they are congealed dewdrops, though no explanation was given of the manner in which the dew got into the shells of the oyster. Another early notion was that pearls are the eggs of the oyster; the difficulty connected with this view being the extreme paucity of pearl-bearing shells. The Chinese were the first to solve the problem and to find out that pearls are due to the irritation produced by the introduction of a particle of foreign matter, such as a grain of sand, into the shell of the oyster. This bit of irritating matter is coated by the oyster with nacre like that with which the shell is lined and the result is a pearl. The artificial production of pearls in this manner is carried on by the Chinese and Japanese to a considerable extent. The shells of the bivalve are separated gently and a small bit of mud or a tiny piece of lead is inserted under the flesh to serve as a nucleus for the pearl. The shells are then allowed to close and the oysters are placed carefully in a stream of water and fed on manure. After a proper interval the shells are opened and the nuclei, now coated with nacre, are removed. The nucleus is generally taken out and the cavity filled up with wax. In one of the provinces of Japan a large area at the bottom of the sea is devoted to the artificial production of pearls by oysters, four years being allowed for the process. Though the pearls produced in this way are not as fine as those found naturally in the oyster, they still possess beauty enough to be salable. The artificially produced pearls are not so beautiful nor so well-shaped as the natural ones, and their under side generally lacks luster entirely. Though this makes them unsuitable for necklaces, they can be used in other articles of personal ornament, where the whole pearl is not seen. Such pearls can hardly be termed "artificial," for they are genuine, though the method of production is not wholly natural. Yet, though the process is started artificially, it is carried on in a strictly normal, natural manner.

FABIAN WOMEN LEADERS WIN PARTIAL SUFFRAGE IN ILLINOIS LEGISLATURE

Votes for women gained in first state east of the Mississippi and United States Senate Committee reports favoring an amendment to the constitution granting the ballot to all without regard to sex.

ILLINOIS' Legislature gave women the ballot in all elections over which the Legislature has authority. The Constitution prescribes the qualifications for voters in elections of State officers; but as it does not prohibit women voting for county and municipal officers and presidential electors the Legislature is assumed to have power to grant this privilege.

Limited Woman Suffrage.

Boston Globe: American suffragists won a notable victory east of the Mississippi when the House of Representatives in Illinois, following the example of the Senate, passed a limited woman suffrage bill Wednesday by a vote of 83 to 58. Mothers, sisters, wives and sweethearts will have the right to cast ballots for all statutory officers, including Mayors and Aldermen, also presidential electors. They cannot vote for Governor without a constitutional amendment.

The Illinois fight was a hard fight to a finish, and it is therefore pardonable, as well as human, for the suffragists to be elated over the result.

Suffrage by Amendment.

Los Angeles Express: The winning of Illinois to the principle of equal suffrage, through the very recent passage of a bill granting as complete enfranchisement as was possible without amending the State Constitution, is welcomed as the beginning of a general collapse of the opposition.

It even appears possible that the full triumph of the cause may be very greatly hastened as the result of a general constitutional amendment passed by Congress in the form of a resolution ratified by the necessary three-fourths of the states.

An Amazing Victory.

Cleveland Leader: Of all the victories which woman suffrage has won the most astonishing is the passage of a law in Illinois which grants equal suffrage in all municipal elections and gives women the right to vote for presidential electors.

In view of the recent suffrage defeats in the adjacent states of Michigan and Wisconsin, where the adverse majorities were very large, it is an astonishing thing that the State dominated, in great degree, by Chicago, should give women full municipal suffrage without submitting that question to the direct vote of the people. In this respect the victory won for equal rights at the polls is the most remarkable ever gained by the advocates of woman suffrage. No one could have guessed that Illinois would be the first State situated east of the Mississippi to let women vote for presidential electors.

In view of this record made by the Illinois Legislature it is manifestly unsafe to assert that any triumph of equal suffrage is impossible. Tammany Hall may yet espouse and champion this cause. It may sweep Milwaukee.

The Votes for Women Amendment.

New York Tribune: Nobody in Washington could have been surprised that the Senate Committee on Woman Suffrage reported an amendment to the Constitution giving women the suffrage. The committee was purposely composed of Senators friendly to the suffragist cause, since four of its nine members come from states in which women now vote and one other member, Mr. Clapp of Minnesota, was affiliated in the last national campaign with the Progressive party, which has made votes for women one of its leading issues. Yet for all that the report is a signal encouragement to the suffragists.

It may or may not be significant that the committee's plan for altering the Constitution takes the form of an entirely new article, instead of an amendment to article 15. It would have been just as effective to insert the word "sex" in the present fifteenth amendment, which already provides that the right of the citizens of the United States to vote shall not be denied or abridged by the United States or by any State on account of race, color or previous condition of servitude. This guarantee has been made a dead letter in many of the states, and it was perhaps thought prudent not to attach a further extension of the franchise by Federal authority to extensions made 43 years ago, but never carried honestly into effect in a large part of the Union.

Victory May Be Barren.

Pittsburg Dispatch: The Illinois suffrage amendment got stuck with other amendments. Its supporters cast about for some means of getting around the difficulty. They found that there are certain offices, not specifically named in the State Constitution, varying from presidential electors down to county collector. The theory was adopted that the Constitution did not define the qualification of voters for these offices, and the bill was drawn granting suffrage to women for all offices not named in the Constitution.

It is quite doubtful whether this may not turn out a barren victory in law. The intentions of the legislators were honorable, but their power under a construction at all strict will be very questionable.

Whether anyone will take the trouble to contest the constitutionality of the law is an undecided question. But if the suffragists want to make their status beyond dispute, the first use of their new votes should be to put the constitutional amendment through the Legislature and get it ratified by the people.

The Illinois Mix Up.

Boston Herald: It will be interesting to see how Illinois' experiment in woman suffrage works. Women may there vote for President, but not for members of Congress or of the State Legislature. They may vote for mayors and other municipal officers, but not for Governors and others on the State ticket. All this is very lopsided, illogical and even fantastic.

Perhaps participation in the ballot will be so small that these privileges will gradually suffer atrophy. But if really exercised and the presidential ballot would seemingly suffice to enlist interest, the State is not likely long to continue so one-sided a system. It cannot remain half suffrage and half anti-suffrage.

Suffrage Crosses the Mississippi.

Washington Times: What is once gained for the cause of woman suffrage is never thereafter lost to it. Give half the population the ballot, and the chance of taking it away with the consent of that half is decidedly unimportant.

What they once gain, therefore, the women hold. Their latest victory is in Illinois, where the Legislature has passed the law to grant women the vote on all statutory offices. That is, they may vote for all places provided for under the laws rather than the Constitution. Illinois cities are organised under charters granted by law; so the women may vote in municipal elections, though they may not vote for Governor. Likewise, the selection of presidential electors is provided for by law of the State; therefore the women will have the vote for President.

A Fabian Victory.

Detroit News: The Illinois women, in getting the right to vote for President and other specific offices through the act of the Legislature, are congratulating themselves that they "do not have to appeal to 50,000 voters who do not speak English in order to win the suffrage at the polls." Which is one way of extending the ballot. And our old and trusted scamp, Representative Lee O'Neil Browne of Lorimer scandal fame, was the spokesman of the antis. Well, well, how the world moves!

Repeal Improbable.

Cleveland Plain Dealer: The fight for woman's suffrage in Ohio last year was fought on constitutional grounds and the suffragists lost. Illinois becomes a semi-suffrage State and the State constitution has not been touched. That is, in Illinois women become eligible to vote for all statutory offices—offices not recognized specifically by organic law.

Their victory is important from every standpoint. The suffragists, in the face of so much gained, will not repine because they have missed getting full and complete rights at the polls.

Illinois has no referendum law, the present session of the Assembly having consistently refused to enact one. The only attack possible against the suffrage law, therefore, is either in the courts or in the Legislature itself. It is wholly improbable that the act will be repealed; what some court may do is, of course, beyond conjecture.

McAdoo's Big Bomb

"THERE is a perceptible better feeling in business circles," the Post-Dispatch said editorially, "since Secretary McAdoo called Wall street's hand by announcing that he had $500,000,000 to distribute among the banks whenever they wanted it under the terms of the Aldrich-Vreeland emergency currency act. He blocked the game of the bankers and tin-horn gamblers to control the money market and make large profits on the money stringency caused by Europe's war needs and the liquidation of American securities held by Europeans."

A Mighty Impulse.

Washington Post: Secretary McAdoo's reassuring statement relative to invoking the Vreeland emergency currency law in the event that financial conditions should reach a critical stage, had a decidedly tonic effect on Wall street and the investment world in general, where the fact that a reserve of $500,000,000 was available to tide over a critical period appears to have been forgotten.

Even though the windfall of emergency currency had not come when it did, there was no sound reason for thinking that things would get beyond control. Money is being released from deposit vaults by reason of the fall in prices in amounts sufficient to meet any legitimate demands in prospect. Nevertheless, Secretary McAdoo's announcement is no less timely and potential, since it supplies the factor that was lacking—a mighty impulse that steam rollered the mountain of doubt.

A Heavy Infusion of New Blood.

Detroit Free Press: Secretary McAdoo's announcement that he would not hesitate to issue emergency currency under the Aldrich-Vreeland act to any banks making application and qualifying may prove to be a shrewd political move on the part of the Wilson administration. There can hardly be a doubt that the long-continued dullness in the stock markets has been having an unfortunate influence on the prestige of the Democratic regime. Belittle Wall street as one may, a very large number of people still consult its daily quotations on the course of the figures they see there. If the stagnant blood of our financial system can be set running vigorously through the arteries by a fillip of this kind the public's mental depression will be dissipated and activity will replace sluggishness everywhere, while a prolonged continuance of the sort of listlessness that has been so long in evidence among financiers is bound to work grave effects in the existing strain of carrying heavy railroad burdens.

"Busted" a Deep Laid Scheme.

Los Angeles Express: The campaign was proceeding along accustomed lines, with the evident intent to produce an artificial panic, break down prices, and provide opportunity for those concerned in the conspiracy to take over at panic prices stocks and bonds frightened investors would be compelled to sacrifice. The announcement made by the Secretary of the Treasury that he was prepared to issue emergency currency fell upon the "street" with something of the same force that accompanied the declaration of the Secretary of the Treasury in the frenzied days of speculation in gold, that the Government was prepared to sell gold. There was a rush to buy; banks that had been hoarding cash far in excess of their required reserves hastened to release their hoardings, and the stringency disappeared. It is worthy of note that one bank, recognised as a Standard Oil institution, had accumulated $[illegible] in cash beyond its legal requirements and that it, too, made haste to put out its hoarding money—discounting commercial paper.

Currency Reform

SO much has been printed indicating the line which the administration's currency reform bill will take that it is believed that the public has a fair understanding of the "working basis" bill. The President has said that when the bill is offered it will not be in complete form, but will contain only the essential elements which the administration's policy dictates.

Wilson's Hardest Task.

Boston Herald: Currency and capital are two different things. Currency is merely the vehicle, or the agent, of exchange. It should rise and fall in volume, according to the needs of trade, and with the seasonal changes, just as does every other agency of the business world, and just as does the currency system of every other civilized nation on earth. This is all very axiomatic. But if Mr. Wilson can bring a proper currency system to pass, his achievement will be monumental. And he can do this if he can keep his own party oracles from raving like wild men against any comprehensive measure of a modern or scientific character, as they habitually do under Republican administration. Mr. Wilson, in preparing for the struggle with them, is entitled to the helpful support of the saner element of the community—and that he is sure to get if his bill proves reasonably satisfactory.

To Reduc[illegible]ation.

New York Herald: The present system by which "country banks" are permitted to keep a portion of their reserve funds on deposit in reserve cities instead of in their own vaults, and the banks in "reserve cities" are in turn permitted to keep part of their reserves in "central reserve" cities is mischievous. It was intended to give a certain fluidity and elasticity to the volume of circulating medium.

As a matter of fact this contributes to the concentration of funds in dull periods in the large centers, where the plethora promotes unwholesome speculation, and the sudden withdrawal of the money when needed by the country banks in the crop moving season or to meet other local demands necessitates imperative contraction of loans and resulting stringency and disturbance. The proposed bill, so far as its terms are known, would seem designed to guard against this evil, and if experience counts for anything an additional safeguard will be provided by prohibiting the banks at the big centers from paying interest upon deposits of country banks.

Where Do They Differ?

Detroit Free Press: So much publicity was given the new currency bill in advance, so many semi-official outlines and "authorised" digests found their way into print, that the public knows pretty well what its contents are without waiting for the introduction into Congress of the genuine and only recognised copy. We shall undoubtedly hear now of the wonderful ingenuity exhibited by the Democrats who drafted the new plan, of its far-reaching provisions for protecting the interests of the common people and the stern rebuff delivered to the iniquitous Wall street gangsters, of the greatly superior methods adopted in comparison with the naughty Aldrich bill. But the ordinary man who sits down to study the present measure and to compare it with the one which the preceding Congress failed to pass, will be inclined to rub his eyes and ask in amazement where the plans differ in essence.

YANKEE WOMEN'S GOWNS WIN 'ASCOT WEEK' HONORS

Lady Newborough Greatest "Costume Success", Mrs. Bingham Is Called to Royal Box to Be Complimented by the Queen, and Lady Granard Is Guest at Windsor—Mrs. McMillan of St. Louis Wears Marvelous Outfit of Lace With Pink Peacock Feathers on Huge Lace Hat.

WINDSOR, England, June 21.—"Royal Ascot" drew this week a greater multitude than even, and, in the radiant weather, the marvelous dress display, representing millions of dollars, produced a dazzling effect. But the old sporting element deplores the fact that the competition nowadays is not between the horses on the racetrack, but between the costumes of the women on the lawn in the royal inclosure.

There was a bewildering array of beauty, of form and of color, but it was noted that the most fashionable, most famous dressers have copied the self-conscious motions and graces of the mannequin or model. Occasionally a string of gorgeously attired women could be seen parading past the royal box, walking—or rather, sliding and wriggling—along in exactly the same way the "Come Over Here" show girls emphasize the attractiveness of their anatomy as they amble on the plank at the London Opera House.

One lady aroused exceptional attention on Thursday. Beautiful in face and form, exquisitely attired and walking alone down the center of the inclosure in a justifiable way, she riveted the gaze of the men, and even rival women turned to look after her. Althugh lovely enough to command admiration she was unaware that her unique success was due to an accident. Her filmy dress had got caught up high behind revealing perfectly shaped limbs in what is known to the stage as "pink fleshings." No one called her attention to this until a uniformed lackey blushingly stepped forward and did so. Then, while hundreds of eyes stared, the lady shook down her skirt without showing the slightest embarrassment or concern.

American Stars in Royal Enclosure.

Of course American women were prominent in the court of dressy beauties.

Lady Newborough (who was Grace Carr of Kentucky, and is a sister of Mrs. Cecil Bingham), would be worth a fortune to any Paris modiste because of her gift for showing clothes and hats to fascinating advantage. She was the greatest "costume success" of the meeting. Her gown was of oyster satin, draped with rare old black lace in points reaching below her knees, with a large emerald clasp holding the gold belt, and yellow, white and red roses on one shoulder. Her hat was of the bonnet variety and weighted with a dozen or more roses of the same shade. Her shoes and stockings were rose color.

She was in the inclosure with Prince Alexander of Teck, Count Albert Mensdorf, the Austrian Ambassador, and Mrs. Marshall Field. She lunched with Countess Pappenheim (May Wheeler of Philadelphia), whose party also included Lady Diana Manners and Mrs. William Northrup McMillan of St. Louis. The latter wore a marvelous gown of lace arranged as a shawl over her shoulders and huge pink peacock feathers in her large lace hat. Pretty Miss Helen Goudy of Chicago was also in this party. She wore an enormous black velvet hat, a Paris craze just now. It was becoming, but looked as if it was dreadfully hot under the blazing sun.

On cup day Mrs. John Jacob Astor was specially invited to the royal box by the Queen, who sent the Duke of Connaught for her. Her gown of pale pink charmeuse was exquisitely draped to her figure, with deep cape lace falling over the shoulders to waist, and a cluster of three pink roses catching the lace in front of the V-cut neck, partially filled in with pink tulle and a single row of large pearls, her only jewelry. Her hat was of Tuscan straw, lined with black and trimmed with a single bunch of roses. One side showed up her beautiful white hair and complexion. It was a perfect costume and excited universal admiration.

Mrs. August Belmont (Eleanor Robson) wore a beautiful gown of hand-embroidered muslin patterned in grapes outlined in eau de Nile silk, a loose green chiffon scarf fell around her shoulders and her large hat was smothered in pink and red roses.

Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt, who lunched with the party in the guards' tent, wore a steel gray gown intricately worked with steel beads, the corsage almost hidden in lace and a large cluster of mauve orchids held at the waist by a diamond buckle and pin. Her hat was mounted with clusters of wistaria and a tulle bow. Her parasol of the pagoda fashion, had wistaria flowers arranged in bunches around the brim and long mauve ribbons hung from the pearl and mauve enamel handle.

Mrs. Glasswood of New York, also in the inclosure, wore one of the latest fashions, the wired tunic gown of pure white. With this new wide tunic of lace swinging around her at every step, a knot of purple flowers was the only color of note.

The Countess of Granard (Beatrice Mills of New York) wore a white lace gown with a deep black belt and mauve orchids on her large black hat.

Queen Sticks to Her Own Style.

Queen Mary is reported to have remarked that she disliked these fashions, but admitted that they are "interesting." As usual, she wore loosely flowing garments of blue, with the inevitable straight-brimmed hat, covered with corn flowers, colored feathers of the fashion of six years ago.

She invited Mrs. Cecil Bingham to the royal box and complimented her on her lovely costume, which was entirely of black, with moire skirt and all-around panniered draperies in voluminous billows reaching from the waist almost to the knees. Her bodice was tight fitting, with only a touch of lace and there was a single red rose at the waist. She carried her usual pagoda parasol, a fashion started by her two months ago, but not taken up until race week. She lunched with an interesting party, including Lady Alastair Innes-Ker (Anne Breese of New York), who wore black charmeuse, draped about the feet, the upper part of the gown being entirely of fine lace.

Lady Alastair has a house at Windsor and entertained a small party.

The Countess of Granard, who canceled her dinner engagements owing to being in mourning, took her place in the royal procession and spent a good deal of time each day chatting with the Queen, who finds American women easier to get on with than her own countrywomen, as the latter reciprocate her shyness. The Countess occupied a charming suite of rooms in Windsor Castle overlooking the hundred steps and Eton College. In this suite are a huge sitting-room, which is very modernly furnished, in contrast with the bedroom, with its quaint half-glass door shielded with silk curtains, a bed in one corner reached by steps and a dressing table in another corner This is one of the favorite suites for royal intimates and has the added charm of being supposed to be haunted by one of the Henrys.

On the night of Lady Granard's arrival the Queen paid a visit to her before dinner and sat with her by a large window, discussing the season. The Queen loves the castle. On a previous occasion she took the Countess all over,, asking her opinion about various changes. Her Majesty arranged that the Countess' favorite flowers, lilies of the valley and deep crimson roses, should be placed in her rooms each mrning. Flowers are provided for all the guests, but only this American lady's taste was consulted.

Latest photograph of the New Queen of Greece, who also is the Kaiser's sister, and four American women whose beautiful costumes constituted a conspicuous feature of Ascot week in England.

KENTUCKY MARCHIONESS UNHAPPILY WED, PLANS AN OPERATIC CAREER

As Virginia Hoge, a Louisville Beauty, She Was Studying Music in Rome When She Met the Rich Italian Aristocrat Who Wooed and Won Her Without Asking a Dowry.

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch and New York World.

Copyright, 1913, by Press Pub. Co. (New York World.)

ROME, Italy, June 21.—Marchioness San Germano, American born and bred, is awaiting the final decree of divorce for which her husband, Italian aristocrat, millionaire and distinguished also as a man of remarkable personal attractions, sued in Hungary after she had obtained legal separation under the Italian law, which does not recognize absolute divorce. When her legal affairs are settled she will sing in opera.

The Marchioness consented to tell her story to the Post-Dispatch correspondent. As she advanced to meet him, he recognized in her a pure type of Southern beauty (she was born in Richmond, Va.), a blonde, with chestnut hair and delicately molded features; a presence that gives the indefinable sense of breeding inborn, not acquired; a frank, unconstrained manner which makes it less difficult to approach the thorny subject of a matrimonial shipwreck.

She comes of the oldest and best stock to be found in the Southern States. Charters to her ancestors from the Stuart Kings are still preserved in the family records. Her father, the Rev. Dr. Peyton H. Hoge, was pastor of the Warren Memorial Church at Louisville, Ky. His father was co-pastor with the Rev. Dr. Springer of the famous Brick Church, New York.

"We were desperately in love," the Marchioness began. "I needn't go into our courtship beyond saying that I first met my husband when I came to study voice production in Rome nearly eight years ago. We met casually at the house of a friend, and it was a case of love at first sight. I was a very young girl, and it was my first real affection. The Marquis followed me to the States and we were married by my own father in Louisville in 1906. After a brief honeymoon we returned to Italy to settle in the castle which my husband owns at Arpino in Caserta. It is a magnificent property, and I was surrounded by servants, carriages and every luxury that wealth could bring. But it was a short dream of happiness.

"The Other Woman" Wrecks Her Home.

"After a while my husband began to be much away from home on business and I got very lonely. He had a great deal to do with the management of his estates, and this often kept him from me all day. We had always had so many friends and guests before that the solitary life began to tell upon me and I gradually came to the belief that we were not congenial to each other. But it was only after three years of married life that the crash came, which so often happens much earlier in international marriages.

"We went to the seaside for my little daughter's health. It was the old story on his part, 'the woman tempted me, and I did eat.' A wife's instinct never errs. I knew there must be some reason for the change I felt inwardly in my husband's attitude toward me. I was only too soon enlightened.

"At that time I received word that my father was ill and I wanted to be near him. The result can easily be guessed. When I returned there was no attempt to conceal the truth. This woman was determined to get him; to marry him, partly from a blind passion, but chiefly for his money and his position. And I felt that with my best jewels gone and my pride outraged I had nothing to do but to accept the situation. So I decided on suing for a separation.

"Divorce is not recognized by the Italian law, but I could not leave things in their actual state. I had little difficulty in obtaining a judicial separation, and, declining to accept an allowance for myself, I obtained a capital sum to start me afresh in life and an allowance for our little daughter.

Repentant Husband Wants Reconciliation.

"The next step was forseen. The Marquis wanted to marry this woman, or rather, she wanted to marry him, and he got over the difficulty in the usual way. He went to Hungary and took out letters of naturalization, thus enabling him to seek a judicial decree under Hungarian law. How far his remarriage will remain legal here is not a question for me to decide."

"My husband now repents his false step and would like to bring about a reconciliation, but I have refused."

BAVARIAN ROYAL FAMILY PAYING FOR WAGNER MUSIC

BERLIN, June 21.—The cost of popularising Wagner's music still weighs heavily on the Bavarian royal family, as is instanced by the request of the Regent, Prince Ludwig, to the Keeper of the Privy Purse to negotiate a sale of the site of the famous New Pinakothek (modern art gallery to the State) for $225,000.

The Bavarian royal family has never recovered from the debts incurred by mad King Ludwig II, patron of Wagner.

KIPLING IS QUEEN'S CHOICE FOR LAUREATE

King Is on His Side, Too, but the Premier Is Likely to Bar Him as a Pernicious Partisan.

LONDON, June 21.—The literary world is busily discussing the question of a successor to Alfred Austin in the laureateship.

Queen Mary strongily favors Rudyard Kipling's claims and so does King George. The Unionist party undoubtedly would support his candidacy, but Premier Asquith holds the general Liberal view that Kipling is too pronounced a partisan for the office.

Thomas Hardy is being urged by an influential set having Clement Shorter as spokesman. Although Hardy is not known as a poet, it is thought that, if a man of his standing desires the post, he would confer distinction upon it. His chief claim to be considered of laureate caliber is his colossal epic, entitled "The Dynasts," which has only been read by poets and literary men, although his novels are perhaps more popular than those of any author now living.

Kipling is taking no active part in pushing his own claim, but it is known through his friends that he is a candidate; indeed, there is a rumor that he had written a satirical poem on the Marconi affair, scoring the Government, but withheld publication when the laureateship came into the market.

William Watson, who wrote for The New York World's jubilee number the remarkable poem, "To the Invincible Republic," is regarded as the best equipped for the post of laureate of all who are mentioned, and he has intimated that he would accept it, but Asquith would be more than human if he sought to honor the author of "The Woman With the Serpent's Tongue," in which poem his wife was so cruelly defamed four years ago.

WIDOW EXPLAINS MATCH WITH ALICE THAW'S EARL

LONDON, June 21.—Mrs. Mossoockle, who is soon to be married to Lord Hertford, who was Alice Thaw's first hsuband, has taken occasion to contradict the statement that she inherited the whole of her husband's fortune. She says she merely took a wife's share in a case of intestacy.

She also wants it understood that the difference in the ages of Lord Hertford and herself is not so great. As she was "quite young" when she married her first husband, she is not so very much older than he. This is a hit at the newspapers that have represented her as being about 15 years older than her fiance.

COUNT WHO USED ALPHABET AS RACE HORSE NAMES DEAD

PARIS, June 21.—Comte de Berteux, one of the best known racing men in France is dead. Several years ago he became disgusted with the effort to get original names for racing horses and began naming those in his stable after letters of the alphabet. A few months ago he reached E the second time. He was an intimate friend of King Edward of England.

FUTURE EMPEROR OF AUSTRIA IS DEMOCRATIC

Archduke Charles Goes to Drummers' Hotel at Teplitz and With His Wife Enjoys Looking in Shop Windows.

TEPLITZ, Bohemia, June 21.—Archduke Charles Francis Joseph, who is to be Emperor of Austria and Hungary after his great-uncle, the Emperor Francis Joseph, and his uncle, Archduke Francis Ferdinand, recently arrived here with his young wife, Princess Zita of Bourbon, to undergo a "bathing cure" for four weeks.

Emperor William I of Germany came to Teplitz in 1877 to get cured after having been shot at by Nobiling, but since then Teplitz has had no imperial visitor for the "cure."

The municipality placed the two fine bath palaces, the Elizabethbad and the Kaiserbad, at the disposal of the future Emperor, and great preparations were made for his reception. But, to the amazement of the townspeople, the Archduke declined the offer with thanks, and declared that he preferred to stay in the Alten Rathhaus, an old hotel on the market place, which is patronised mostly by commercial travelers and manufacturers. Several years ago the Archduke was a lieutenant of dragoons, stationed in a little village 10 miles from Teplitz, and he remembered that he had been served with good dinners at the Alten Rathhaus. So he decided to take the future Empress to that inn. Eleven rooms were placed at the service of the imperial guests and their suite, and a little winter garden adjoining the apartment of the Princess was added.

They Are Fond of Window Shopping.

Teplitz is a manufacturing town and is joined to Schoenau, the latter being, as a rule, considered the "bath town."

After taking a simple breakfast at 8 a. m., the Archduke and Archduchess walk through the business part of the town to Schoenau, about a mile away, and then walk back again, taking luncheon at home in the little garden behind the hotel in the midst of commercial travelers. On Sundays the market place is generally filled with miners and factory hands, who come to town to enjoy themselves. Tuesdays and Fridays market is held under the windows of the future Emperor's apartments.

A few days after the arrival the Archduke and his wife expressed satisfaction with the place and said they felt quite comfortable. But when one day nearly 5000 laborers crowded the market place the Archduke and Archduchess left the hotel by a back door and went to Elizabethbad.

The Archduke and Archduchess often gaze in the shop windows and talk with people during their walks, especially those who are in soldiers' uniforms. But it is considered a grave violation of etiquette to speak to the royal pair without having been spoken to first.

Gathering Place for Aristocracy.

The Archduke is accompanied by Col. Prince Lobkowitz as aid-de-camp, and the Archduchess by Countess Nostitz-Rieneck as lady-in-waiting. Nearly every day members of the highest aristocracy arrive to pay homage to the future Emperor and Empress.

Recently Prince Lobkowitz, Count and Countess Waldstein, Prince and Princess Hohenlohe, Princess Lobkowitz, with her two daughters, and Count Westphalen arrived.

On Sunday the Post-Dispatch correspondent was taking a walk in Saume Park and saw a snapshop taken of the Archduke and Archduchess. The next day both were looking at that and two other photographs displayed in the window of a stationer's shop. On the same day the Archduke was very fortunate as a hunter; he killed four roebucks in four shots, one at a distance of 180 paces.

Muriel Redley's Tea Shop a Big Success.

LONDON, June 21.—Muriel Redley, the beautiful and talented girl who leaped into fame as the nun in Rheinhardt's "Miracle," opened a tea shop on Bond street when summer dullness struck the theaters. It is charmingly furnished and decorated and has been so successful that she intends to keep it going even when she is called back to the stage.

QUEEN SOPHIA DRIVEN FROM ATHENS BY HEAT

ATHENS, June 21.—Queen Sophia has been driven by the almost unprecendented heat to take the youngest of her six children on a cruise on the royal yacht, but owing to the unsettled conditions of the country the yacht keeps within an hour of port.

Queen Sophia, the third of Emperor William's four sisters, married the then Duke of Sparta in Athens, Oct. 27, 1889. Her eldest child, Crown Prince George, is 23, and the youngest a daughter, is a baby of 7 weeks, there being nine years between her birth (12 days before King George was assassinated) and that of the next older child.

During the Balkan war the new Queen took a very active part in looking after the welfare of the wounded Greek soldiers.

WOMAN OF 93 SENTENCED TO JAIL FOR STEALING

LONDON, June 21.—Elisabeth Burgess, 93 years old, small and fragile, was charged at Mansfield with trying to steal a purse in the market place. It was testified that the woman had a very bad record and has spent more than a third of her life in jail. Efforts had been made to get her into a Salvation Army home, but she said she preferred prison. She was given her wish. The woman is still quite active and hopes to live as long as her father, who was 110 when he died.

MUST RECARVE STATUE TO REMOVE SUFFRAGETTE TAR

LONDON, June 21.—It has been found that tar stains put by suffragettes on the Lord Derby statue in Miller Park, Preston, cannot be removed by chemicals. A skilled marble worker is to recarve the affected portions of the statue.

SOCIETY

Lambert-Busch Wedding the One Social Topic for the Stay-at-Homes in the Society World.

WEATHER of a distinctly summer variety is having its expected effect on society in so far as it is checking all activtly, but that which unavoidably attaches to the usual mid-June rush to leave the city and get into the open.

For a few weeks, at least, the social record of many St. Louis families will be written at the seaside, the northern lake resorts and eastern estates in the hills of old New England and along the Maine coast.

Of course we have the stay-at-homes always with us and it is a blessing that it is so. Otherwise it might be necessary to say of society news as Sairy Gamp said of Mrs. Harris: "There ain't no such person."

Still the week just closed was not absolutely uneventful.

There was the wedding of Mrs. Florence Parker Lambert and Adolphus Busch III at the beautiful country home of the August Busches last evening. While this was a very modest wedding and in no sense a "function" in the usual society sense of that word, it was nevertheless the one topic in social circles.

A farewell surprise was given for Miss Helen Stuart at the Hamilton by Mrs. Reton of St. Regis apartments. Miss Stuart will depart shortly for Los Angeles, Cal., where she is to make her future home. Among those present were Misses May Sanders, Tess Dorsey, Irene Kroeger, Marie Paul, Ruth Dodson, Fay Williams, Helen Stuart, Francis Whelan, Eva Parson, Genevieve Farce, Loretta Johnson, Ruth Todd, Ivy Mitchell, Mattie Reten, Loucine Fuse, Sarah Watson, Irene McHugh, Dorothy Hall, Rose Fleur; Messrs. Will Cullen, Ed Collins, Bob Dalton, Jack Stanley, Harry Fleming, John Kroeger, Jack Folsom, Frank Oswald, George Brinkman, Percy Williams, Louis Scott, Charles Tebeau, Lawrence Barrett, Will Foster, Olive Campbell, Joe Dalten, Oscar Reten, Halloway Farce, Frank Craig.

Mrs. Fred M. Wilkins of 6031 Westminster place entertained the graduating class of Soldan High School in honor of her daughter, Bessie Mildred Wilkins. The home was decorated in the Soldan colors and showers of daisies. Miss Dorothy Wilkins and Miss Mildred Ann Yule assisted in serving.

O. J. Thornburg of Chicago announced the engagement of his youngest daughter, Frances J., to H. M. Snyder of St. Louis. The wedding has been set for Sept. 12.

The marriage of Harry Zimmerman to Miss Rose Haffner took place last Sunday. Miss Bessie Zimmerman and Sam Haffner were the attendants. The ceremony was performed by Dr. Harrison at the home of the bride, 1300 Whittier street. A reception followed. Mr. and Mrs. Zimmerman will live at 4594A North Market street.

Miss Charlotte Buckley will depart in a few weeks to spend the summer with Miss Corinne Lawrence of New York City.

Mrs. T. B. Heining of Martin, Tex., is visiting her son, O. F. Heining and wife, of 4915 Terry avenue.

A pretty home wedding of the South Side on June 21 was that of Miss Hermina Weindel and Mr. Qtto H. Tiemann, at the home of the bride, 3107 Shenandoah avenue. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. J. Weindel. Rev. Dr. Roemer officiated. The bride wore a handsome white charmeuse robe, trimmed with silk point lace and seed pearls, and carried brides roses and lilies of the valley. Her tulle veil was held in place with sprigs of orange blossoms. The bride was attended by Miss Marie Weindel as maid of honor and Miss Frances Tiemann as bride's maid. The bridegroom was attended by Louis Moser as best man and Carl Riesmeyer as groomsman.

After a reception the young couple departed for the Northern lakes. On their return they will be at home at 3018A Magnolia avenue.

Dr. B. A. Wilkes and daughter, Miss Lois, of 4515 Washington boulevard will leave Monday for Colorado Springs and Denver.

Miss Katheryn Moresci, Miss Ruby Collier and Mrs. M. Collier will depart June 25 for Chicago and Lake Michigan resorts. Miss K. Moresci returning in July and Mrs. M. Collier and Miss R. Collier returning in August.

The marriage of Miss Rose Henrietta Stratman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Stratman, to Mr. Joseph L. Haas was solemnized at St. Francis de Sale's Church with a high mass at 9 a. m. Wednesday, June 18, 1913. The bride was given in marriage by her father. The bride wore an elaborate gown of white moire with long train in draped overskirt effect. The bride carried a shower of bride roses and lilies of the valley.

Cards are out announcing the marriage of Miss Edna Sauerbrunn, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Sauerbrunn of 1365 Belt avenue, to Lynwood D. Saunders, which took place Tuesday evening, June 10. Mr. and Mrs. Saunders will be at home after July 1 at 1333 Shawmut place.

The engagement of Miss Ann Louise Kasper to John W. Bohn was announced Friday afternoon. Miss Kasper, a student of art, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John W. Kasper. Mr. Bohn is a well-known baritone.

End of season sale Monday; all Straw Hats, in three lots, $3.50, $5 and $8, blacks and whites included; real values. Hughes Millinery, 4217 Olive.

Miss Frances Josephine Blower, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Blower, will be married Wednesday evening to Mr. William E. Punt, at the home of the bride, 6227 Famous avenue, Clifton Heights. Miss Eleaner Punt, sister of the bridegroom will be maid of honor; Miss Bertha Blower, sister of the bride, will be bridemaid; Mr. Edward Punt will be his brother's best man; Messrs. John and Joseph Blower will be ushers. The ceremony will take place at 8:30. The Rev. William Smith, pastor of the Memorial Congregational Church, will officiate.

Miss Frances Reichmann and her cousin Miss Anna Owens, departed for Wenabeg, Canada, for a few weeks.

Dr. F. J. Dietz and Mrs. Dietz of 3123 Meramec street leave July 7 for Boston, to sail for Genoa. They will be accompanied by Miss Clara Dietz and Miss Catherine Young.

Miss Genevieve Stretch, whose engagement to Mr. George Siekermann was announced several weeks ago, will be married June 25, 1913, at Immaculate Conception Church. The couple will depart immediately for the West on their honeymoon.

Mrs. Eva M. Ray and Eugene N. Lewis were married June 21 in the Kirkwood Methodist Church. The Rev. J. E. Martin, an old friend of the bride performed the ceremony. Only relatives and intimate friends of the bridal couple were present. They are spending their honeymoon in the East and will reside in St. Louis.

Mrs. T. C. Hempelmann will be "at home" to her friends on the 26th and 27th of June in the Marquette Apartments, 1653 South Spring avenue.

All hats sacrificed, preparing to leave for Europe. Sally Meagher Millinery Co., 801 Century Bldg.

A pretty home wedding of last Sunday was that of George Schoen and Miss Pauline Tobias, Dr. Lipking officiating. The bride was attended by her sister, Miss Theresa Tobias. Mr. and Mrs. Schoen will be at home at 4718 Page boulevard after July 1.

The marriage of Miss Ruth Knepper, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Fabick to Harry Hoffmeister is to take place next Wednesday at 8:30 p. m. at the home of the bride's parents, 4642 Idaho avenue. Miss Estelle Damm will be bridemaid and Christ Hoffmeister will be best man.

The Home Beauty Parlor

by Betty Dean

Babette: Your eyes are weakened and over-strained, that's all. Don't let them frighten you into wearing glasses until you try this simple home treatment. Dissolve an ounce of crystos in a pint of water. One or two drops in each eye every day may be all you need to restore the sparkle, youthful brilliancy and rested feeling to your eyes. If the lids are much inflamed, try soaking dabs of absorbent cotton in the tonic and laying them on each eye while you rest about 10 minutes. Crystos tonic may be called an eye beautifier.

Judy: If ordinary methods fail to reduce your flesh I would recommend a course of this simple, harmless home treatment: Put 4 ounces of parnotis in 1½ pints hot water. Take a tablespoonful three times a day. For those who find exercise a task, and are weakened by strict diet, I know of no such valuable aid in overcoming excessive fat. If your skin is inclined to flabbiness see answer to Deborah.

Hallie: Your hair needs exercise or a drill with some good tonic and you can do wonders in putting vitality and luxuriance into your hair and can promptly relieve the dandruff and itching scalp if you will use this remedy: It costs little and you can prepare it at home. From your druggist get one ounce quinzoin and ½ pint alcohol. Mix and add ½ pint cold water. This makes enough tonic to last a long time. Apply to your scalp twice a week, rubbing well into the roots.

Curly-Locks: I am very much opposed to the use of soap on the hair. The alkali in soap coarsens hair, irritates the scalp and in time will make the hair follicles decay, neither do I approve of egg shampoos. The animal substance mixes with the oil in the hair and is hard to remove. After all, plain canthrox makes the best shampoo, cheapest and easiest to handle. Dissolve one teaspoonful in a cup of hot water. It lathers well and takes out all excess oil, leaving the scalp stimulated and every strand clean. After a shampoo with canthrox notice how quickly your hair dries and how fluffy and light it is and good your head will feel.

Missy O.: Yes, you can buy the plain canthrox shampoo at any drug store.

Florence G.: You should not neglect that "tired" feeling or it may develop into something serious. If you will take this tonic and blood purifier faithfully it will probably be all you need to set you right. The prescription is an old, reliable one as the remedy can be made at home at little cost. To an ounce of kardene add ¼ pint alcohol and enough water to make a quart. Sweeten with ½ cup sugar. A tablespoonful before meals is the right dose for adults. Delicate children will be helped by this, too, but the dose must be regulated.

Deborah: Your husband admires other women because of your own carelessness about your looks. If your skin is wrinkled or saggy you need the bracing, beautifying effect of some simple jelly-cream which can be easily made at home. Try this one, which is the best of many I have used: Get from your druggist one ounce almozoin and dissolve in ½ pint cold water, adding two teaspoonfuls glycerine. Use this with a gentle massage, and it will work wonders on your skin, eradicating wrinkles and restoring that velvety, youthful glow.

Winifred: Your skin, in fact anyone's, is too delicate for the ordinary face powder. Try this lotion, which is very easy to make. It will save you money, besides being fine to whiten and tone the skin and rid it of sallowness or blemishes, and absolutely takes the place of powder in every way: Get 4 ounces of spurmax, add 2 teaspoonfuls glycerine and ½ pint hot water or witch hazel. Let stand a day. This makes a big quantity and is far better than the ordinary "boughten" kind. It will be very becoming and seem like a part of your skin.—ADV.

Women Have Business Ability

In renting a spare room in the home, or in the steady campaign for roomers in houses fitted up to accommodate those who have no home of their own, the work is usually that of women. Like the St. Louis merchants, these women buy space for advertising on its merits—for the results it brings. This explains why the Post-Dispatch prints more Room and Board Wants regularly than three of its four competitors combined. Why not keep your rooms rented and your table full? All druggists receive and telephone want ads to the Post-Dispatch.

Those present were: Misses Gladys Miller, Harriet Wrostell, Clara Schrader, Frieda Mueller, Marie Sparn, Margaret Smith, Dell Johnson, Hilda Grosse, Florence Anslinger, Elsie Krust, Hilda Zykan, Ida Weidemueller; Messrs. Herbert Hoppe, Carl Egeling, Alfred Rosenberg, Ben Ables, Ben Schuler, Erwin Seiling, Edwin Mertes, Oliver Kraehe, Roy Voelke, Gus Hoffman.

A surprise kitchen shower was given to Miss Florence Tacke on Friday, June 13, at the home of Mrs. A. W. Gernhardt of 5015 St. Louis avenue. Miss Tacke's marriage to Rev. A. Kreyling will take place Saturday, June 21. Those present were: Misses Florence Tacke, Emma Sohler, Edith Tacke, Emma Kreyling, Marie Rudolph, Helen Sauerbrunn, Viola Pietschmann, Mildred Schroeder, Mabel Schroeder, Audrey Wahlhaus, Minnie Ulrich; Mesdames C. Fey, G. Wahlhaus and F. Schroeder.

The Tuesday Night Club is enjoying a week-end party in Washington, Mo., with one of its former members, Mrs. Charles J. Kampschroeder. The members are: Misses Florence Sahm Anna Lange, Cecilia M. Woods, Mildred Jagels Clara Dehnert, Jennie M. Woods, Sidonia Sahm, Cora Lange, Lulu Kohl, Alta Gard.

The annual commencement of the St. Thomas Aquina's School was held Wednesday morning, June 18, 1913. The graduating class included the following young ladies: Misses Anna Dowd, Regina Duba, Dorothy Knaus, Lucille Meyer, Catherine McManamy, Vincentia Scheele and Louise Wilson. The commencement was private.

Mr. and Mrs. William Frank of 5825 Wells avenue will entertain a number of young folks Saturday evening with a lawn party in honor of Miss Bessie Ahrens Moore of Rome, Ga.

Miss Percy Lee Glass, daughter of Mrs. Hugo Richrath of 1518 Burd avenue, was married yesterday to Carl G. Witkins, at the home of the bride. The Rev. John W. Day performed the ceremony. The wedding was a modest one because of the recent death of the bride's grandmother, Mrs. Jessie Mannall Lee. Mrs. Watkins' father was Dr. R. B. Glass, whose family is well known in the South. Mr. and Mrs. Watkins will announce their residence after a honeymoon trip.

Mr. and Mrs. F. C. Rohde of 5823 Wells avenue, departed Tuesday evening for Rome, Ga., where they will spend a number of weeks with their niece, Mrs. H. Moore, and her husband.

The members of the Friday Evening Club were entertained by Miss Eliza Whitside of 1407 Aubert avenue. The guests were Beatrice Down, Hazel and Gertrude Hoskins and Evelyn Hardy, Messrs. Leon Jacques, James McSpaden, Ernest Deverdon, Louis Lumelius Jr. and Sid Ring.

Mrs. Richard Noland of 1333 Semple avenue, entertained a few friends with an informal luncheon on Wednesday, June 18, at 5 o'clock, in honor of Mr. Kenneth McConnell of San Francisco, Cal.

The fourteenth annual commencement of the Weltner Conservatory of Music consists of three concerts at the Weltner Conservatory recital hall. The first concert was rendered last Friday evening, June 20, and the remaining two concerts will be rendered Wednesday evening, June 25 and Friday evening, June 27. Rev. A. A. THE DOCTOR'S ADVICE

by Dr. Lewis Baker

The questions answered below are general in character, the symptoms or diseases are given and the answers will apply to any case of similar nature.

Those wishing further advice, free, may address Dr. Lewis Baker, College Bldg., College-Ellwood sts., Dayton, O., inclosing self-addressed stamped envelope for reply. Full name and address must be given, but only initials or fictitious name will be used in my answers. The prescriptions can be filled at any well-stocked drug store. Any druggist can order of wholesaler.

Miss Berle W. asks: "Will you kindly prescribe a safe remedy to reduce my weight? I prefer a tablet as I cannot take liquid medicine."

Answer: Obtain of any well-stocked druggist a tube of 5-grain arbolene tablets and take as per the directions which accompany the packages. You will reduce at the rate of a pound a day after the first few days of treatment. This remedy reduces goitre also.

"Howard" writes: "What can I take for headache, dark spots before my eyes, dizzy spells and also constipation?"

Answer: Constipation is the cause of all your trouble, but I can cure you if you will follow my directions. Get at the drug store three-grain sulphero tablets (not sulphur). These are packed in sealed tubes and contain full directions. These little tablets purify the blood, the bowels and liver are stimulated into healthy action and will gradually cure your trouble.

"Little Girl"—To cure your child of bedwetting get tincture cubebs, 1 dram; comp. fluid balmwort, 1 oz., and tincture rhusaromatic, 2 drams. Give 10 to 15 drops in water about one hour before meals.

Doctor: "I have been a sufferer of catarrh of the head for many years. It has also affected my stomach, bowels and blood. I suffer greatly and would appreciate an immediate answer."

Louise: I should recommend the following local treatment for you: Get two ounces of Vilane powder and to a pint of warm water add one-half teaspoonful and snuff from the palm of the hand through the nostrils two or three times daily. In connection with this make a catarrh balm of one ounce of vaseline or lard and a level teaspoonful of Vilane powder, apply this balm to the nostrils as far up as possible. Also obtain the following ingredients, mix, shake well and take a teaspoonful four times daily: Syrup sarsaparilla comp., 4 ozs.; comp. fluid balmwort, 1 oz.; fluid extract buchu, 1 oz.

"Kathryn" writes: "If you know of anything that will stop premature baldness, cure dandruff and itching scalp, I should appreciate a reply."

Answer: The following simple remedy will cure dandruff and promote a luxurious growth of hair. Ask for plain yellow minyol which can be had in 4 oz. jars and use regularly according to directions. I have seen the most astonishing results from its use that I heartily recommend it to all who suffer with any disease of the scalp.

"Mrs. A. F." writes: "Really if I could find a true remedy to increase my weight, I should be the happiest woman alive. I am so thin and scrawny, it is a shame. Why cannot I be like other women? I do not work hard and have pretty good health."

Answer: You can "be like other women" if you will follow my advice, which is to use three-grain hypo-nuclane tablets packed in sealed cartons with directions, and most widely prescribed by intelligent physicians everywhere. They improve the nutrition, add red blood corpuscles to the blood, improve the complexion, but thorough and regular use must follow to get these good results.

"Mr. Ben" writes: "My joints are becoming so stiff from rheumatism that I can scarcely walk. Is there any help for me?"

Answer: Of course there is help for you and for all others who suffer from rheumatism. Take the following and you will be entirely cured: Iodide of potassium, 2 drams; sodium salicylate, 4 drams; wine of colchium, ½ oz.; comp. essence cardiol, 1 oz.; comp. fluid balmwort, 1 oz.; and syrup sarsaparilla, 5 ozs. Mix and take a teaspoonful at meal time and again at bed time.

"Mary J." says: "Every winter I have a cold which lasts till spring. I have tried several doctors' prescriptions, but they do no good, so I ask you what to do."

Answer: The best medicine to relieve colds and coughs is made by mixing the contents of a 2½-oz. bottle of essence mentho laxene with honey or homemade sugar syrup. Full directions for making are given on the bottle and also how to take. You will find this will cure your cough in a very few days and it is perfectly harmless and pleasant to take.

"Miss A." writes: "I have a very bad case of dyspepsia. I am afraid to eat a hearty meal. My breath is bad and I am cross and irritable most of the time."

Answer: If you will get the following tablets and take according to directions which accompany the package, you will soon be rid of all distress in your stomach. It will also help your constipation. They are called tablets triopeptine and are packed in sealed cartons. If this trouble is allowed to stand it will cause appendicitis, so begin taking at once.

"Helen" writes: "Please tell me what to do to gain an appetite. I cannot eat and am thin and nervous."

Answer: You need a good system tonic and the best one that I could tell you of is: Syrup of hypophosphites comp. 5 ozs., tincture cadomene comp. 1 oz. Mix and always shake well before using. Take a teaspoonful before meals for several weeks and you will gain an appetite and your whole nervous system will be restored to its natural state. To Keep Skin White, Velvety, Wrinkle-Free

(Aunt Sally in Woman's Realm.)

C. M. W. says: "My neck is so discolored from wearing high collars I cannot dress decollete. What do you advise?" The treatment recommended to "Anise" will doubtless overcome this condition.

A. F. G. asks: "What should I do for crow's-feet and for wrinkles at the mouth corners?" Try a wash lotion made by dissolving 1 oz. powdered saxolite in ½ pint witch hazel. This is immediately effective in any wrinkled condition. Use daily for awhile and results will astonish you.

Anise: A simple way to keep your skin smooth, soft and white is to apply ordinary mercolized wax before retiring, washing it off in the morning. This keeps the face free from the particles of lifeless cuticle which constantly appear. The wax absorbs these worn-out particles, so the younger, fresher, healthier skin is always in view. An ounce of mercolized wax may be had at small cost at any drug store. Use like cold cream.—ADV.

HOW TO DEVELOP THE BUST

Wonderful as it may seem, we have found a simple way to develop the bust. It is Sorose, the discovery of a well-known woman physician who used it with remarkable success in enlarging her own bosom and then won the gratitude of scores of her patients.

If Sorose does not enlarge the bust measurements from three to seven inches, we guarantee to return the money paid for it. Do not think you must stay flat-chested and with unattractive form. Use Sorose and get beautiful development just where you need it. This treatment is not recommended for anything but developing the bust, but is guaranteed to do this or money back. Full three weeks' treatment costs only $1.00 at the local agents, Wolff-Wilson Drug Co., or by mail postpaid from the Embee Toilet Co., Buffalo, N. Y.

Builder of Big Keokuk Dam Gives Medals to His Men compressed air mechanism lowered and raised the gate which had just disappeared, to another how two steamers of first-class river dimensions could be as well accommodated in the lock as one, and to a third how less water leaked through the tightly shut lower gates than was at that moment dipping from the boat's wheel.

A man on the lock was hailed by Cooper, who fingered a gold medal which the man wore as a watch charm. The inscription showed that the medal was given for faithful service in the important post of superintendent of carpenter work—important in the concrete molding stage of construction, abandoned now that the two-mile concrete wall stands alone. And the inscription further showed that it was given not by the company, but by Hugh L. Cooper. Such a medal now belongs to every man who stayed with the big job for a year. Gold, silver and bronze are the materials, according to the varying grades of service.

"That," remarked Cooper, "is my way of giving a letter of recommendation. Men leaving the work often ask me for letters of recommendation. I tell them a letter doesn't amount to anything. You give a man a letter of recommendation to get rid of him. But you don't give him a gold medal to get rid of him.

"On this job," he continued, "no man has had to worry about what his salary would be. If the company doesn't know when to raise a man's pay when he deserves it, he's wasting his time staying here. Perhaps that has been one reason why we have got on well with our men.

"We have had men on this job from all the universities and technical schools. No matter what degrees they have, or what letters they bring, they have to work three months on the labor end of the job. That teaches them things they need to know, shows what they have in them, and gives them a respect for the dignity of labor."

This reminded me that men on the job had told how Cooper had spent parts of his Sunday leisure in visiting sick members of the labor force, and how he had not sent, but taken, illustrated papers to their homes. I have been told, too, that "the boss" often gets bulletins on the progress of the Balkan War in letters from the men who patriotically quit the big job to go home and fight the Turks.

"In hiring a man," he said in reply to a question, "I usually ask first as to previous jobs, and try to learn whether a man has changed jobs frequently. I don't discount school training, though I had to get my own technical training outside school. I sometimes think the schools could do more in training men to intensive application and it is the first year or two out of school, rather than the school grades, which shows where a man is going to land in real work.

"We haven't many rules on the job. One is a relic of the days of frame construction, when it was necessary to post 'No Smoking' signs everywhere. There is nothing there now to burn, but the rule against smoking still goes. I figure that it saves 20 per cent of a man's time not to be handling cigars and matches. I smoke myself, but I do it in my leisure time. The men who are used to the rule think it a good thing.

"Although time has been a big factor in the job, we have never had Sunday work. I had a chance, some years ago, on a Chicago job, to compare the work of an efficient gang of men, six days in the week, with the work the same gang had done on a seven-day schedule. I found that the men did as much in six days as they had done in seven, and that the time and a half paid them for Sunday overtime had been wasted."

Could this work have been done as a public enterprise?" I asked, with the St. Louis free bridge in mind.

"Not under the usual conditions of public work," Cooper replied. "Nor could it be done for a railroad company. In either case, the Board of Directors, by whatever name it is called, has to be considered, and has to know why things are done some certain way and not some other way. I, for one, would not have the patience to tell them, or to win over a majority to everything that I thought should be done. On this job, while there is a Board of Directors, my contract is such that I have a free hand. I don't recall that more than three of the directors of this company have been in Keokuk at any one time lately."

While St. Louis is scheduled to get its share of the vast power output next week, Cooper will remain on the work until after the formal opening in August, when it is hoped to have President Wilson as a guest. Then he plans to rest a yar, traveling with his family.

"After that," he repeated as, after dinner, he sat on his lawn overlooking the river, while the twilight turned the long span of white concrete into gossamer, "well, I don't know just where I will find a bigger job than this. You could dam the Mississippi almost anywhere, but nowhere else did God put the bluffs so close up on each side, to make your lake. Without those bluffs there would be a ruinous amount of rand overflow to pay for, instead of only $3,000,000 worth.

"The Missouri and Meramec could be connected, behind St. Louis, by a canal and a dam, but I don't think the power would pay for the expenditure.

"Now," he added, as I took my leave, "don't go away with the idea that there's anything wonderful about this job. There isn't."

As I had found no one else in Keokuk who took this view, I venture, in this matter, respectfully to differ with even so high an authority as Hugh L. Cooper.

Democracy as an Element in Charter Making

upon a higher plane than the dumb brutes?"

The success of the German cities in limiting the predatory impulses of their strong individual citizens, and in applying wealth socially created to the satisfaction of social needs, thus safeguarding the slow, the weak and the relatively unwise against extermination by the swift, the strong, the self-denying and the super-shrewd indivduals, seems to prove humanity is capable of dwelling in cities upon a higher plan than that occupied by wild animals in the jungles.

So, in discussing the government of cities in America, it seems to me far more important for us to adopt the new democratic or humanitarian spirit than to quarrel about mere forms of organization.

Thus, an American city, in framing a new charter, should, I feel, in that charter attempt to make its people free to adopt the democratic spirit and give it free play, replacing the individualistic, or jungle city spirit. This is of supreme importance.

The successful city governments of Northern Europe have discovered that the individual's morals improve with increased freedom from so-called moral restraints imposed by law. They have discovered that sound morals are rooted rather in health of body and mind than in legal prohibitions. They have discovered that individual liberty is a good thing not only for the individual but for the community as well. It has been discovered by the German and British cities that the cheapest and surest way to prevent excessive drunkenness, dirt, ignorance and sexual degradation is to assure to all the people a rational minimum of those social conditions which produce sound health of mind and body. This costs a lot of money. So much money, in fact, that no American city could carry out the German city program with revenue derived wholly from taxation. If we wish our cities to perform for their people the excellent and healthful services which German cities are doing for their people, we shall have to find the money for such work where the German cities have found it, namely, in public ownership of public utilities and in the land increment tax.

Just as the Wilson administration is attempting to democratize the spirit of our Federal Government by abolishing special privilege grants held by favored individuals under the tariff laws, so our city governments ought and soon will attempt to democratize their spirit by abolishing the special privileges of private ownership of public utilities and the private pocketing of the socially-created land increment.

With these new revenues available for community use our American cities will not long lag behind the world's best and most beautiful.

STORIES
Notables Are Telling About Themselves and Other Notables

WASHINGTON, June 21.

CONGRESSMAN VICTOR MURDOCK of Kansas is going to get copies of all the lodge oaths he has taken and the vows and pledges that he has made and read them over carefully and find out exactly what he is up against.

He belongs to 11 secret orders. He has discovered that his obligation to one of them includes furnishing bond for erring brothers and getting them out of jail. If he has bound himself to do that for all of his 11 different kinds of brothers, he wants to know the worst at once. He does not know but that he has also promised not only to get all of them out of jail, but also into jobs which will give them opportunities for getting back into jail again.

When Murdock was running for Congress he gave a fine exhibition of self-restraint by refusing to join a single lodge, because he did not want anybody to go around and say that he was trying to get the brothers' votes. So far as is known, he is the only candidate who ever refrained from joining lodges for the sake of the brothers' votes. But Murdock admits that he just wouldn't do it.

But after he was elected he didn't mind joining. All the lodges are glad to get Congressmen into "their midst," and before Murdock stopped joining he had 11 grips and passwords to remember. He was also supposed to remember his vows, but he did not. He supposed all the "I-promise" business was like joining the church, and was not to be thrown up to a man afterwards.

But he soon found out that the lodge brothers were disposed to hold him to his obligation, especially that part where it says that the thing to do when a lodge brother is in jail, is to get him out. When he went to Washington to take the office a telegram was there from the secretary of one of his lodges. It informed him that a brother was locked up at Alexandria, near Washington, and directed him to furnish $4000 bond for the erring one and get him out at once.

Burleson Finds One Clerk Who Holds Republicanism Above Job.

POSTMASTER-GENERAL BURLESON is a Democrat and he doesn't care who knows it. He is even proud of it. The thing he can't understand is how any man, in his right mind, can be anything else but a Democrat. He is convinced that Democrats are the only kind that get to heaven, although it is never too late for Progressives and Republicans and other sinners to repent and join the Democratic party and thus make their titles clear to mansions in the sky.

Since the Democrats have added power to their excellence they have been busy prying off bad Republicans and putting good Democrats in their places. There was one Republican committee clerk who had acquired so much technical knowledge that it would be hard for even a Democrat to fill his place. Men of both parties urged Burleson to overlook the man's Republicanism and let him stay.

"I'll tell you what I'll do," said Burleson. "I'll see that the man keeps his place provided he comes to me and looks me straight in the eye and promises to renounce the devil and all his works and the Republican party and turn Democrat."

But it happened that the clerk was one of those peculiar fellows who would rather be a real Republican out of a job than a phony Democrat in a job, and he was let out.

Col. Hill's Haste, His Balky Auto Upsets His Royal Welcome.

THERE was to be a jubilation of some sort at Bend, Ore., and Col. Louis W. Hill of the Northern Pacific was to be the guest of honor. Bend, as you probably do not know, is the home of Col. "Bill" Hanley, who looks like Secretary of State Bryan, and every time Col. Hill goes to Bend he makes himself at home at Col. Hanley's house.

This time he was expected at 6 a. m. and Col. Hanley and a job lot of leading citizens were to meet him and hand him the welcome-to-our-beautiful-city stuff. But Col. Hill came in during the night. He let down the tail gate of his special car and lowered the automobile that he carries with him and scurried out to Col. Hanley's.

Hanley talked cross to him for coming in ahead of time, but let him stay. But the Reception Committee was to call for Hanley at 5 a. m. and it did so call. Hanley introduced Hill as Dr. Somebody from Spokane. Hill took them all in his machine and started to take them to the depot to meet him.

Half way there something went wrong with machine and Hill crawled under it to tinker its innards. The leading citizens stood and offered a lot of perfectly useless ad, interlated with some free and easy discus on of the shortcomings of Col. Hill.

It got so bad that Col. Hanley dragged the pseudo physician from under the car and introduced him. So they welcomed him to their beautiful city right there in the middle of the road and took back all that they had said about him while he was under the machine and they were supposing he was Dr. Somebody of Spokane. In the midst of these exciting disclosures the man who was to have made a speech forgot it. So the breakdown was not entirely in vain.

Get Ready for the Big Flood Is Louisiana Man's Warning.

B. G. GELSON of Baton Rouge, La., who was in Washington the other day, thinks that some day the Mississippi Valley is going to have a worse flood than the Ohio Valley had this spring.

"The denudation of forests in the Northern Central States," he said, permits immediate drainage following spring thaws or rains. In former times forests, with their heavy undergrowth, retained the moisture like a sponge, allowing it to escape slowly. Thousands upon thousands of swamp lands along the Mississippi, which have acted as overflow basins, are being reclaimed, and the effort is being made to confine the river within its dikes.

"One of these days, the floods will come down from the uplands in greater volume than ever before and the confined Mississippi will burst its bonds and spread unprecedented devastation over the valley."

Moros Beyond Civilization Is Army Surgeon's Opinion.

DR. CHARLES MACDONALD of Salem, N. J., former army surgeon, who has lived among the Moros, who have renewed hostilities against our troops in the Philippines, took occasion to say, when in Washington the other day, that he does not think the Moros ever will be civilized or that permanent peace will ever be brought about on their island.

"Jolo," he said, "is a very ancient city, built by the Spaniards. It is about a mile square and is surrounded by a stone wall about 20 feet high. The Moros against whom Gen. Pershing has been waging a campaign occupy block houses outside the city's walls. They are fanatics, as a matter of course. There are some 50,000 Moros on the Island of Jolo, and about 7000 other persons, mostly Chinese and Christians, inside the city.

"When the Moros go 'juara montou,' which, translated, means crazy, they are irresponsible. They prepare for their assaults for days, and are drilled by a 'sherif,' or high priest. They have a ceremony something like the ghost dance of our Indians, and work themselves into a frenzy of delirium.

"When they become wrought up to a high pitch they shave their bodies and heads, arm themselves with barongs, which are weapons something like machettes, and, believing that they are destined to die, descend upon their enemies.

"They want to take as many Christians as they can with them to death. The Moros are pretty tough people to deal with. I do not believe they can ever be civilized to that state where they will be capable of self-government."

LIFE IN BOKHARA.

From the London Standard.

Interesting sidelights on the life of the almost unknown people under the rule of the Czar in Central Asia were given by Miss Christie, F. R. G. S., one of the first to be elected to that body, who has recently returned from a journey to Bokhara.

"The 11 gates of Bokhara," said Miss Christie, "are still shut every night at sundown, and the watchmen parade the streets after dark beating drums to show they are awake. The people were very friendly. The Bokhara idea of justice was direct and to the point. They took the condemned persons up to the top of the tower and then threw them down. Once was enough.

"The caravansary in the queer town was similar to those usually found in the East long ago. The little rooms look out over a small balcony into the yard. Underneath the rooms the cattle are kept.

"All the buildings, with the exception of the mosques and the towers, are built of clay, and the method of the builders is simplicity itself. A wooden framework is put up, and in the spaces between the wooden boards are pressed sun-dried balls of mud. Then over all comes more mud, and in a very short time a house is built and ready for occupation."

Miss Christie was fortunate enough to see the Emir going to mosque, and she also photographed him, which is considered something of a feat, for no one ever knows which of the many mosques he intends to enter. It was a Friday, and a crowd of subjects gathered near the mosque within a few yards of the palace.

Wouldn't Use the Big Stick.

From the Louisville Courier-Journal.

"All I want is a square deal."

"I'm after a shade the best of it. If I can't get that I'm willing to compromise on a squhre deal."

Conservation of Silence.

From the Atchison Globe.

The society for the prevention of useless noises might make a start by reducing the number of cheers from three to one.

Name Not Important.

From London Opinion.

Boarder: Whichever you call it.

Develop Your Bust

50c Package FREE to Any Woman Who Wants a Beautiful Figure

Women need no longer be humiliated and embarrassed because they are thin, flat-chested and not developed, for science has found a simple way to give the beautiful curves of a perfect figure. To prove this, let us send you free of charge a 50c package that will show you how easily the bust can be developed from two to seven inches, and become full, plump and firm. This discovery, that is of such vital interest to all thin women, is the result of long study and investigation by one of the leading women physicians in New York State, who, in seeking to overcome the defects in her own figure without the use of "pads" or forms, discovered a happy combination of tissue-building elements that increased her bust some four inches, made her arms round and shapely and her neck and shoulders plump and symmetrical.

This prescription of Dr. Catherine Kelly's is a real discovery on far different lines from the ordinary figure-developing treatment, and this explains its almost uniform success.

Dr. Kelly not only gained a beautiful form by her own prescription, but used it successfully with many of her patients. Women, this is a personal message from a physician of your own sex, and all we ask is the opportunity to show you without any expense on your part that Dr. Kelly's Form Developer will give you a perfect figure, beautiful complexion and improve the general health. Send the little coupon above and 10c for expenses and a 50c treatment will be mailed at once in plain package. Write us today. DR. KELLY MEDICAL CO., Dept. 159-FC, Buffalo, N.Y.

PLAN DEVISED TO EXTEND ST. LOUIS TRADE TERRITORY

Ad Men's Committee Urges That Business Be Sought in North and East.

ADVERTISING IS PLANNED

Business Chautauqua in Summer for Country Merchants Is Proposed.

A general advertising plan to promote the business of St. Louis has been prepared by a Special Publicity Committee of the Advertising Men's League. The committee takes the view that what St. Louis most needs is to sell more goods, and that as a natural result thereof numerous factories for the manufacture of the merchandise distributed from this city will be established here.

The committee was comprised of Roy B. Simpson, advertising manager of the Roberts, Johnson & Rand Shoe Co.; F. Garrison, publisher of the Dry Goodsman, and C. L. Fisher of the Fisher-Steinbruegge Advertising Co.

The committee reported that it found that the six largest wholesale houses of St. Louis sold more than $100,000,000 worth of goods every year, and that $90,000,000 of this money was paid to Eastern manufacturers for goods. Most of these goods ought to be produced in St. Louis, the committee declared.

Would Extend Territory.

A recommendation that St. Louis conduct a campaign for extending its trade territory to the North and Northwest, and the East, was made. St. Louis had been content merely with supplying the South and Southwest, the committee reported, and Eastern cities and Chicago were now trying to cut into that territory. St. Louis should retaliate by invading the territory that has been controlled by other cities, it was urged.

The scheme proposed to advertise St. Louis to make the trade extension campaign successful is:

Educate the 6000 traveling men representing St. Louis manufacturers and wholesale houses to boost St. Louis.

Create a new St. Louis spirit by inducing every man, woman and child in the city to become a booster.

Advertise collectively the industries of St. Louis to attract the attention of both merchants and consumers throughout the country, national weeklies to be used for the campaign.

Establish a business Chautauqua to be held in St. Louis the latter part of August and early September to conduct classes, for the benefit of country merchants visiting the city, the classes to embrace window trimming, profit, figuring, stock keeping and advertising.

City's Advantages Cited.

To disseminate facts showing that the climate of St. Louis is as good or better than that of any large city in the country; that it is an ideal place in which to live and do business; that it has the best public school system in the United States, and other advantages which give it leading rank as a home city.

The money for the campaign is to be contributed by the merchants and manufacturers whose business will be collectively benefited by the advertising in the national weeklies. The advertising will be handled at cost by the local advertising agencies, which will be aided by the advertising managers of the firms contributing to the campaign.

CATHOLIC OUTING HOME OPENS SEASON OF HELP

Children From Parishes and Working Girls Entertained There Without Charge.

The fourth season of the Catholic Outing Home was opened last week, with the prospects of the most successful year since its opening. Catholics of the city are generally interested in the Home which is the only one in the city or county, and is conducted under the direction of the children of Mary of the Sacred Heart with a hostess in charge. Children from the various parishes of the city are taken to the home, and kept a week, crowds of boys going one week and girls the next. Saturday afternoons and Sundays the Home is used for working girls of the city who are entertained without any charge, as are the children during the week.

The Home is situated north of the city in the historic old Henry Clay mansion, which was formerly the summer residence of Archbishop Kenrick. It was given by Archbishop Glennon for the Outing Home. Comfortable dormitories, spacious grounds, with many swings, hammocks and shower baths, and plenty of good milk and wholesome food work wonders for the youngsters during their stay. Last summer almost 900 children were entertained, the largest number in any week being 97. Bands of five young women each week are entertainers for the children, assisting in the games, giving story hours and exercising general care over the little visitors.

It costs only $2.50 to provide an outing for the children, and contributions for the work will be welcomed, and should be sent to Mrs. R. S. Colnon, treasurer of the Catholic Outing Board, 6417 Columbia avenue. Miss Mary Hoxey is president of the board, Mrs. Seth W. Cobb, first vice-president; Mrs. J. L. Hornsby, second vice-president, Miss Josephine Cobb, secretary and Mrs. Helen Henderson official hostess.

NINE DAYS NOW IN WHICH TO WIN MISSOURI PRIZE

Contestants Are From Every State in the Union.

It is evident that the Missouri Boosting Contest, to win the $100 prize offered by the Post-Dispatch for the Ten Best Reasons Why People Should Come to Missouri, has aroused deep interest. Former residents of "good old Missouri" have, in sending in their contributions, announced their intention to return. The State Federation of Clubs will make use of the material received to further the cause of immigration.

Reasons From Seattle.

Editor Post-Dispatch.

The very name Missouri, U. S., gives one the reasons for making a home in that State, for each and every letter has a meaning:

M—Modern.
I—Industrious.
S—Self supporting.
S—Successful.
O—Orderly.
U—United.
R—Resourceful.
I—Incomparable.
U—Uprigt.
S—Satisfactory.

Missouri can be symbolized by a loving mother hen, for Missouri has all the endearing virtues of that modest but invaluable fowl.

Mrs. Hen provides well for her children—
So does Missouri.
Her children are healthy—
So are Missouri's.
She teaches them industry—
So does Missouri.
Her work shows rich results—
So does Missouri's.
Her character is pure—
So is Missouri's.
Her daily life is wholesome—
So is Missouri's.
Her habits are conservative—
So are Missouri's.
She is peace-loving—
So is Missouri.
She is justly proud but not vain—
So is Missouri.
She breathes a spirit of hospitality.

And for just these reasons I would like to "come back" to dear Missouri.

MRS. JOHN T. CRAWFORD.
4937 Lowman drive, Seattle, Wash.

Unlimited Opportunity.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

Why people should come to Missouri:

1. Because there are mines to be opened.
2. Forests to be cleared.
3. Farms to be occupied.
4. Railroads to be extended.
5. Towns to be built.
6. Commercial enterprises to be established.
7. Work for the idle.
8. Health for the sick.
9. Investments for capital.
10. And Missouri needs you.

MRS. A. J. CAMPBELL,
Dixon, Mo.

"Handsome Men and Lovely Women."

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

Why people should come to Missouri:

1. Missouri exceeds in minerals, timber, water, mules, mechanical, agricultural and farm products, and is in the right latitude in the heart of the Mississippi Valley—the most fertile and best valley in the world, where land can be still purchased at a bargain and titles are perfect.

2. Its soil is inexhaustible, climate good, its heating mineral springs unsurpassed, its pure drinking water unexcelled, its State educational and charitable institutions already in the lead; its people the best and most hospitable neighbors in the world, its laws and freedom democratic to the core, its civilization and progress in advance and its opportunities and possibilities illimitable.

3. This State is not too far North, too far South, too far East or too far West; it is just right, "Johnnie on the spot."

4. The grand and majestic old Mississippi River flows in front and along its eastern boundary line, and the longest and mighty Missouri River flows through the great State of Missouri and empties into the everlasting Mississippi, which deepens and widens and gathers volume, strength and power in its irresistible course to the sea, so that after the completion of the Panama Canal Missouri's water transportation facilities will be the cheapest and best in the world.

5. St. Louis is the chief metropolis of the State, the most substantial commercial metropolis and best city on the American continent today, being the center of a 1,000,000 population, has the best future and the best location in the Mississippi Valley for beautiful homes, schools, churches, art, science, industry, commerce, stability, solidity, brotherly love, water and railroad transportation facilities, manufacturing purposes, cheap Keokuk dam electrical light and water power for future progress and development of its manifold industries.

7. The Mississippi Valley is upon the whole the most magnificent dwelling place prepared by God for man's abode, and St. Louis is the logical point in the Mississippi Valley.

8. Missouri has more handsome men and lovely women and more "world-renowned" perfect mules (ready for peace) to the square inch than can be found elsewhere.

9. People come from all parts of the world to St. Louis, Mo., to pick up lessons in American freedom, civilization, political reform and progress. Other cities may have a slogan—"St. Louis has the goods."

10. The Missouri hen has today for her work at the State Poultry Experiment Station at Mountain Grove in the production of eggs, a credit balance of $290 in the vaults of the State Treasurer.

GEORGE A. RITTER,
2206 Olive st., St. Louis.

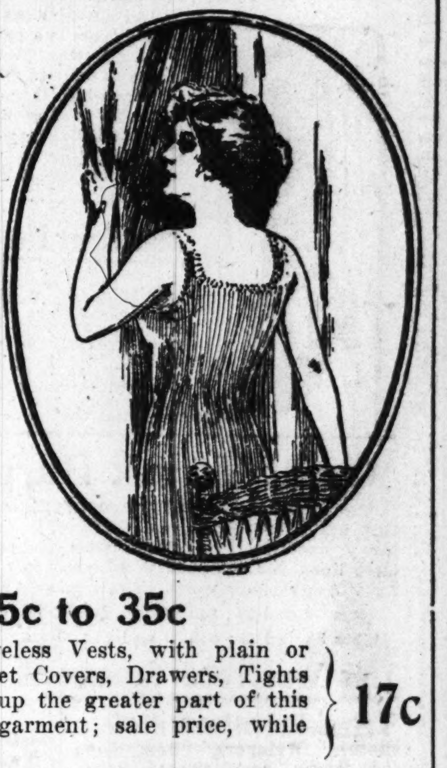
Here's a Sale of Summer Underwear of Which Every Woman Will Desire a Most Liberal Share



Tomorrow we shall offer a large quantity of seasonable Light-weight Knit Underwear—sample garments from makers of world-wide reputation, together with small lots from our regular stock. We believe you will find this sale different from any that has been held for some time—different because of the wide variety of styles represented, different because the values are more out of the ordinary, and because of our Expansion Sale which is now in progress.

While this collection of garments in the aggregate is large, the styles and sizes of the various garments are limited and we cannot duplicate them at these prices after this lot has been sold. Consequently it is important that you shop early if you wish to avoid disappointment. As the greater part of these garments are samples, most of them are of medium size.

They have been divided into four different lots and will be placed on sale on some of our Main Floor sales tables in order to insure quick handling. As plenty of light-weight underwear will be needed from now on we are confident that this event will meet with a tremendous response.

Lot No. 1—Values 25c to 35c

17c This lot consists of women's low-neck, sleeveless Vests, with plain or fancy tops, low-neck, short-sleeved Vests, Corset Covers, Drawers, Tights and some Union Suits. Vests, however, make up the greater part of this lot. These range in value from 25c to 35c a garment; sale price, while they last— 17c

Lot No. 2—Values 50c to 65c

29c In this lot you will find low-neck, sleeveless Vests in medium and out-sizes; Union Suits with low neck and no sleeves and in tight and wide-knee styles. About one-half of this lot is Union Suits. Values range from 50c to 65c a garment; sale price while they last— 29c

Lot No. 3—Values 75c to $1.00

49c In this lot are fancy-yoke, low-neck, sleeveless Vests and plain-top silk and-cotton Vests, also high-neck Vests with long or short sleeves and Pants with belt and tape tops, low-neck sleeveless Union Suits with wide and tight knees; some with fancy yokes, hemstitched tops, "Nushape" styles and Swiss ribbed. More than one-half of this lot is Union Suits. Values 75c to $1.00 a garment; sale price, while they last— 49c

Lot No. 4—Values $1.00 to $2.00

69c More than three-quarters of this particular lot consists of Union Suits made low neck, sleeveless with tight or wide knees; Swiss and fine ribbed styles. "Nushape" garments, fancy yokes and band tops. Also Vests with low necks and no sleeves. Some of these are plain, others have crochet tops. Values $1.00 to $2.00 a garment; sale price— 69c

We Have Found Another Way to Serve—
And Tomorrow Will Officially Inaugurate

A Special Summer Service for Vacationists

WE have arranged this service for the special benefit of St. Louisans who will spend the Summer at mountain, lake or seaside resorts.

You may send your orders to us and they will be filled promptly by experienced shoppers who will have exclusive charge of this work.

We will prepay charges on all shipments, and the charge for merchandise will be made against your monthly account, the same as if you were buying here in the city.

Those who have no charge accounts, may avail themselves of this service by sending cash with order, and, of course, we will gladly accept for return any article of merchandise which does not prove satisfactory.

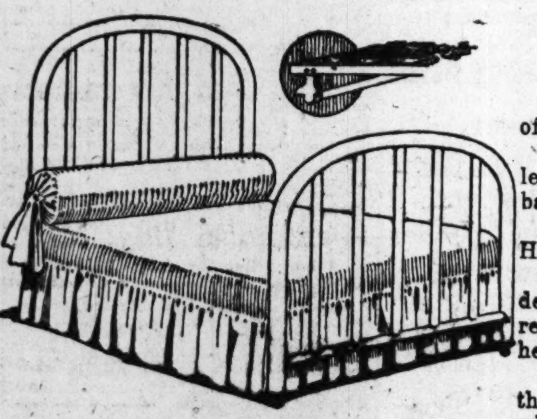
A Metal Bed Outfit Complete at $17.75

Including Bed, Bed Spring and Felt Mattress—Usually

Priced $24.50



The illustration gives an idea of this remarkable offer.

The Bed is in a very neat design—made of seamless steel, serviceably finished in Vernis Martin or baked white enamel.

The filling rods are of good size, mounted closely. High head and foot board. Have extra angle braces.

Fitted with 20-year guaranteed steel springs, high-deck style, with an improved small mesh wire top, reinforced at either end with rows of tempered helicals.

The roll-edge "flower" Felt Mattress is one of these comfort-giving affairs, made strictly sanitary, with neat art ticking, good, clean layer cotton felt filling—rounded corners, double-stitched and finished with roll edge.

Usual price for the outfit is $24.50—Monday's special price for the outfit, $17.75

And by the piece they may be bought as follows:

The Bed at $7.75. The Springs at $3.35. The Mattress at $6.75.

Dresser or Chiffonier, $24.75

In neat Colonial style, with perfect cabinet work, with each joint properly fitted, and with easy, smooth-working drawers—pieces which will give serviceable wear.

$47.50 Buffets at $36.50

Their plain lines and massive size make them decidedly attractive. Conveniently arranged base, measuring 60 inches, and with beveled mirror extending across entire width.

$2.50 Porch Rockers, $2

Ten dozen just received, and we do not expect them to stay here long at Monday's special price of $2

"THE WOMAN" AND "THE HOUSE NEXT DOOR" THIS WEEK

Former Is Marguerite Clark Theater's Offering, Latter Opens at Suburban Garden.

RIGO A DELMAR SUCCESS

Grand Opera Act Heads Highlands Vaudeville Bill—Other St. Louis Attractions.

"THE WOMAN." Marguerite Clark Theater. William C. DeMille's political drama with a telephone girl as the storm center of its exciting story. Marguerite Clark will play this role of Wanda Kelly, the alert operator who, at her switchboard near the office of the Hotel Keswick, discovers the existence of a conspiracy which involves the political fortunes and personal honor of the Hon. Mark Robertson, and into which the good name of a woman is dragged with a serious menace of disgrace.

The play will be presented according to David Belasco's stage directions, insuring a realistic production. There are many intensely emotional scenes in its story. It is believed that Miss Clark will reveal gifts as an actress richer than any with which she has been credited thus far, largely owing to lack of opportunity in other parts.

The new leading man, Thurston Hall, will play the roll of the Hon. Mark Robertson, a virile character, and Stage Manager Horace Mitchell has cast the company effectively.

"THE HOUSE NEXT DOOR." Suburban Garden Theater. A three-act comedy of racial prejudice by J. Hartley Manners, first presented in this country with J. E. Dodson, the famous English character-actor, in its leading role of Sir John Costwold, a testy old Englishman who resents the proximity of Sir Isaac Jacobson, his next-door neighbor.

Morris McHugh is cast as Sir John and Joseph O'Meara as Sir Isaac, the play's story revolving around the families of these two racial types. Cecil Cotswold (Arthur Behrens) falls in love with Esther Jacobson (Ethel Valentine), and Adrian Jacobson (Joseph Gillow) with Ulrica Cotswold (Diana Storm) and the parents of these young people make life miserable for them until common sense does away with the racial animosities that caused all the trouble. Wilbur Higby, always competent, is especially well cast as Walter Lewis, a concert booking agent with many humorous lines, and others in the cast are Florence Vincent, Daniel Hall, Philip Sheffield, Antoinette Rochte and Alice Gale.

Mabel Talliaferro has been signed for a limited Suburban engagement, opening next Sunday night. Her repertoire will include her stellar successes, "Polly of the Circus" and "Such a Little Queen."

RIGO AND VAUDEVILLE. Delmar Garden. Vaudeville bill headed by La Belle Clark and Grand Duke, her dancing horse. Another headliner is Flo Adler, singing comedienne, and her pickaninnies. The Mullani Sisters, "Girl Hussars," and the Riva Larsen Troupe of men and women gymnasts complete the program.

Rigo and his orchestra have scored a big success at the villa. It is Rigo's boast that he can play any composition requested. Miss Vivian Ethel Hehl is the soprano soloist with the orchestra. The Delmar bathing beach is a big popular attraction.

VAUDEVILLE. Forest Park Highlands. Bill headed by the Ofedon Manon Opera Company, two women and two men, singing grand opera selections in costume. Other features are Lew Hawkins, the old-time minstrel; Ethel Kirk and Billy Fogarty, in chatter and song; the Rolando Brothers, hand-balancers, and the Juggling Millers, "the Klassy Klub Kids."

Beginning tomorrow, the letter carriers will hold their outing at the Highlands all week, closing Saturday evening with the giving away of a piano-player.

"THE POLITICIAN." Mannion's Park. Tabloid musical comedy presented by Jack Reid and Company, introducing this week O. C. Ruef, eccentric comedian, and Frank Carroll, singer and actor. Other principals are Ella Gilbert, Etta Journs, David C. Broderick, Ralph Lyons, the Esher Sisters, Lillian Brown and Evangeline Murray.

"MARY STUART." Photoplay. New Grand Central. Production by Thomas A. Edison, Inc., with Mary Fuller in the title role of the beautiful and ill-fated Queen of Scots. Story tells of plots, intrigues and persecutions by the relentless Elizabeth, Queen of England, and many great historical characters appear. Special music.

FRANK L. TALBOT VAUDEVILLE. Bonita. From Monday to Thursday, inclusive, Nicholls-Nelson Troupe, hoop-rollers and diabolo players; Grimm and Elliott, black-face comedians and singers; Mirambo Trio, high-class and popular music; Davis-Gladhill Trio, bicycle and motor cycle novelty experts. All Hippodrome acts.

PHOTOPLAYS. Juniata. High-class picture show. Matinee today. "The Silver Cigarette Case" (Vita); "The Attorney for the Defense" (Kalem), and other late subjects.

VAUDEVILLE. Shenandoah. Matinee today. Entertaining vaudeville and latest motion pictures.

Lackawanna Trains on Time.

The remarkable punctuality of the Lackawana passenger service as given in the official record for April, 1913, shows that the Chicago and Buffalo trains on the Lackawana Railroad arrived in New York on schedule time a total of 147 times and were late during the same period only three times.

VIVIAN HEHL RETAINED AT DELMAR THIS WEEK

MISS VIVIAN HEHL

So pronounced was the success achieved by Miss Vivian Ethel Hehl, a St. Louis singer, as soprano soloist with the Delmar Garden orchestra this past week, that her engagement has been continued for the week now opening and she will be heard at all afternoon and evening concerts.

The song numbers selected by Miss Hehl for this week are "My Hero," from "The Chocolate Soldier;" "My Cavalier," the "Venus Waltz Song" from "The Firefly," and "You Great Big Blue-Eyed Baby." She has an exceedingly pure and flexible voice of true emotional quality.

Miss Hehl has received several offers of engagements with musical comedy productions during the next regular winter season and it is likely that she will sign a contract with one of the leading New York producing managers in this field.

The Post-Dispatch is the only evening newspaper in St. Louis that receives or publishes news gathered by the Associated Press.

CHURCH SCHOOL PICNIC

Outing to Be in Charge of Lutheran Holy Cross Pastor.

The congregation of the Evangelical Lutheran Church of the Holy Cross, Miami street and Ohio avenue, will give its school picnic, Thursday, in Carondelet Park, on grounds Nos. 3 and 4. The picnic party will leave the school, march north to Miami street, east to Jefferson avenue and south to Chippewa street, where cars will be boarded and the picknickers taken to Kansas street. From there they will march to the park. The outing will be in charge of Rev. C. C. Schmidt, pastor. Refreshments and meals will be served.

LAWN PARTY AT CHURCH

St. Catherine's Parish Will Give Euchre Tuesday.

The members of St. Catherine's Parish, 6900 Page avenue, St. Louis County, will hold their annual lawn party, euchre and dance on the church grounds Tuesday evening.

A parochial school will be opened in September for the first time and will be in charge of sister teachers. Father Nugent is of the opinion that about 100 children will be in attendance on opening day. The school hall is in the basement and is up-to-date in every respect.

TWO COLLIDE; ARBITRATE

Lawyer and Teamster of Kirkwood Adjust Their Damages.

James Campbell, a lawyer, living at Kirkwood, and Charles A. Kohl, a teamster, arbitrated their damages when their vehicles collided Friday morning at Twenty-second and Locust streets. Neither the automobile nor the wagon was damaged to any considerable extent.

The police, in their report, by mistake stated that Campbell was James Campbell, the millionaire broker.

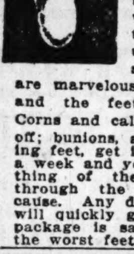
FRECKLES

Don't Hide Them With a Veil; Remove Them With the Othine Prescription.

This prescription for the removal of freckles was written by a prominent physician and is usually so successful in removing freckles and giving a clear, beautiful complexion that it is sold by your druggist under an absolute guarantee to refund the money if it fails.

Don't hide your freckles under a veil; get an ounce of othine and remove them. Even the first few applications should show a wonderful improvement, some of the lighter freckles vanishing entirely.

Be sure to ask the druggist for the double strength othine; it is this that is sold on the money-back guarantee. —ADV.



Nervous Wrecks From Sore Feet Gives Cure

The nagging irritation from daily foot torture causes thousands of nervous break-downs. Besides there is the pain, the haggard face and peevish disposition. Don't waste an hour; here is a treatment that will cure your feet quickly. No matter how many patent medicines you have tried in vain this treatment, formerly known only to doctors, will give prompt results. "Dissolve two tablespoonfuls of Calocide compound in a basin of warm water. Soak the feet in this for full fifteen minutes, gently rubbing the sore parts." The effects are marvelous. All pain goes instantly and the feet feel simply delightful. Corns and callouses can be peeled right off; bunions, aching feet, sweaty, smelling feet, get immediate relief. Use this a week and your foot troubles will be a thing of the past. Calocide works through the pores and removes the cause. Any druggist has it in stock or will quickly get it. A twenty-five cent package is said to be enough to cure the worst feet.—ADV.

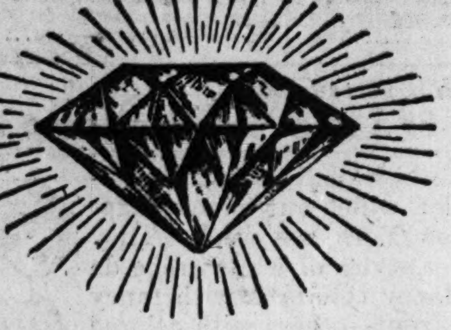
Baby Carried by Engine.

LONDON, June 21.—Caught by a pilot engine on the Caledonian Line near Beattock, the 2-year-old daughter of a track layer, was carried for 40 yards on the front of the engine. Her shoes and stockings were torn off, but her only injury was a broken cheek bone.



Invest Your Idle Funds in Diamonds

As the world grows in wealth the demand for Diamonds increases—but the supply is declining. The Brazil and India fields are exhausted and mining in South Africa is more and more expensive as the mines go deeper.

A diamond is today the most desirable investment. Its value is the same all over the world—it can be realized upon at any time.

These facts and the sentiment that is associated with it make the Diamond the most desirable of all gifts and a good investment besides.

Our gems are carefully mounted in the most modern creations, and priced as low as good business methods will permit.

LET ME PAY YOU $300 MONTHLY

for one hour of your time daily. I'll show you how to earn this amount co-operating with me, in addition to what you can make in the mail order business.

If You Stay BOSSED You'll Be Lost.

I don't care who you are or what your business is, doctor, lawyer, merchant, clerk, butcher, baker or farmer, you must sooner or later get familiar with the way to sell goods by parcels post.

The time is coming swiftly and surely, when a large percentage of the business of this country will be transacted by mail. Look about you, read the papers, note the business now done. Every farm paper is for the parcels post, the goods are going out daily. Get my book and learn how with a little idea and only $100 cash I received $650,000 in 18 months, and secured 400,000 customers and built an immense mail order business.

Don't think there is any mystery about this or that you might not do the same—you might go far beyond it.

I offer to explain to you and show you honest, legitimate plans to duplicate my success and make more money selling by mail than you ever dreamed of. I show you how to start, and I help make you successful.

Don't confuse my talk with the cheap schemes you have read about or investigated.

What I offer is straight, lean, practical and profitable and only requires on your part a decision to let me help you forward toward the success goal, and introduce you to thousands of cash customers ready and willing to trade. The plans I offer are positive in their cash-producing powers, and so simple are they that even a ten-dollar bill will start you in some of them.

But first send for my free book. It will tell you how you can increase your first investment from week to week, and in a short time build up a handsome dollar-producing business, selling to your own customers in every state in the Union.

You know that the other fellow is making money. So can you. It's knowing what to sell and how to sell it. This information I furnish. I will explain everything from start to finish and supply you with 30 plans to select from, any of which are feasible, and all of them are money makers.

I start you right, and stand by you for a whole year and make you win. You don't need cash for a stock of goods, your customers send you cash in advance, enabling you to take their cash and fill their orders.

If you are not in business, and want to make money, stop wishing and get busy. Make up your mind to go forward. Believe in yourself. Let me help you start. The ready coin is jingling in the pockets of more than 80 million potential customers to whom I can introduce you. They don't know you now, but you can make them know you. Fix this parcels post idea firmly in your mind. It's going to be a big business winner for every man who starts right. My own individual success should convince you that I am qualified to help you win. I show you how to let the [illegible] your work, and make the newspapers drive [illegible] give you all the information, the money-making plans, printed arguments for form letters and everything necessary to start at once. This information I offer is more than valuable—it's the greatest opportunity ever presented to men and women who want to succeed, and work for themselves. What has cost me a million dollars and years of hard work you can get the immediate advantage of, and a letter or post card will bring all the particulars. Remember that wishing will get you nothing. Investigate this offer at once. Success comes only to those who can see, who will grasp a money-making idea and go forward. Act now. Get Busy. Spend one penny for a post card. I refer you to any firm in Denver and to a legion of satisfied customers.

It is the most helpful, uplifting, FREE business book ever offered young or old, man or woman. I guarantee that you will learn something to your advantage. WALT C. CUNNINGHAM, President, The Mail Order School, Suite 1140 Ernest Bldg., Denver, Colo.

ENDORSEMENT

May 14, 1913.

To Whom It May Concern:

This is to certify that I have personally known Mr. Walter C. Cunningham for several years. I know him to be a man of sterling integrity, honest in his dealings with the public. He has made a success of business in Denver. Is now the head of the Mail Order School and other large enterprises.

It is with pleasure that I add this word of commendation, and permit is granted to use this letter, that others will know his standing, and my personal esteem.

Faithfully yours,
HENRY J. ARNOLD,
Mayor.

PROOF FOR THE SKEPTICS

ROY B. ADAMS
Certified Public Accountant
Denver, Colo.

February 8, 1913.

To Whom It May Concern:

This is to certify that I have this 8th day of February, 1913, as an Expert Accountant, examined all the books of the Mail Order enterprises belonging to Mr. W. C. Cunningham, and I herewith make the affidavit and positive statement that his receipts for the past eighteen months, selling merchandise by mail through his various Companies, have exceeded Six Hundred and Fifty Thousands Dollars ($650,000.00).

This statement has no bearing whatsoever upon the Mail Order School, as I have not examined the books of the Mail Order School, but have only examined those of his other Companies.

In all my experience as an Expert Accountant I have never seen such gigantic successes as this man Cunningham has built up in so short a time. Yours truly,

ROY B. ADAMS,
Certified Public Accountant.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 8th day of February, 1913. My commission expires April 27th, 1914.

CLARA L. MARTIN,
Notary Public.

3-DAY CONVENTION HERE OF MILLINERY TRAVELING MEN

Three Hundred Delegates Expected for Sessions Opening Tomorrow at Planters.

The tenth annual convention of the Millinery Traveling Men's National Association will open tomorrow morning at 9 o'clock at the Planters Hotel. The convention will be in session for three days.

Three hundred delegates from all parts of the United States are expected to attend. This afternoon the advance guard will arrive and a reception committee of local millinery dealers will meet them at Union Station.

Organized in St. Louis.

This national association was organized in St. Louis in the spring of 1904, for the purpose of creating a better feeling among millinery traveling men and to place the sales department of the large millinery houses of the country on a more efficient basis. The present officers are: P. G. Lind, Kansas City, president; vice-president, Charles Prohl, Milwaukee; M. A. Robards of Louisville, George C. Crafts of Des Moines and George Walther of Cincinnati, secretary and treasurer.

Pleasure in Afternoons.

The afternoons of the convention will be given over to programs of recreation and pleasure for the visiting delegates arranged by a local entertainment committee of milliners. Special entertainment features have been prepared for the women accompanying the delegates.

Mayor Kiel will deliver an address of welcome to the delegates at the opening of the convention. Dr. W. J. Williamson will offer a prayer. The closing event will be a banquet at the Planters Wednesday night, which will be followed by dancing.

Tells How to Gain Weight.

Marian Garden of 302 Broad street, Kansas City, Mo., is giving away free a beautiful little book that tells how any woman can increase her weight from 10 to 30 lbs. in a few weeks, by a simple home remedy that never fails to produce flesh. Then folks should certainly write Miss Garden today for a free copy of this valuable book.—ADV.

SWATS 10 PINTS OF FLIES

MAYSVILLE, Ky., June 21.—The Women's Club Fly Committee "went broke" on the first payday of their dead fly campaign. Fifty cents a pint had been offered for dead flies and everything went swimmingly on the first weekly payday until John Wesley Debold, aged 8, arrived.

The women had not counted on whole sale traffic when they apportioned their money and there was a skirmishing in private purses to make up enough to pay John Wesley $5.25 which the measures show to be due to him.

However, he got the money and the women are strengthening their financial position. More than $15 was paid out the first day.

$2.50 Monogram Stationery, 35c

We repeat this most extraordinary offer at the request of many of our patrons who failed, for some reason or other, to avail themselves of its benefits the last time this offer was made.

If the die was made to your special order you could not duplicate this offer under $2.50.

ONE QUIRE ELITE CORRESPONDENCE CARDS OR WRITING PAPER with engraved three-letter monogram or given name (feminine, such as Alice, Mabel, etc., comprising one word)—over 25 styles to select from, stamped in first quality gold, bronze or any color—with plain envelopes to match 35c

One of America's oldest engravers awoke to the fact that he had accumulated during his business life over 25,000 individual initials & combinations of monograms, & that he could reproduce any initial or monogram without having to make a new or original die.

By special arrangement we are permitted to use any of these monograms he may have on hand, and he is so sure that he has anything we might call for, that he has agreed to make up anything which he does not have without extra cost. That is the secret of our giving you $2.50 worth of monogram stationery for 35c.

We guarantee the execution of the work to be strictly first class. Of course you understand it will require about fifteen days or more to execute your order—so please commission us to proceed at once.

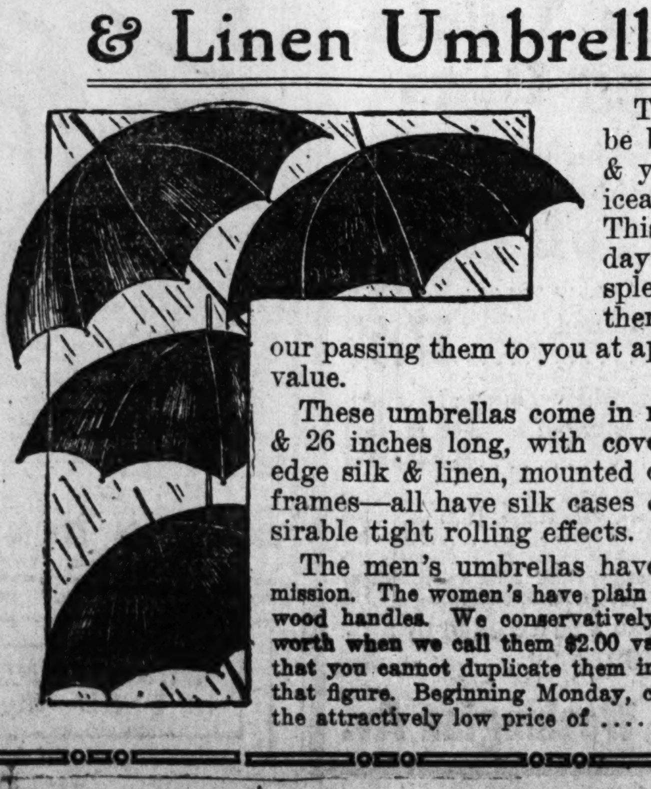
Men's & Women's $2.00 Silk & Linen Umbrellas, $1.05



The long dry spell is likely to be broken most any time now, & you will want a good, serviceable umbrella close at hand. This sale, which begins Monday morning, involves 1500 splendid umbrellas, & we own them at a price that permits our passing them to you at approximately one-half their value.

These umbrellas come in men's & women's styles, 28 & 26 inches long, with covers of the best deep taped edge silk & linen, mounted on dependable paragon steel frames—all have silk cases & tassels & come in the desirable tight rolling effects.

The men's umbrellas have handles of boxwood & plain mission. The women's have plain & fancy carved mission & boxwood handles. We conservatively estimate their worth when we call them $2.00 values. We know that you cannot duplicate them in the city under that figure. Beginning Monday, choice of any at the attractively low price of $1.05

PRESIDENT IN AUTO LOST IN MARYLAND HILLS IN A STORM

Man of the Countryside Directs Executive's Party on Right Road to Washington.

TAKE REFUGE FROM RAIN

Returning From Wedding of McAdoo's Son in Baltimore Have Hard Trip.

WASHINGTON, June 21.—In a 120-mile automobile trip, from north of Baltimore to the Capitol, which required almost four hours, President Wilson and his party were, for a part of the time, lost on the way during a storm, and later were forced to seek shelter under a bridge because of the heavy rain.

It was Frank Primrose, a man of the countryside, who put the President's party on the right road, when he came across them floundering in the mud a few miles north of Baltimore.

"I'll tow you in," volunteered Primrose, who lives in Catonsville and who was motoring along with his family. He warned the chauffeurs not to attempt the route they had chosen, as the hills were muddy and dangerous. Primrose did not know that he was piloting the President of the United States, but discovered it later as he spied the American coat of arms on the President's car.

"I helped former Gov. Warfield get to town only yesterday," said Primrose proudly as he got the President's party on the right road and directed them to Baltimore.

Three big machines carrying the President, his family and secret service men plowed through water and mud at a good clip. Once, however, the rain was so heavy that the party stopped under a covered bridge. The 120-mile ride was the longest the President had taken in an automobile since he came to the White House.

Some of the members of the Cabinet came back by motor, but most of them returned on the special train.

The President and his Cabinet had gone to Baltimore to attend the wedding of Frank McAdoo, son of the Secretary of the Treasury, and Miss Ethel Preston McCormack, daughter of Mrs. Emerson.

A terrific electrical storm broke at 4 o'clock, the hour set for the wedding, and spoiled all the plans for a beautiful outdoor ceremony.

The storm came up suddenly as the bridal party was preparing for the march to the beflowered pergola, where the knot was to be tied, when the wind began to blow in tornado fashion, followed by a torrential rain. President and Mrs. Wilson, Vice-President and Mrs. Marshall and the entire Cabinet came over from Washington to attend the wedding. There were also present about 300 guests, many of them from New York.

Brookland Wood, the home of Capt. Emerson, is the finest estate in Maryland. It was formerly the home of H. Carroll Brown, who married a daughter of Marcus Daly, the copper king.

The large pergola in which the ceremony was to have taken place, was a mass of pink ramblers on the outside while the inside was lined completely with lilies.

From the house to the pergola the walk had been decorated with 24 standards of annunciation lilies, with 12 more standards just about the pergola, forming an enclosure where the President and other distinguished guests were to have been seated.

The alternate arrangements had been so carefully planned that they were carried out without any embarrassment and the wedding was solemnized in the drawing room.

ACCIDENTALLY KILLED BY HIS GRANDSON, 12

Farmer Struck by Greater Part of Shotgun Charge and His Wife Is Badly Hurt.

CLEVELAND, O., June 21.—Benjamin F. Hull, 65 years old, a prosperous farmer of Dover Center, near here, was killed instantly and his wife was probably fatally wounded by their 12-year-old grandson, Leroy F. Reisinger, of Elyria late today. The boy was playing with a shotgun which he did not know was loaded and discharged it. The greater part of the charge struck his grandfather in the head. Mrs. Hull was struck in the right side and face, the sight of one eye being destroyed.

Neither Hull nor his wife saw the boy playing with the shotgun, and as they fell wounded, the boy ran screaming to the house of a neighbor, saying his grandparents had been wounded by the explosion of cartridges placed on the stove. Later Sheriff Smith closely questioned young Reisinger, who finally told of the accidental shooting.

POLICEMAN IS SUNSTRUCK

Probationary patrolman Thomas Fay of the motor cycling squad suffered a sun stroke at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon while on duty at the corner of Grand and Washington avenues. Fay, when he felt himself grow dizzy, mounted his motor cycle and rode to the police garage at 2826 Market street, where he collapsed.

After receiving medical attention he was taken to his home at 5029 Prairie avenue.

WOMAN SAFELY DROPS 1000 FEET FROM PLANE

She Tests New Eleven-Pound "Lifeboat" Perfected by Los Angeles Aviator.

LOS ANGELES, June 21.—For the first time a woman yesterday made a descent from a rapidly-moving aeroplane to the earth in perfect safety.

Miss Tiny Broadwick made this experiment to test the efficiency and practical use of a new aerial "lifeboat," which just has been perfected by Glenn Martin and which, he believes, marks an important step in the safety of aviation and the military use of the aeroplane.

At a height of more than 1000 feet Miss Broadwick shot out from the machine and landed as lightly as a bird in a grain field close to the Griffith Park aviation field.

The "safety Park," as Martin calls his invention, weighs only eleven pounds and may easily be carried on the back of the aviator or a passenger. It is a parachute of thin, strong, silk, fastened to a mesh of Italian hemp. It is so folded into a canvas case that when the passenger drops it immediately unfolds.

52 MEXICAN FEDERALS KILLED FROM AEROPLANE

Masson, French Aviator With Rebels, Does Effective Work From Air Craft.

DOUGLAS, Ariz., June 21.—An official message from Gov. Pesquiera today stated the battle of Ortiz, begun Thursday, had been resumed.

The rebel war aeroplane, piloted by Didier Masson, the French aviator, did much execution among the federals, it is said. Pesquiera asserted the Huerta commander was surrounded and could not get away unless he cut through the rebel lines.

Masson, according to the message, dropped one bomb that killed 52 men. These and 100 other federal dead, together with 70 rebel dead and 70 wounded men, were brought to Hermosillo on a military train today.

Mosson in his war aeroplane late today forced the gunboats, Guerrero and Tampico, to steam out to sea from Guaymas harbor. The French aviator was accompanied on his flights by Capt. Manuel B. Alcalde, who assisted in dropping the bombs upon the town and driving the Mexican gunboats out of the harbor.

AUTOS IN BELLEVILLE ARE WORTH $493 EACH

City Assessor Finds 160 Machines in City With Total Value of $78,915.

Belleville automobiles are worth on an average $493 each according to a report of City Assessor Henry Dietrich, made public yesterday afternoon. His report shows there are 160 automobiles in Belleville, valued at $78,915. Last year the assessor reported 135 automobiles in the city. There are 642 horses in the city, worth on an average of $36 each. The report shows there are 918 watches and clocks in the city worth $8200, and only three organs. There are 421 pianos reported. Mortgages valued at $845,640 are assessed. The total valuation of real and personal property in the city is placed at $13,282,743, which is $67,395 higher than the valuation placed a year ago.

WOMEN RUN STREET CARS

Act as Strike Breakers After Regular Employes Quit.

PHOENIX, Ariz., June 21.—Three women operated street cars in the role of strike-breakers here tonight, and for three hours kept at their posts, in spite of disorderly conduct on the part of crowds.

When the motormen employed on the street railway system walked out at 6 o'clock the women offered their services.

The strike resulted from the discharge of a motorman against which the employes protested. The company succeeded in operating a half dozen cars tonight.

SUDDEN SHOWER BREAKS UP SPELL OF HOT WEATHER

Welcome Rainfall Causes Drop in Temperature and Relieves City and Country.

STOPS OUTDOOR SPORTS

Ball Game Is Called Off, Golfers Quit Field and Athletes Take to Cover.

It's a long lane that has no turning, and the same is true of a long spell of dry weather. Yesterday, the longest day in the year, daylight considered, the turn came. It had been an unusually long hot spell for St. Louis, and uncommonly dry for June. For 15 days not a drop of rain had been recorded in the city. Other cities had been hotter and also dryer, but that fact was small consolation for such St. Louisans as are in the habit of sweltering and asking foolish question No. 1, "Is it hot enough for you?"

Such citizens, prone to jump at conclusions, were saying, "This is the hottest day in the year," just as they have said of every day for the past fortnight. It was not the hottest—it was only 95 at 3 p. m., and that was three degrees cooler than the 1913 record—but still it was hot enough for you or anybody else.

Brisk Gale Comes With Rain.

It was so hot, in fact, that a Broadway moving picture show advertised an admission ticket and an ice-cold soda for one nickel and was beginning to get wealthy when, just a little in advance of 4 o'clock, the turn came. It was a sudden turn, and it came near taking a good many persons off their feet. It did succeed in taking their hats off their heads and sending them whirling through the dust-clouded air, for the change came with a wind velocity of 36 miles an hour. Men who were not required to chase their hats put them under their arms for security. Women caught on the streets by the sudden west wind held to their headgear with both hands and scurried for cover.

The wind's Derby race lasted 10 minutes, then slowed down to about 25 miles an hour. Meanwhile the temperature had fallen from 95 to 87 degrees, and with the sun no longer visible through the leaden clouds the coolness seemed even more so.

It was a distinct relief for the downtown section, though thousands had to dodge waste paper that was skyhooting through the air, and some janitors worked so hard to raise flapping awnings that they declared they felt hotter than before.

Cool Breeze Brings Comfort.

Notwithstanding the discomfort of dust, the rush to get inside buildings was not very great. The interior atmosphere cooled much more slowly than that in the open, so that it was a joy to stand outside and feel the caress of the breeze.

In the West End and other residential sections a twilight aspect supplanted the bright sunshine of the longest day, which was supposed to last until long past dinner time. Rain drops began to patter, and that long-hoped-for shower seemed to be in immediate prospect.

At the Glen Echo golf links in St. Louis County the downpour came in earnest. Coupled with a high wind, it broke the Trans-Mississippi tournament game that was being played about 4 o-clock, the players making quick strides for the clubhouse.

At the National League Baseball Park, Natural Bridge road and Vandeventer avenues, the gloom gathered so thickly that the game between the Cardinals and the Chicago Cubs was called at the end of the fourth inning because of darkness.

A big crowd witnessed the athletic meet at Washington University, and when the 36-mile breeze struck up it caused many to go through college who had not matriculated in the regular way. They took refuge in the first university building whose doors admitted them, and after a short course in patience they came out at the doors next to the street car line and hurried home. Some of the spectators returned to their seats in the grand stand after the wind subsided.

The rain which fell in the business district nearly an hour later than farther west, was the first since June 6. There was a shower May 27, but since that date but 26-100ths of an inch of precipitation was recorded in the local weather office.

Heavy Rain at Jefferson City Will Greatly Help Growing Corn.

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo., June 21.—The hottest day of the year in Jefferson City was broken tonight by a heavy rain, which wet the cultivated gardens and cornfields to a depth of several inches.

The heavy rain was preceded by a light shower and then followed by a slow rain which kept up for several hours.

The rain will be of incalculable value to the corn crop which Secretary Wilson of the State Board of Agriculture, said could have withstood drouth for 10 days more.

North Central Missouri Greatly Helped by Rains.

3 GREEKS, PUZZLED AT WORD, "JUMP" KILLED IN WRECK

They Stay on Car, While Four Others Leap to Safety in Collision.

CARS OVERLAPPED SWITCH

Woman Flags Train in Alton With Umbrella and Prevents Second Wreck.

Inability to understand the word "Jump!" cost the lives of three Greek laborers yesterday afternoon in a train wreck at Alton.

At 1:30 o'clock an engine drawing 16 cars ran into a switch of the Chicago & Alton railroad at Tenth and Piasa streets. Because the switching line was only long enough to accommodate eight cars, the engine and half of its train of cars overlapped the main line.

From the opposite direction came a freight train of 42 cars, each loaded with 20 tons of earth for use in the drainage construction work at Venice. In front of the freight engine was a flat car, on which rode seven laborers. There were four Greeks—Anton Papp, George Spiros, William Stavoris and Stephen Donka. Only Donka understood English. The others were Arval Pierce and Isaac Williams and his son, Isaac, both negroes.

The elder Williams, seeing that a collision was imminent, shouted "Jump!" He and his son, with Pierce and Donka, sprang to the ground and escaped unhurt, as the freight train was going only four miles an hour.

But the others only stared at the unfamiliar monosyllable. A moment later the flat car rammed the switch engine, and with the momentum of 840 tons of earth behind it, buckled so that its two ends closed like the blades of a pair of scissors. Papp, Spiros and Stavoris, caught between the timbers, were crushed to death. Both the engine crews escaped by jumping.

A third train would have smashed into the wreck had not Mrs. Nancy Leeson flagged it with an umbrella. Her husband, James Leeson, flagman at the crossing at Ninth and Piasa streets, was in St. Louis and left her in charge of his work.

A four-wheeled truck from the flat car rolled down the embankment, crashed through the kitchen wall of a house occupied by Mrs. John Plank and her family, splintered a stove and brought up under the table. It happened that none of the family was at home. A wrecking crew searched for some time before finding the vanished truck.

Coroner J. M. Sims of Collinsville said last night that he would ask the State Board of Railroad and Warehouse Commissioners to investigate the wreck.

ALLIGATOR NEARLY BITES OFF A BOY'S FINGER

Reptile's Jaws Have to Be Pried Open With Wrench After Clerk Is Attacked.

Ned Jones, 16 years old, a clerk in a drug store at 326 Missouri avenue, East St. Louis, was bitten yesterday afternoon by an alligator, which fastened its teeth so deeply in his hand that its jaws had to be twisted open with a monkey wrench.

The reptile, more than three feet long, was kept in a tank in the shop. Jones was feeding it with crawfish when it snapped his hand.

The proprietor, Charles S. Merker, seized a monkey wrench and beat the alligator over the head, hoping to make it relax its hold. This failing, he screwed the wrench on the animal's lower jaw and pried its jaws open. The youth's index finger was almost severed.

BOY STABS MAN ON CAR, LEAVES KNIFE IN HIM

Negro, Chased by Passengers, Escapes After Causing Superficial Wound

When riding on the back platform of a Market street car last evening, William S. Farrell, 30 years old, of 1228 Hickory street, was stabbed in the left hip by a negro boy, who boarded the car between Thirteenth and Fourteenth streets. The boy jumped from the car, leaving the knife sticking in Farrell's side. The weapon was removed by Capt. John Hartman of Engine Co. No. 3.

The negro boy was chased by passengers of the car, but escaped in the Twelfth street railroad yards. Farrell was taken to the city dispensary, where it was found the wound was superficial. Farrell told the police he had never seen the boy before.

TETANUS KILLS BOY WHO CUT FOOT WITH SHOVEL

Raymond Powell, 10-year-old son of William T. Powell, a wealthy farmer on the Collinsville road east of East St. Louis, died yesterday afternoon at Henrietta hospital from tetanus, the effect of cutting his foot with a shovel.

Wednesday afternoon the boy took off his shoes and stockings before going into a field to play. There he found a shovel, and began to dig a trench. At the first stroke he brought the shovel down on his foot. The wound was treated at home and was not considered serious until Thursday night, when he was seized with convulsions. He then was taken to the hospital.

RAILWAY CROSSING WATCHMAN FOUND IN SWOON AT POST

Train Crosses Unguarded Street While Man Lies Unconscious in Fatal Illness.

A fast mail train shot past the Southern Railway's Main street crossing in East St. Louis shortly after 6 o'clock yesterday morning while the night tower watchman lay unconscious on the floor of his tower. There was no flash of a danger signal to warn pedestrians or drivers of the train's approach, and as the steel coaches thundered across Main street the guard gates remained upright.

J. A. Lansaw, the day watchman, had just tumbled out of bed, and as he looked from the window of his room at 27 South Main street, just across the tracks from the tower, he saw the speeding train. Then he saw there was no sign of life in the tower.

No Reply to Signal.

The absence of the danger signal and the fact that the gates were not lowered alarmed Lansaw. He slipped on his clothes and hurried across the tracks.

The Main street crossing is in a thickly settled part of the East St. Louis factory district and 6 o'clock is the busiest hour of early morning traffic there.

At the base of the tower Lansaw called loudly at the open windows, to William Henry, the 63-year-old night watchman, and, receiving no reply, mounted a ladder to the trap-door entrance.

By agreement between the watchmen the trap-door is never opened by the tower's occupant unless a secret signal known only to them is given. This plan was adopted to prevent the watchman on duty from being interfered with by outsiders when in the midst of his work.

Lansaw gave the secret knock, but he failed to get a reply. Summoning help, he broke open the trapdoor and found the night watchman unconscious on the floor.

The police were notified, and Henry was taken in an ambulance to the Henrietta Hospital, where he remained unconscious until after 1 p. m. The surgeons considered his case something of a mystery. His appearance indicated that he might have been a victim of apoplexy, they said, but other signs indicated uraemic poisoning. They would not question him, fearing the least excitement might be fatal, and gave orders to the nurses that he must not be disturbed.

How long Henry was unconscious before Lansaw found him and how many trains may have passed the tower during his period of unconsciousness, leaving pedestrians at the peril of their lives, was not ascertained.

Henry lives at 100 North Sixth street, East St. Louis, but has no relatives, so far as the police have been able to learn.

Negro Pugilist Loses Suit of Young Woman Hit by Punching Bag.

CHICAGO, June 21.—Because Miss Ruth Mehl was hit in the face with a punching bag, Jack Johnson, the negro pugilist, must pay her $2500, a jury decided in the Circuit Court today. The young woman was struck by the bag which Johnson accidentally knocked from its fastenings in an exhibition at a theater last year. She sued for $25,000.

ADOLPHUS BUSCH III AND MRS. LAMBERT MARRIED

Grant Farm Lavishly Decorated With Flowers—Mrs. Jane Izard Denies Engagement to L. J. Nicolaus.

In the midst of roses and lilies of the valley, Mrs. Florence Parker Lambert last night became the bride of Adolphus Busch III, the ceremony taking place at the Grant Farm in the presence of a small group of friends and relatives.

In the issuance of the license for the marriage the bride's age was definitely stated for the first time. She is 31 years old, the license clerk was told. Busch is 22. She is the divorced wife of Marion L. J. Lambert, and has three children.

The Grant Farm place was lavishly decorated. In two large Oriental vases at the entrance, 500 American Beauty roses were placed. The alcove in the east wing of the large parlor was covered with a huge silk spider web, with ferns and roses. In the table decoration effects, 500 roses and 1000 lilies of the valley were used, and the center of the table was surrounded by tufted gold lace chiffon.

The bride's bouquet was a double arm shower of the most fragrant orchids.

The Rev. John W. Day, pastor of the Church of the Messiah, read the wedding ceremony.

Strictly a Family Affair.

August A. Busch, father of the bridegroom and active host of the evening, said before the wedding that the affair was so strictly a family one, aside from the few invited guests, that even the newspaper reporters were not invited to give an account of the ceremony.

The announced list of guests comprised Louis J. Nicolaus and Mrs. Jane Adger Izard and Mrs. Thomas S. Maffitt, Mr. and Mrs. Julius S. Walsh Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Otto Schubert, Mr. and Mrs. Otto Schubert Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Harry Troll and Mr. and Mrs. Edward Magnus. Otto Schubert Jr. was best man and Stafford Parker of Richmond, Va., gave away the bride, his sister.

The bridal pair, it was announced, will go to Cooperstown, N. Y., where August A. Busch has a summer home, and they may travel elsewhere in the East. On their return, they will live on Grandview farm, adjoining the Busch residence, where a home is being built for them.

Busch and his bride received a large number of gifts, but no list was given out, and it was not stated what the wedding gift of the bridegroom's grandfather, Adolphus Busch, was. He recently sent his granddaughter, Miss Lily Magnus, a check on the occasion of her marriage.

NO ENGAGEMENT, SAYS MRS. IZARD

Divorced Wife of Marine Officer Denies She Is to Wed Louis Nicolaus.

In their social circles it has been considered an open secret that Louis Nicolaus and Mrs. Jane Izard are engaged to be married. It was first expected by their friends that the announcement would be made at the Busch-Lambert wedding, and then again it was said the announcement would come from the home of her parents in Washington, where she is returning in a few days.

Mrs. Izard, however, last night after the Busch ceremony said to the Post-Dispatch: "There is no engagement and there is no idea of any engagement. It will, therefore, not be announced here, and it will not be announced in Washington, for there is nothing to announce.

"How such an idea ever got about I can't understand. We are not receiving the congratulations of our friends, and we do not expect to receive any congratulations, for there is nothing to congratulate us on. I am very sorry there has been so much notoriety about this, because it is quite embarrassing."

Nicolaus also denied there was an engagement.

Young Nicolaus, one of Busch's closest friends, like him, is the son of a wealthy brewer. He accompanied Mrs. Izard to the wedding. Like the bride, she is a handsome divorcee.

Nicolaus acted as his own chauffeur in driving Mrs. Izard to the Grant Farm. Earlier in the day he aided young Busch in getting his marriage license, signing for the absent bride-elect when the license was issued at the town home in Busch place.

Mrs. Izard is about the same age as Nicolaus, who is in the early twenties. She has light hair and brown eyes, and has been much admired during her stay here the last few months. She obtained a divorce here in January from Walter Blake Izard, a marine officer on foreign station, whom she accompanied to the Philippines after their marriage in 1906. She charged that Izard was attentive to a woman who was wearing a kimono on the occasion of Mrs. Izard's only meeting with her.

Louis Nicolaus is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Nicolaus of 2149 South Grand avenue. His father is president of the St. Louis Brewing Association, and his sisters are Miss Elsa Nicolaus and Miss Edna Griesedieck, whose engagement to Ed Stanard has been announced. Mrs. Izard is the daughter of Gen. and Mrs. W. T. Biddle, Gen. Biddle being commandant of the Marine Corps. Nicolaus and Mrs. Izard have been together at a number of South Side dances and dinner parties in the last few months. They were the only unmarried guests at the wedding.

NICKEL IN A METEORITE

Iron Also Found in 20-Ton Visitor: No Gold.

FRESNO, Cal., June 21.—The huge meteorite which landed on the farm of Fred Williams, and deceived him by its yellow gleam into the belief that he had unearthed a 20-ton nugget of gold proves to be composed of iron and nickel. Experts so reported today after a chemical test.

Williams found the meteorite at a depth of 16 feet. Jewelers casually inspecting samples said they were gold.

M'REYNOLDS IS ACCUSED OF TRYING TO BLOCK JUSTICE

California Prosecutor, in Charge of Mann Act Cases Against Sons of Prominent Democrats, Asserts That Attorney-General Yields to Destructive Influences.

TELLS THE PRESIDENT JUSTICE IS THWARTED

John L. McNab Also Says That Action Against Fuel Corporation has Been Deferred—Witnesses Tampered With, He Asserts.

By Associated Press.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 21.—Charging that U. S. Attorney-General McReynolds had ordered what he considered "fatal delays" in the prosecution of four men indicted by Federal grand juries, U. S. District Attorney John L. McNab of this city tendered his resignation by telegraph to President Wilson last night, with a request that it be accepted by the same quick method of communication.

Attorney McNab made public today the text of his telegram to the President, together with a message sent to the Attorny-General.

Message to President.

The telegraphic resignation to the President was as follows:

"Woodrow Wilson, President of the United States, Washington, D. C.:

"I have the honor to tender my resignation as United States Attorney for the Northern District of California, to take effect immediately. I am ordered by the Attorney-General, over my protest, to postpone until autumn the trials of Maury Diggs and Drew Caminetti, indicted for a hideous crime, which has ruined two girls and shocked the moral sense of the people of California and this, after I have advised the Department of Justice that attempts have been made to corrupt the Government witnesses, and friends of the defendants are publicly boasting that the wealth and political prominence of the defendants' relatives will procure my hand to be stayed through influence at Washington.

"In these cases two girls were taken from cultured homes, bullied and frightened in the face of their protests into going to a foreign state, were debased by the defendants, who abandoned their wives and infants to commit the crime.

"On receipt of the Attorney-General's telegram, I prepared my resignation, to take effect at the conclusion of the trial of the Western Fuel directors and the J. C. Wilson stock brokers cases, both of which I had instituted and which I wished to bring to a successful conclusion.

"Before I could send my resignation I received another telegram from the department ordering me to postpone the case against certain defendants of the Western Fuel Co. and not to try them unless ordered by the department.

Won't Be an Automaton.

"In bitter humiliation of spirit, I am compelled to acknowledge what I have heretofore indignantly refused to believe, namely, that the Department of Justice is yielding to influence which will cripple and destroy the usefulness of this office.

"I cannot consent to occupy this position as a mere automaton and have the guilt or innocence of rich and powerful defendants who have been indicted by unbiased grand jurors on overwhelming evidence, determined in Washington on representations on behalf of the defendants, without notice to me.

"I seem unable to convey to the department the understanding of the serious situation in which this action will leave this office. If the department, in future, has to review the findings of grand juries and nullify their indictments, then this office might as well be abolished; for its functions will have ceased to exist.

"Neither my sense of honor, nor public duty, can permit me thus to destroy the prestige of this office.

"With profound respect and regret that such a step is necessary, I have the honor, in view of my absolute inability to agree with the department, to ask that I be, by wire, immediately relieved from duty, in order that the Department of Justice may be permitted to carry out its policy in these cases without future obstruction by me.

"JOHN L. McNAB."

The message to Attorney-General McReynolds is similar in [illegible].

"I am profoundly convinced," it says, "that the action taken will destroy the prestige and ruin the usefulness of this office and result in ultimate escape from punishment of certain of these defendants."

"I have notified you that it is publicly charged in this State that the prosecution of the Diggs-Caminetti cases would be stopped by appeals to Washington. In the meantime, corruption and subornation of perjury will weaken and destroy the cases long before autumn is here."

The Mann act cases against Drew Caminetti and Maury I. Diggs have attracted widespread attention because of the prominence of the defendants' families.

BRIDGE APPROACH SNAGS DISCUSSED ON TRIP UP RIVER

City Officials and Alton and Mississippi Company Representatives Confer.

NO DECISION IS REACHED

Further Consideration of A. and M. Plan on Another Boat Trip Next Saturday.

Mayor Kiel, members of the Board of Public Improvements, the railroad committees of the Council and the House of Delegates and representatives of the Alton and Mississippi Railroad Co., discussed the proposed Alton and Mississippi East Side approach to the free bridge, when on a trip up the river yesterday on the city harbor boat, Erastus Wells.

At the outset of the conference, the question arose as to whether the city can legally acquire real estate for the purpose of owning, operating or leasing a railroad, as contemplated in the Alton and Mississippi approach plans. City Counselor Baird expressed the opinion that the city is without this power.

Provision of the Charter.

Attorney P. W. Haberman, representing the Alton and Mississippi Co., pointed to Section 26, Clause 14, Article 3, of the city charter, which he contended gives to St. Louis this right. The charter provision follows:

"To purchase, rent or lease within the limits of the city or elsewhere, any real estate or personal property, and to control, manage, sell or lease, or otherwise dispose of same, for such purposes and considerations as they may deem proper for the public welfare of the city."

Counselor Baird held that the charter provision applied to general municipal purposes.

"The city can purchase or lease real estate in the interest of the public service,' said Baird, "but on property so purchased it could not, for example, establish a municipal laundry. The right to own or operate a railroad or to lease a railroad from somebody else is a specific grant, and the city, under its charter, is not invested with any authority relating to public ownership of public utilities."

Legal Snag Is Struck.

This legal snag was struck when President Kinsey of the Board of Public Improvements and advocates of the Alton and Mississippi route pointed out that it was intended to build an elevated structure from the bridge to a point midway between the bridge and the bluffs, or about two and one-half miles in a southeasterly direction. From this line the approach would be at grade for the remaining distance.

It was the conclusion of Counselor Baird, Comptroller Player and Councilman Hines that the continuance of the approach as a surface railroad line would subject the whole proposition to legal uncertainty.

On the point of the city's right to abandon all of the Reber approach, except the 2300 feet extension from pier No. 4, the City Counselor said he was not ready to pass judgment. The hearing adjourned with these important questions under debate. Mayor Kiel, who presided, announced that a second conference will be held on the harbor boat next Saturday, to which all the members of the Municipal Assembly will be invited.

Plans of the Company.

The outing lasted from noon until 5 p. m. The uncompleted east side span of the free bridge was in full view of the St. Louis officials when the harbor boat swung into the river and began its trip to a point just above the Chain of Rocks.

Harbor Commissioner Arnold Hellmich was the official pilot in charge.

The Alton & Mississippi Railroad Co., of which Leo J. Scherer, an East St. Louis realty operator, is the only known promoter, has declared its intention of constructing a belt line from the municipal bridge approach on the east side, through St. Clair and Madison counties, to Alton. It leaves the line of the present located Reber approach at a point 233 feet east of the eastern pier of the bridge and therefore will require the use of that length of the Reber approach.

The approach then deflects in a southeasterly direction, bein constructed as an elevated structure, carrying the tracks over and above all railroad tracks and highways, until the structure crosses the St. Louis, Iron Mountain & Southern Railway, when the grade descend nearly to the natural surface.

Grade Crossings Eliminated.

President Kinsey of the Public Improvements Board argued that the advantage of this portion of the line is that all grade crossings are eliminated and that the approach to the bridge would be carried beyond the limits of East St. Louis, in the shortest practicable distance, and will interfere with the streets of St. Louis less than any other proposed approach.

Continuing from the point east of the St. Louis, Iron Mountain & Southern Railway, where the tracks would reach approximately the present surface, the grade would be level until the bluffs are reached, where the proposed belt line would turn northward and, ascending along the side of the hill, gradually reach a grade which would enable the tracks of the belt line to be carried over the tracks of the Illinois Central Railroad and the tracks of the Southern Railway.

According to figures supplied by the Alton & Mississippi officials, which President Kinsey of the B. P. I. says he has checked and found to be correct, the cost of the approach from the bridge to the bluffs, a distance of five miles, would be $150,000 less than the estimated cost of constructing the Reber approach.

Would Dominate Approach.

The fact was made clear, however, that the Alton & Mississippi Railroad Co. expects to dominate the proposed Alton & Mississippi approach to the bridge through the operation of its belt line. In answer to a query from Councilman Hines, Attorney Haberman and Promoter Scherrer said that any road using the Alton & Mississippi belt road will have to pay a toll.

The only difference some of the Assemblymen could distinguish between this proposition and the fear that the Terminal Association will bottle the bridge if the Reber approach is adopted, is that one of the corporations is a monopoly and up to the present the Alton & Mississippi has been considered an independent corporation.

But whether the Terminal Association or other powerful interests control the Alton & Mississippi is not disclosed. Promoter Scherrer refused again to reveal the identity of his financial backers.

Ends in the Swamps.

The company proposes to deed a right-of-way for an east side approach to the city of St. Louis for the nominal sum of $1. In order to make the approach a practicable one, it seems necessary for the city to enter into an arrangement whereby the Alton & Mississippi shall build for the city 15 miles of track, from the bluffs to the northern line of St. Clair County.

If City Counselor Baird's opinion prevails, the city can build only the elevated structure, which, as planned, would be 12,000 feet in length, or 1000 feet less than the length of the Reber approach. An extension of 12,000 feet from pier No. 4, along the line of the Alton & Mississippi, would terminate the east side bridge approach in the swamps of St. Clair County and make it inaccessible practically to all the trunk lines operating through East St. Louis.

In addition to the Mayor, the following city officials were guests of Commodore Hellmich on yesterday's trip: Comptroller Player, Water Commissioner Wall, Street Commissioner Talbert, Councilmen Hines, Pauley and Rower, and Delegates Gallagher, Francis, Singer, Hoffner and Hall. Mayor Kiel followed his open-door policy in extending the conference privileges to members of the press.

cently appointed Commissioner-General of Immigration by President Wilson. Diggs is a nephew of former State Senator Marshall Diggs of this State and is a man of wealth and strong political connections.

The two men are charged with having violated the Mann act in eloping to Reno, Nev., with two Sacramento girls of the high school age. Both Diggs and Caminetti have wives and families.

Robert Bruce and Sidney V. Smith of San Francisco are the Western Fuel Co. directors whom District Attorney McNab sought to bring to trial without delay. They and others of the Western Fuel Co. are charged with having defrauded the Government of customs duties on imported coal, through a conspiracy entered into with steamship and customs officials, by which weight records were falsified.

It was charged in evidence placed before the Federal grand jury that this conspiracy had extended over a long term of years and had cost the Government hundreds of thousands of dollars.

Rain Brings Reief to Many Missouri Counties

here indicate that they were general over the county. Tonight the indications are that the rains will continue over North Central Missouri. The rains will prove of incalculable benefit to the growing corn.

The corn was not damaged and favorable rains for the remainder of the summer will enable this section of the State to raise a bumper crop.

Very few if any oats will be benefited as the crop has begun to head and in many places cattle have been turned on the fields or they have been plowed under.

The conditions also will be favorable for planting millet, cow peas, and other short crops to take the place of the oats failure.

First Rain in Many Weeks Is Recorded in Scott County.

SIKESTON, Mo., June 21.—A good rain fell in some parts of Scott County today, the first in many weeks.

Hay and Potatoes Hard Hit in Illinois.

MOUNT VERNON, Ill., June 21.—The first rain for two months fell here this evening. Much good has been done for the corn crop. Hay and potatoes are practically ruined.

Showers at Montgomery, More Rain in Prospect.

MONTGOMERY, Mo., June 21.—Local showers fell this afternoon with bright indications for more rain. The drouth has been the worst for several years, with no good rains since April.

Nevada Has Light Rain, but More Is Needed for Corn Crop.

NEVADA, Mo., June 21.—The temperature here this afternoon reached 100 degrees, but a light rain late in the day cooled the air. Unless the corn in this section of the State gets a thorough wetting within the next few days, it will fall under early estimates by many thousands of dollars. The rain this afternoon is said to have been heavy in sections, but it was not general.

ITALY RESENTS PLAN TO CUT IMMIGRATION

European Nation's Editors Grow Wrathy Over Proposed Restriction in America.

Copyright, 1913, by Press Pub. Co. (New York World.)

ROME, June 21.—Senator Dillingham's bill to restrict the number of immigrants into the United States, from southern and eastern Europe to an annual limit of 10 per cent of the entire resident population of that particular nationality to any state, is already raising a cry of alarm in the Italian press.

The Vita, a radical journal of large circulation, publishes a fiery article against the bill in principle, but waits for fuller particulars before opening a regular campaign against any restrictive measure touching Italian subjects. The article concludes:

"At this moment we confine ourselves to discussing the question on general lines. It is a question of vital importance for our emigration. We raise a preliminary cry of alarm so as not to be taken unawares."

"Republican Has Quit, I am Shedding No Tears," Says McReynolds.

BALTIMORE, Md., June 21.—"A Republican District Attorney has resigned and I am shedding no tears," was the only comment Attorney-General McReynolds would make when told of the San Francisco dispatch that United States District Attorney John McNab had wired his resignation to the President.

McReynolds was at the McAdoo-McCormack wedding at Brookland Wood when informed of McNab's resignation.

14 SERGEANTS ARE PROMOTED; 8-HOUR SHIFT IN EFFECT

Acting Lieutenants Will Have Charge of Police Districts From Midnight to 8 A. M.

At midnight 14 police sergeants became acting lieutenants and the new eight-hour shift for captains and lieutenants went into effect. The Police Board at a special meeting yesterday decided to shorten the hours of the district commanders and to do so created the rank of acting-lieutenant.

The sergeants promoted are Michael Hendy of the Carondelet District; James J. McGlynn, Wyoming Street; Cornelius Meehan, Soulard Street; Peter Anton, Central; Dennis Gleason, Carr Street; James J. Moran, North Market Street; Matthew Cummins, Angelica Street; Daniel Driscoll, Magnolia Avenue; Charles L. Hall, Laclede Avenue; Sidney H. Phillips, Dayton Street; James Walsh, Deer Street; Thomas Hagerty, Newstead Avenue; James A. St John, Page Boulevard; and Peter Joyce, Mounted.

Under the eight-hour schedule the captains will be in command of the districts from 8 a. m. to 4 p. m., lieutenants from 4 p. m. to midnight and acting lieutenants from midnight to 8 a. m. No increase in pay accompanies the promotion, but the new commanders, when on duty, will have full charge of their districts and act with as much authority as either captain or lieutenant.

The 14 vacancies thus created in the rank of sergeant will be filled when the Police Board names 35 sergeants next month. Those who are not assigned to precinct duty will serve as detective sergeants. The Efficiency Bureau has not yet rated the examinations of the 360 patrolmen who are candidates for promotion.

WOMAN'S ABILITY TO RUN FAST AUTO QUESTIONED

Not Temperamentally Fit, Coroner Says in Exonerating Mrs. Woodford for Killing.

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., June 21.—Coroner John J. Phelan today exonerated Mrs. Isabel H. Woodford of criminal responsibility for the death of William Steinhauster, who was killed by her automobile on June 3. Steinhauster, awaiting a trolley car, became confused at the approach of the touring car. Mrs. Woodford is the widow of Stewart L. Woodford, former ambassador to Spain.

Coroner Phelan takes occasion in the finding to express his "grave doubt whether women in a large degree are temperamentally fitted or physically equipped for the driving of high-powered machines in populous places."

He says that while in this case the driver acquitted herself with the necessary skill, he has "a conviction that situations and emergencies arise when masculine rather than feminine skill and judgment in the management of machines is required for the protection of life and limb in public places."

Peacemaker Shot and Killed.

EVANSVILLE, Ind., June 21.—Henry Berger, aged 52 years, a saloon keeper, was shot and instantly killed by Charles Meissner, a carpenter, aged 60 years, this afternoon. Meissner surrendered. Berger tried to stop a fight in his saloon between Meissner and another man.

BANKERS, IN REPLY TO SENATE, INDORSE ALDRICH'S SCHEME

Central Bank Favored as Solution of Financial Problems of the U. S.

BOND CURRENCY OPPOSED

Present System Arbitrarily Limits Circulation, Says Commission in Report.

By Associated Press.

NEW YORK, June 21.—Methods which should be pursued in reforming the currency system of the country, according to the views of the American Bankers' Association, were outlined today in a detailed statement issued by the currency commission of that organization.

The statement, which answers 33 questions formulated by a subcommittee of the Committee on Banking and Currency of the United States was prepared by the commission, which recently convened in Atlantic City, N. J.

The commission indorsed the currency plan devised by the National Monetary Commission, of which Senator Aldrich of Rhode Island was chairman.

It made no reference to the bill recently prepared at Washington with the co-operation of President Wilson. Its recommendations, in fact, were framed before the publication of the administration bill. The commission urges that whatever system is adopted to be kept out of politics.

The commission made no attempt to formulate a complete currency system, its recommendations being guided by the questions put to it by the subcommittee of the Senate. It did state its belief, however, that a central banking institution should be established under Governmental control. No reference was made as to methods to be employed in the regulation of such an institution, or the appointment or election of its managing heads.

Privately-Owned Bank Favored.

In expressing its ideas as to the establishment of a central bank, the commission, while not declaring for the creation of an institution similar to the great central banks of the principal European countries, points out that "the experience of commercial nations is that results can be better accomplished by the creation of a privately owned central organization dominated and controlled by the Government, as for instance, the Imperial Bank of Germany or the Bank of France. It serves to take the matter out of politics."

"The great danger," the statement continues, "is that if borrowers go direct to the Treasury, politics will become an all-important and dominating influence."

In answer to the direct question whether there should be a central reserve association, with branches or a number of reserve associations, with or without central control, the bankers replied:

"In our opinion one central reserve association, with branches, would best serve our present necessities. Failing that, a small number of regional reserve associations, also with branches, might be organized to serve the purpose. The smaller the number of regional reserve associations, however, the more effective the reserve control. If there are to be a number of regional reserve associations, they should be under some kind of control, in which both the Government and the various associations should have representation.

Opposes Bond Currency.

The commission does not favor the continuance of bond currency, the objection being that the volume of currency is thus arbitrarily limited.

"One unfortunate consequence of this artificial condition," the statement continues, "is that the nation's bonds, which should be widely held by citizens as their choicest investment, are held almost exclusively by banks, for circulation or Government deposits."

The bankers do not commit themselves to any definite statement whether there should be any change in the present requirement of law that 25 per cent of deposits shall be held as reserve. The advisability of such a change, in their opinion, would depend upon the manner in which the reserves are to be controlled and protected.

One of the most important recommendations of the commission is made in reply to the question:

"Should an elastic currency be authorized by law?"

"We believe that such currency should be authorized by law," the answer runs. "The amount to be controlled by the gold reserve requirements against it. Such reserves should be ample, not less than 50 per cent as a recognized minimum. A special tax might be levied upon any deficiency of the reserve below the stipulated amount of it, this tax to be increased as the deficiency increases. Such provision would, in our opinion, prevent overexpansion of the currency.

"Such currency should be issued by a central reserve association, the commission believes, rather than by a member of a regional reserve or the United States Treasury. These notes should be made a first lien, not of the Government, but of holders of the notes upon the assets of the association which issues them."

Replying to the question as to whether or not all currency should be based upon gold, the commission says:

"Reserve money should preferably be gold, but the proportion of greenbacks and silver now included in our so-called lawful money, if not increased, is of diminishing importance, and if continued as eligible for reserve, will not cause embarrassment.

"The percentage of reserve money against deposits, whether in the form of deposits subject to check, or in the form of circulating notes, should be left to the discretion of the management of the central or regional reserve association, but if a restriction is imposed it should be in the form of a tax upon the deficiency in reserve when below 50 per cent."

The indorsement of the National Monetary Commission's currency plan was in response to a request for an opinion as to the merits of this plan and what modifications, if any, should be made. The commission replied:

"We are familiar with the recommendations of the National Monetary Commission made to Congress in January, 1912, and are on record as having indorsed and recommended that measure."

ENTIRE CABINET STANDS BY WILSON ON CURRENCY BILL

President Assumes Full Responsibility for Measure Only After Ministers Approve It —Bryan to Issue Statement.

By Wire From the Washington Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, June 21.—The administration currency bill was in course of digestion by members of both houses of Congress today. In the case of some members, the bill has got somewhat beyond the digestive stage to the stage of discussion. This discussion is of two classes, for and against.

Of all the criticisms heard, the one which stands out the most prominently is that fundamental which places the whole supervision of the reserve board under the dominance of the President.

The President holds that there is no middle ground to pursue; that either the President or Wall street must dominate, and he prefers that the President of the United States exercise that power.

Secretary of State Bryan takes this view in a statement which he will give out tomorrow on the currency bill, as it has been presented to the House Committee on Banking and Currency. The President and Secretary of State told the correspondent of the Post-Dispatch that the whole Cabinet took the same view.

Is Preventive Measure.

Before large amounts of reserve currency could be thrown into a region by the regional reserve bank, or the Treasury Department, there must be a cause, and the purpose of the law is to prevent causes, and it is believed by the President that it will.

The President informed members of the House Banking and Currency Commission last night that there would be objections to the bill as have been cited here, and he said he wanted it understood that he was fathering the bill and would take full responsibility for everything in it.

He told the members that he wished they would accept the bill as an administration bill and push it through the House as such. He has made the same request of several Senators.

Secretary Bryan said tonight that the President assumed full responsibility for all that was in the bill, but he did not do so until all of the Cabinet members had been heard and their views had been fully discussed He said that the discussion led to every member coming around to the President's point of view, which is the bill.

Bryan to Discuss Bill.

Secretary Bryan said he was not only pleased with the bill, but that his statement tomorrow would set forth why he is pleased with it. He will discuss the bill in more or less detail in his statement.

The Secretary of State expected to give out his statement tonight, and he prepared it before going to Baltimore this afternoon. After a conference with the President, however, he decided he would not give it out until tomorrow.

The purpose of the change is to make the Bryan statement dovetail with the President's message on currency, which he will read in the House Monday afternoon.

The Secretary of State has read the message and he said he regarded it as one of the best State papers he had ever read.

2-CENT FARE LAW CAUSES CHANGES ON MISSOURI PACIFIC

New Passenger Schedule Announced, Retrenchment Being Necessary.

Officials of the Missouri Pacific-Iron Mountain System have prepared a new schedule for passenger train service, which will go into effect at 12:01 a. m. Wednesday. The recent decision of the Supreme Court sustaining the 2-cent passenger fare law in Missouri has made retrenchments necessary, officials say.

Train No. 9, leaving St. Louis at 8:10 p. m., will be consolidated with trains 5 and 3. Carthage and Joplin equipment will be carried by No. 5, the fast mail to Kansas City, which leaves St. Louis at 5:50 p. m. Train 10, eastbound, will be consolidated with No. 4 and will arrive in St. Louis at 7:10 a. m., instead of at 7:40 a. m.

Train 2 will be consolidated with No. 8, leaving Kansas City at 12:10 p. m and arriving here at 9:45 p. m.

Train 11, which leaves St. Louis at 11:30 p. m., will reach Atchison, Kan., at 9:55 a. m., 15 minutes earlier than at present, and St. Joseph at 10:45 a. m., 25 minutes ahead of the present schedule.

Train 22, giving local passenger service between Kansas City and St. Louis, instead of departing from Kansas City at 6:50 a. m., will depart at 7:45 a. m. and will arrive here at 7:20 p. m., instead of 6:10.

On the Iron Mountain, train No. 1, which formerly left St. Louis at 9:25 a. m. for Houston, Galveston and South Texas points, has been consolidated with No. 3, leaving St. Louis at 9:05 a. m., and will maintain the same schedule as the latter train to Little Rock, Texarkana and all points beyond in Texas. No. 5, which formerly departed at 8:15 p. m., hereafter will leave St. Louis at 8:31 p. m.

Train No. 9 to Memphis will depart at 5:31 p. m., instead of 5 p. m., being consolidated as far as De Soto with No. 31. It will arrive in Memphis at 8:35 a. m. The Memphis sleeper will not leave St. Louis on that train, but will depart at 9 p. m. on train 17 and make connection with No. 9 at Poplar Bluff, thus giving improved sleeper service between St. Louis and Memphis.

NEGRO SHOOTS CHIEF OF POLICE, IS LYNCHED

Mob of 400 in Americus, Ga., Riddles Hanging Body With Bullets.

AMERICUS, Ga., June 21.—William Redding, a negro, who shot and seriously wounded Chief of Police William C. Barrow here tonight, while Barrow was taking him to prison, was recaptured and lynched by a mob.

The mob, numbering about 400, took the negro from the prison and hanged him to a cable at a street corner, unmoved by the pleadings of a minister in Redding's behalf. The mob riddled the body with bullets.

Chief Barrow, although badly hurt, fired several times at Redding, three other negroes receiving slight injuries.

Redding was captured and placed in jail. The mob overpowered the Sheriff and deputies, tied a rope around the negro's neck and led him through the streets. After firing at the swinging body for about half an hour, the mob dispersed. Late tonight the body had not been taken down.

GIRL OFFERS KIDNEY TO SAVE MERCURY VICTIM

Her Sacrifice Is Rejected and Patient Will Die by Monday, Physicians Say.

CHICAGO, June 21.—Miss Lula M. Linden today offered one of her kidneys to save the life of Lizzie Silverman, victim of bichloride of mercury, at the University Hospital. The offer arrived too late. Miss Silverman's last chance for victory in her fight with death flickered away with an unsuccessful operation this afternoon when a pint of blood was taken from Miss Silverman's veins and a like amount of salt water injected.

The letter containing the offer from Miss Linden was received after the physicians had announced that death probably would come Monday night.

Dr. O. W. Katz, Dr. B. H. Breakstone and Prof. Walter S. Haines announced the offer had come too late. If it had come a day or two earlier it might have been accepted.

The girl took the poison by mistake last Tuesday.

Carbolic Acid No Corn Cure.

EVANSVILLE, Ind., June 21.—Smith Easkins and wife today placed carbolic acid on their corns and had to call in a physician, who says both will lose several of their toes as a result.

FATS GET A HOME RUN ON SINGLE BUT LEANS WIN, 37–14

380-Pound Man With Corkball Bat in Sensational Circuit in Maplewood Contest.

George Stovall and Miller Huggins should have seen Charley Bell, who weighs 380 pounds, make a home-run on a single at Maplewood yesterday. It was the feature play in the charity game between the Fats and Leans of Maplewood and though it did not prevent the Leans from winning, it somewhat redeemed the reputation of the Fats, who had been winners in four previous annual games. Here is how it was done.

"Fatty" Bell stepped to the plate in the fourth inning with a cork ball bat and slapped the pill on the nose so gently that it fell between first and second. Then as he galloped toward first the Leans' second baseman threw the ball at first. The spectators were yelling to Bell that he might as well save his wind when the ball flew over the first baseman's head and landed in front of the grandstand.

Bell Kept on Running.

Bell was game. Instead of stopping at first for a rest, he kept on going, and the Leans' catcher tried to put him out by throwing the ball to second, but the heave was wild. The ball went out to left field and Bell started for third. He was halfway when the left fielder threw the ball toward third. But the left fielder was either wild or the ball was crazy with the heat, for it flew back to the grand stand. Then Bell trotted home and reached the bag while the Leans' catcher was turning somersaults in an effort to reach the ball.

After that sensational play "Fatty" Bell, amid the enthusiastic shouts of the crowd, groped his way to the bench and sat still for half an hour before he was able to get in the game again.

But the Leans won by a score of 37 to 14. The game went the full nine innings, despite a drizzling rain, which fell during the last five innings.

Scores Six Hits, Five Runs.

It was estimated that about 1100 persons witnessed the game and most of them were women. The fats weighed in at 1987 pounds, including Bell, and the Leans totaled their weight at 1216. The average weight of the Fats was 220 pounds, while that of the Leans was 135.

The only mishap was in the seventh inning when Catcher Charles Wiegman of the Fats wrenched his knee in trying to put out Adolph Helmering of the Leans, when the latter was stealing home. Helmering landed safe.

The Leans' victory did not detract from the glory won by Orville Pier, the Fats' 224-pound pitcher. He struck out 14 Leans in the seven innings he occupied the mound.

The star plays for the Leans were made by Hans Wagner, 149 pounds in his stocking feet, who made several brilliant catches that would make the real Hans Wagner look sick. He scored six hits, five runs. Two of the hits were doubles and three singles, and in the second he made a homer and scored three others.

Fats Overconfident.

The game, following an automobile tour of the town, began at 3 p. m. and lasted three hours and five minutes. Like all Big League championship games it had four umpires. Circuit Judge G. A. Wurdeman and Dr. John H. Simon took care of the foul lines, Marshal John S. Willmann of University City umpired the bases and L. M. Matthews counted balls and strikes. The first ball was pitched by Mayor M. G. Fink, who is neither a Lean nor a Fat, and the Fats won the toss and took the field in the opening inning.

At the conclusion of the game, the Fats' rooters blamed overconfidence for the defeat. They said the Fats had won all the previous games and had allowed themselves to get into the "I should worry" class.

Between $400 and $500 was realized on the game. The money will be spent next winter in the purchase of fuel and other necessaries for poor families of Maplewood.

The batteries were: W. Woods (125 pounds), catcher, and Clarence Vorhees (140 pounds), pitcher, for the Leans; Marshal Mike Ruck of Maplewood (218 pounds), catcher, and Orville Pier (224 pounds), pitcher, for the Fats.

BELL SENDS WORD TO STRIKERS THEIR PLACES ARE OPEN

Invites Girls to Return in "Belief Company Wants to Treat Them Fairly."

UNION PRESIDENT HELD

Accused of "Throwing Something" at Taxi, Miss Miller Says It Was Accident.

The operators' strike against the Bell Telephone Co. continued yesterday, General Manager Hiss of the company asserting that 104 girls were out, while the strike leaders maintained that more than three times that number had quit work.

Tests made by Post-Dispatch reporters yesterday showed the service virtually was unimpaired. The places of the strikers are being filled by girl strikebreakers from other cities.

M. B. Downing, general traffice superintendent, issued a statement to the striking employes last night in which he declared that the names of none of those who went out have been stricken from the rolls and that their places will be held open for them for a reasonable time.

He reminded them that by remaining out they would forfeit the pension, disability and insurance benefits instituted by the company, and asked them to judge whether the representations made by those "interested in having them leave their work" have proved sufficient to justify them in giving up their positions.

Must Return in Right Spirit.

"While we will welcome all who will return," he said, "we do not desire any to return who will not do so in the right spirit and with the belief that the company intended to treat and will treat its employes fairly."

A copy of this appeal was sent to every operator who failed to report for work during the week.

That the issue of the strike is the right of every American citizen to join any organization he sees fit without molestation or coercion from his or her employer, was asserted last night by James P. Noonan, vice-president of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers He declared 470 girls are on strike, and insisted the service has been impaired materially.

He said that in the spring the company distributed blanks in the maintenance department on which the employes were asked to state whether they were members of the union. Those who answered in the affirmative, to the number of 25, said Noonan, were discharged promptly, Hiss stating that he hoped to "nip the organization in the bud." The maintenance men went on strike, demanding that their fellows be reinstated.

The situation of the girl employes is identical with that of the men, according to Noonan, the young women being on strike, not for higher wages, but in the hope of obtaining recognition for their union and reinstatement for a number of girls who recently were dismissed.

He denies the company's declaration that the discharged employes were incompetent, and points out that some of them had worked for the company as long as 10 years.

Strikers Visit Belleville.

Mrs. Sarah Spraggon, one of the promoters of the strike, with 10 telephone strikers, yesterday morning went to Belleville with the object of persuading girls at the Bell exchange to join the strike. The girls were accompanied by private detectives.

Chief of Police Stookey declared he would not permit any other "agitators" to operate in Belleville, and told pickets to leave the streets near the Bell offices.

Miss Lilian Miller of 2429 Lemp avenue, president of the Telephone Operators' Union, was arrested yesterday morning on complaint of W. G. Duffy of 4047 Westminster place, at the entrance of the Sidney exchange, Eleventh and Sidney streets. He is employed as an escort for girl strike breakers.

He declared Miss Miller "threw something" at the taxicab in which he was riding. She replied she held a pebble in her hand and accidentally attempted to toss it away at the moment when the automobile came within range. She was released on $200 bail to stand trial on a charge of disturbing the peace.

WIFE FAILS TO DIVORCE FORGER, ONCE WEALTHY

Mrs. Peter Van Vlissengen Held to Have Known of Crimes When She Married.

CHICAGO, June 21.—Peter Van Vlissingen, former wealthy real estate broker and prominent clubman, who was convicted of forgeries involving more than $1,000,000, today won his fight to prevent his wife and former stenographer, Jessie Van Vlissingen, from obtaining a divorce.

A jury, after several hours' deliberation, decided today that the convict's wife should be denied a decree because she had known of his crimes when she married him. It was her second attempt at separation, the decree first granted having been set aside because her husband was not permitted to testify.

POSTOFFICE BOY SHOT

George Hulbert, 17, a postoffice special delivery boy, was shot in the left thumb last evening at Seventeenth and Walnut streets. A boy named Moore, who rides a motor cycle and who is also in the postal service, did the shooting.

After the shooting Moore took Hulbert on his motor cycle to the city dispensary. He then disappeared.

Hulbert said they were playing with the pistol and it was accidentally discharged. The police were not satisfied with Hulbert's explanation, however, and a search is being made for Moore.

Phone Girls' President Tells of Grievances

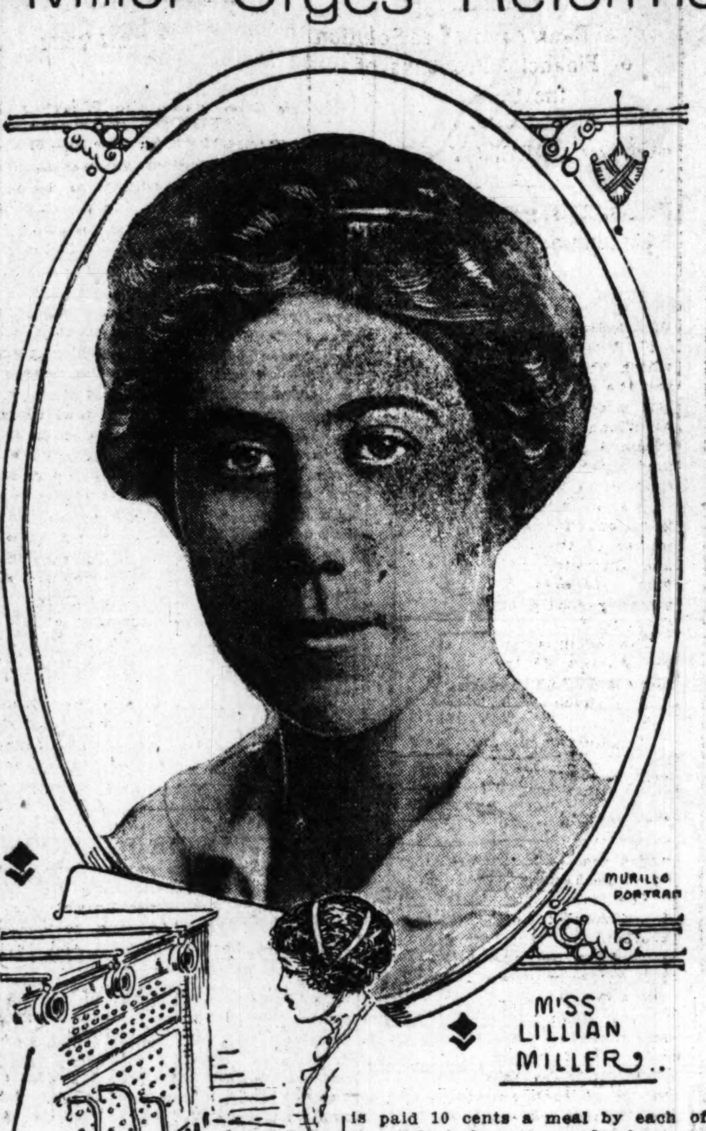
Opposition to Union Caused Strike, She Says

Miss Lilian Miller Urges Reforms

Operators Should Work Only 8 Hours a Day, Six Days a Week, She Thinks.

OPPOSES DEMERIT SYSTEM

Four Hundred Are Out on Strike, She Says, and Labor Unions Are Aiding Them.



MISS LILLIAN MILLER..

By Jon E. Gorse

WHEN Miss Leonora O'Reilly, a New York expert on woman's work, unionism and strikes, was in St. Louis recently she told me of a telephone girl whose speech before a convention of Woman's Trade Union League aroused her to a new enthusiasm.

"She was new to the work," Miss O'Reilly said. "Circumstances had conspired to make her a leader. She had never before made a speech outside the meetings of her trade union, which was only a month old. Yet she spoke with calm confidence, moderately and sanely, setting forth the grievances of telephone girls in St. Louis and graphically showing their importance to the business interests of the country.

"I realized," said Miss O'Reilly, that this girl, so calmly confident and armed, was the heir of all the women who have struggled in the organizations of labor since that day when even trades unions of men denied them recognition."

This girl who aroused new enthusiasm in one who had spent a lifetime in labor organization is Miss Lilian Miller, lately a supervisor in the Sydney exchange of the Bell Telephone Co. and now president of the Telephone Operators' Union of St. Louis.

I saw her yesterday just after her release on bond from the Wyoming Police Station, where she had been charged with throwing something more solid and tangible than arguments at a taxicab load of strike-breakers. She is not the sort of girl who throws bricks, even under the stress of strike emotion. She does not believe in throwing bricks, which are most ineffective weapons for the war in which she has engaged. Behind her wide brow there is too much intelligence for such folly, too much sanity and sense of the proportions of things.

We talked of the telephone girls' strike for a long time; but she said not one bitter word of her opponent, though she candidly stated his shortcomings.

Possesses Positive Personality.

She is a slip of a girl in the middle twenties and 5 feet high. Her eyes and hair are dark; she wears glasses to correct astigmatism. Her teeth are large, regular and frequently displayed by the lip movement of her trained articulation. She will smile at a ghost of a jest, but all the while is sedately conscious of the serious business of life. Her voice is low and seldom modulated. Her emotions are under firm control. She would not attract your eye in a crowd, yet is possessed of positive personality and good looks.

"Why are the telephone girls on strike?" I asked. She went at the subject methodically.

"Because the Bell company discharged 32 tried and faithful girls for participation in the organization of a union and 25 men for the same reason."

"Is that your only grievance? Is there no question of recognizing your union, of wages, or hours of labor?"

"Not now. The company has announced a new wage scale and has said that it will grant eight hours. We have not asked for recognition of the union, but have asked for the re-employment of union girls who, after long and good service, were discharged and have been branded in the telephone company's statements as incompetent. We are free Americans and insist upon our right to organize a union. The company, which sent agents to Jefferson City to oppose the passage of the woman's nine-hour labor law, insists that we must not organize. That is the whole trouble.

Boston Union Is Strong.

"There are unions of telephone operators in Boston and, I think, in Memphis. The union in Boston has 2000 members and without a strike it gained great benefits for the girls. We had hoped to achieve our ends by quiet conference, but the strike was forced upon us. We wanted some reforms, which the company says it is ready to grant, but which we could not obtain without organization.

"When we began to get together the traffic chiefs called up the girls one at a time and questioned them about the union. Thirty-two of those who favored it were notified that their services were no longer needed and they have been branded as incompetent.

"Every one of the 32 has been in the company's service three years and some have seen 10 years' service. Miss Margaret Cunningham, a supervisor in the Main exchange, has been in the service 10 years. She was discharged for favoring a union, as were Miss Nellie Carter, senior supervisor of the Tyler exchange, who has also seen 10 years' service; Miss Viola McCormack, a Main supervisor of nine years' service, and Miss Clara Dill, a Sidney exchange supervisor, of five years' service.

"I was supervisor at the Sidney exchange and have seen seven years' service, without complaint of any kind against me, and yet, on May 9, I was discharged because I favored the union. Lots of the 32 girls have been in the service five years, and a large majority were getting the maximum pay for operators, $40 a month. That was reached by successive raises of $2.50 in 65 months after a girl begins at the minimum wage of $20 a month. Mr. Hiss (general manager of the Southwestern (Bell) Telephone Co.) says that under the new scale of wages the maximum will be reached in 36 months. Supervisors were paid $50 a month and are promoted from the maximum wage operators.

The Demerit System.

"The company has had a system of demerits which, Mr. Hiss says, was abolished April 1, but which was in force in Sydney exchange up to May 9. There were 85 reasons for charging a girl with a demerit and supervisors whose duty it is to walk up and down behind a group of operators and watch their work, were charged with reporting laxity to the chief operator. For giving the wrong number a girl was charged with 4 demerits; for looking around, 3 demerits; for talking to adjacent operators, 3 demerits; for staying home, 3 demerits; for chewing gum, 2 demerits; for cutting off a subscriber, 5 demerits. A girl was required to make 80 per cent to be entitled to the semi-annual increase in wages.

One who passed through that ordeal and reached the maximum wage could not be called incompetent by any reasonable person; nor could one be called incompetent who, under the company's system, became a superviser.

"The 32 girls discharged for favoring a union were among the best employes the company had. It would have been much wiser to have avoided interference with the liberty of employes and saved the $5000 a day extra expense which the company is under for railroad and taxi fares and hotel bills of strikebreakers imported from other cities.

"Boston's manager was wiser. He did not claim the right to interfere with the liberty of the operators and when they were organized conferred with them. As a result Boston girls work eight hours, six days in the week; are paid time and a half for Sunday work; are paid every week at a maximum of $12 for operators and $15 for supervisors; have every third Saturday off during the winter and every other Saturday off during the summer and split-time operators are paid $1 a week extra with carfare.

"In St. Louis the girls are on duty 10 hours, have half an hour for lunch, and two rest periods of 15 minutes each, morning and afternoon. They work six days a week with no extra for Sunday work. They are paid twice a month at the rate of $40 a month for operators and $50 a month for supervisors. They have no Saturdays off. Split-time operators get carfare, but no extra pay.

"The split-tricks, filled by new operators, are from 8 a. m. to 12 m. and 5 p. m. to 9 p. m.; or from 9 a. m. to 1 p. m. and 5 p. m. to 9 p. m. When a regular operator has worked on Sunday she gets a day off during the week; but split-time operators only get 4 hours off.

"A telephone girl is supposed to be always available for duty and chiefs tell the girls they must make no engagements.

"Each exchange has a matron whose duty is to keep the place clean and provide lunch for the girls. She is paid 10 cents a meal by each of the girls and must pay for her own supplies. Formerly the matrons provided tea and coffee, which was of fair quality, but the company undertook some months ago to provide free tea and coffee and it is very poor. In the downtown and central city exchanges the accommodations for girls are very good, but in the smaller exchanges there is much cause for complaint. In the Tyler exchange the girls sit on garbage cans to eat their lunch. All have rest rooms with hard couches, which no one would lie on unless very ill.

"These are the grievances which we had in mind when we began the organization of the union. How far the reforms Mr. Hiss promises will remedy them, I do not know. That question is in abeyance until we accomplish our big purpose of securing the reinstatement of the 32 girls discharged because they exercised the American right to free speech and to organize if they chose so to do.

"This is not the first time that the company has interfered with our liberty. A year or two ago some ladies thought that as the operators sit for long hours, with a telephone receiver strapped to their heads, that their health must suffer and proposed to organize walking clubs. The girls were to go on little tours in the country around St. Louis on their days off. I went to a meeting in North St. Louis to arrange for these tours and a few days later was told, with the others, that the company forbade the organization of walking clubs.

400 Out on Strike.

"We have 750 members in our union, about 600 of whom are Bell employes and 150 Kinloch employes. Four hundred are out on strike. Whether the 200 who did not come out will come out or not I cannot say. The company is offering them every inducement to stay. We have not collected dues yet, but have received contributions from many unions. Nearly all of our girls live at home and we have offers of homes for all the girls who do not. The Kinloch company has done nothing to prevent organization among its employes, who have been given an increase of $12.50 a month. We feel that any grievances our members have against that company will be redressed amicably.

"If we do not win this strike I shall be disappointed, but it is bound to benefit the telephone workers, and we shall do all that we lawfully can do to win."

SABINA BORNFELD AND JEWELS MISSING AGAIN

Mrs. Bessie Bornfeld, a downtown restaurant keeper, has reported to the police that her daughter, Sabina Bornfeld, 16-year-old divorcee, again has disappeared. She also has asked the police to look for $900 worth of jewelry she says disappeared at the same time.

Sabina Bornfeld is the divorced wife of John Herck, to whom she was married in November, 1911, after they had made a trip to the East and to Hot Springs, Ark., with $2200 which Mrs. Bornfeld had intrusted to her daughter.

After she had attempted to die by gas asphyxiation with Lillian Walker of East St. Louis, at 4026 Labadie avenue, Sabina obtained a divorce. Mrs. Bornfeld sued Herck for embezzlement of the money, but he was acquitted.

Mrs. Bornfeld says her daughter went away five days ago. She had talked, her mother says, of accompanying her chum, Mamie Goldberg, somewhere. The jewelry includes three diamond rings and several other articles.

Fire Nearly Destroys Oil Town.

BAKERSFIELD, Cal., June 21.—The oil town of McKittrick, 40 miles west of here, was almost completely destroyed by fire today. Nearly all of the principal business houses have been razed. The loss is estimated at $150,000.

TWO SPECTACLE DEALERS ARRESTED ON FRAUD CHARGE

Harry and Morris Goldman Accused in Indictment of Misuse of Mails.

Harry and Morris Goldman, doing business at 2921 Locust street under the name of the Dr. Haux Spectacle Co., were arrested yesterday under indictments returned against them by the Federal grand jury on information supplied by District Attorney Houts. There are two indictments against each, charging them with using the mails in a scheme to defraud and with sending through the mails letters that reflect upon the recipients. They were released on bond.

The Goldmans, in a letter to the District Attorney in the course of an extended investigation, declared they were selling 150,000 pairs of spectacles a year. They do a mail order business and advertise principally in the country newspapers. The advertisements offer "Glasses Absolutely Free." Parenthetically it is stated that glasses are known in the spectacle business as lenses. There is an illustration of a complete pair of spectacles, with the lenses fitted in a frame. In an intimate talk "Dr. Haux, the Spectacle man," says: "As soon as you get them I want you to put them on your eyes, sit down in front of the open hearth one of these cold wintry nights, and you will be agreeably surprised that you can again read the very finest print in your Bible with them on, even by the dim firelight; you'll find that you can again thread the smallest-eyed needle you can lay your hands on and do the finest kind of embroidering and crocheting with them on, and do it all night long, if you like, without any headaches or eye-pains, and with as much ease and comfort as you ever did in your life.

"Perfect Vision" Glasses.

"Or, if you're a sportsman and like to go out hunting occasionally, just shoulder your gun and go out into the woods some early morning when the haze is yet in the air, and you'll be greatly delighted when you drop the smallest bird off the tallest tree top at the very first shot sure, with the help of these wonderful 'perfect vision' glasses of mine. And in the evening, when the shadows are gathering in the twilight, you'll easily distinguish a horse from a cow out in the pasture at the greatest distance and as far as your eye can reach with them on—and this even if your eyes are so weak now that you cannot even read the largest headlines in this paper."

After they have been tried for "reading, sewing, hunting, driving, indoors, outdoors, anywhere, any way and every way," the recipient is assured by "Dr. Haux" that if every word he has said about them is as honest and true as gospel, "and if they really have restored to you the absolute perfect eyesight of your early youth, you can keep them forever without one cent of pay."

All that "Dr. Haux" asks is that the wearer of the free "glasses" will show them around to his friends and neighbors and speak a good word for them.

Postoffice inspectors who have made an investigation declare that when an answer is received "Dr. Haux" sends a letter in which he points out that he would much prefer to send the lenses without one single solitary cent for frames, but unfortunately they would be absolutely useless unless they were fitted into one of "Dr. Haux's" special frames, which he offers to send for $1, declaring that he loses money on every pair that he sends out, but he expects to break even on the advertising that he will get out of the "free glasses."

The frames are described in the circular letter in black type as "solid gold," with the word "filled" in smaller type beneath the "solid gold."

Modified Advertising for Time.

If this offer is not accepted, another ofer is made of seven days' free trial, the customer to remit $1.25 for spectacles and case if he finds them the greatest bargain he ever saw. If he fails to remit a series of threatening letters are sent to him, according to the inspectors, inclosed in what are known as "dunning" envelopes.

The District Attorney expects to prove that the frames are purchasable at $2.40 a dozen and the lenses at 30 cents a dozen pairs.

Girl's Body Found in River.

KEOKUK, Io., June 21.—The body of Miss Mayme Wilson, one of the motorboat party missing since last Thursday evening, was recovered from the Mississippi River today. The finding of the body is believed to indicate that the entire party of five were drowned.

WOMAN AND CHILD BURN TO DEATH IN BED; HUSBAND HELD

Wife, in Dying Statement, Accuses Vandalia, Mo., Man of Pouring Oil on Them.

By Long-Distance Telephone to the Post-Dispatch.

VANDALIA, Mo., June 21.—Mrs. John Nicholson, 42 years old, and her adopted son, Howard, 7 years old, were so severely burned in their bed here at midnight last night that they died this morning. The boy died at 6 o'clock and the woman 10 minutes later.

In a statement made shortly before her death, Mrs. Nicholson said that her husband had poured coal oil over her and the boy and then set fire to the bedclothes.

At the Coroner's inquest, held this afternoon, the jury found that Mrs. Nicholson and the child "came to their death by fire, due to the hands of John Nicholson."

Husband Is Arrested.

Following the announcement of the Coroner's verdict, Nicholson was arrested and was taken to Mexico, the county seat, and placed in jail to await the action of the grand jury.

Nicholson, who is a coal miner, who had hitherto borne a good reputation, said that his wife and adopted son retired about 10:30 last night and that he soon afterwards went to bed in an adjoining room. He was awakened about midnight, he said, by the screams of the woman and child and attempted to save them.

Finally, he says, he succeeded in putting out the blaze, but not before both were fatally burned.

An examination of Nicholson showed that he was not burned in his attempt to rescue his wife and adopted child.

The lives of both Mrs. Nicholson and the boy were insured, but the amount of the insuranec has not been given out by the authorities.

IOWA BRAKEMAN THE "CHAMPION STOWAWAY"

Gets About the World by Freight Train, Afoot, and on Ocean Liners.

NEW YORK, June 21.—The Celtic of the White Star Line brought in the "champion stowaway of the world," as the crew called him today. He was Michael L. Butler, a six-foot, athletic man of 23, whose parents live in Dubuque, Io.

Butler has been a brakeman on many railroads. In Texas and Mexico he learned Spanish. Last August he braked and jumped freights into New York. He stowed away on the liner Cavous and landed at Buenos Ayres. He pounded the ties over the Andes into Valparaiso.

He made his next jump to Rotterdam by shipping as an ordinary seaman on the German three-masted ship Procyon. At Rotterdam he shipped back as a deck hand on a Norwegian steamer for Norway. Returning to Rotterdam, he stowed away on the Leyland liner, Victorian, for Liverpool.

The Celtic left Liverpool June 12. Next morning after leaving Queenstown, the lookout heard calls from the fore peak. "On deck, on deck," a voice kept repeating. Two sailors descended into the fore peak and dragged out Butler. He was locked up just before reaching New York and freed by the immigration inspectors as an American citizen when he landed.

Owes Her Life to Eckman's Alterative

Eckman's Alterative is being used with success in the treatment of Tuberculosis in all parts of the country. Persons who have taken it, improved, gained weight, exhausting night sweats stopped, fever diminished, and many recovered. If you are interested to know more about it, we will put you in touch with some who are now well. You can investigate and judge for yourself. Read of Mrs. Govert's recovery:

Griffith, Ind.

"Gentlemen: About September 10, 1908, my mother-in-law was taken sick with Catarrhal Pneumonia, which developed into Lung Trouble. In January, when Rev. Wm. Berg of St. Michael's Church, at Schererville, Ind., prepared for her death, he recommended that I get Eckman's Alterative, and see if it would not give her some relief. The attending physician declared she had Consumption and was beyond all medical aid. So I immediately had Rev. Wm. Berg to send for a bottle. Practically without hope for recovery, I insisted that she try the Alterative, which she did. I am glad to say that she soon began to improve. Now she works as hard as ever, weighs twenty pounds heavier than she ever did before she took sick, and is in good health."

(Affidavit) JOS. GRIMMER.

Eckman's Alterative has been proven by many years' test to be most efficacious in cases of severe Throat and Lung Affections, Bronchitis, Bronchial Asthma, Stubborn Colds and in upbuilding the system. Does not contain narcotics, poisons or habit-forming drugs. For sale by Raboteau Drug Co., Wolff-Wilson Drug Co., Judge & Dolph Drug Co., and other leading druggists. $2500 AUTO STOLEN AND BURNED IN ROAD

Clayton Coroner's Car Is Destroyed—Two Arrests Are Made.

Coroner Louis Bopp's $2500 automobile was stolen from his garage in Clayton and burned on the La Due road, three-fourths of a mile west of Clayton, at 4 a. m. yesterday.

Mrs. J. W. Davis, in front of whose house the car was destroyed, saw three automobiles stationary in the road. Two were without headlights and the lamps of the third were dim. She saw a woman and several men gathered about the cars.

Then two of the machines were driven about three blocks west, leaving one man behind. Suddenly there was a bright flash and the abandoned car was enveloped in flames. The man ran to the other cars and was taken aboard, after which they were driven rapidly away.

At 6 o'clock the police arrested James Ronen, a chauffeur, 4153 Olive street, and Orren Sims, a demonstrator, 3848 Page avenue, when they came in from St. Louis County in two automobiles, one being towed by the other. There were a man and a woman in each machine. They denied having any information concerning the destruction of Dr. Bopp's car.

FORTUNE TELLER HAD PART IN THIS WEDDING

Revelation to Atlanta Girl Year Ago Is Fulfilled in Belleville Marriage.

When a fortune teller told Maud Kessler of Atlanta, Ga., eight months ago that she would marry a man within a year, whose initials were V. F. R., she paid but little attention. The fortune was told during a visit of a party of young people at a gypsy camp. In addition to the initials of Miss Kessler's future husband, the gypsy also described the man and said she would meet him at the home of a mutual friend after a long journey. Six months ago Miss Kessler went to St. Louis to visit. While in St. Louis she met Virgil F. Rose, whose appearance tallied with the description of the man given by the fortune teller. Rose fell in love at once. Yesterday afternoon they went to Belleville and were married by Magistrate Underwood to whom Mrs. Rose related the story of the fortune teller. "I'm a firm believer in fortune tellers now," said Mrs. Rose as she left the magistrate's office.

Kansas City Writer Will Be One of Starters in Elimination for Cup Event.

KANSAS CITY, June 21.—George E. Quisenberry, a local newspaper writer, was today chosen aid of the balloon Kansas City II, entrant of the Kansas City Aero Club in the national elimination race that will start from here July 4. The winners of the race will represent America in the international race for the James Gordon Bennett trophy in France this fall.

Mr. Quisenberry was aid to John Watts, pilot of the Kansas City II in the national elimination race last year, in which the pair finished second.

TRIES TWICE TO END LIFE

Mrs. Mary Lueboski of Alton was declared mentally deranged in the County Court at Edwardsville yesterday. She tried twice to end her life Friday night.

Early in the evening at the jail she said she wanted to take a bath and tried to drown herself. She was saved by another prisoner and when put into her cell drew a knife from her bosom and tried to stab herself. The warden, who was still in the cell, took the knife from her.

YOUTH DIES AFTER BOXING BOUT; HIS SECOND FIGHT

Dayton Pugilist May Have Succumbed to Exertion and Excessive Heat.

By Associated Press.

DAYTON, O., June 21.—Patrick Grant, 20 years old, of this city, who was carried out of the ring unconscious in the seventh round of his 10-round boxing bout with Kid Batty last night, died late today without having regained consciousness. There is some dispue whether Grant died from the results of a knockout blow or from overexertion and the excessive heat. The fight was Grant's second pugilistic encounter.

Doctor Testifies No Serious Blow Was Delivered by Pelkey.

CALGARY, Alberta, June 21.—With only a few witnesses examined this afternoon and several more to be examined, Chief Justice Harvey of the Alberta supreme court late today adjourned until Monday, the trial of Arthur Pelkey, who is charged with manslaughter in connection with the death of Luther McCarty in the ring near here, May 24 last. The jury is being guarded closely.

Dr. Spankie of Calgary, a witness for the defense who was at the ringside on May 24, declared he had been present at 25 pugilistic encounters and had delivered one knockout blow himself. McCarty, he said, fell heavily, and it was possible the hemorrhage was caused by the fall. The witness declared McCarty's head hit the floor first, and that witnesses who declared the fighter's hip struck the floor first were in error.

Dr. Dunlop declared he thought no blow had been received by McCarty of sufficient force to cause serious injury, but admitted there might have been conditions of which physicians knew nothing which caused McCarty's death.

The Hon. Mr. Clements, member of the Dominion parliament, who knew Pelkey, as Arthur Peltier, in Kent County, Ontario, was a character witness for the defense.

DIVORCED MAN, MARRIED AGAIN, MUST PAY ALIMONY

New York Judge Holds That Theron Akin Must Pay Former Wife.

UTICA, N. Y., June 21.—Former Representative in Congress Theron Akin will have to continue paying Mary Sanford Akin, his former wife, $350 annually as alimony, which amount was awarded her when she obtained her divorce in 1903. Supreme Court Justice Kellogg decided the wife's favor today, saying:

"The appellant asserts that he has become incapacitated for work and has no property from the earnings of which he can pay the amount prescribed.

"He is sufficiently well-to-do to have a second wife, while the wife who divorced him still lives. This wife was the original corespondent. He married her in a sister state in defiance of our laws and orders. In effect he desires to support the corespondent rather than his wife.

"It has not yet come to the point that alimony is awarded to a corespondent. This may be reactionary, but it for the moment, remains the law.

"Upon his own calculations he owns property to the value of $20,000. In my judgment, the appellant can still well afford, and it still remains his duty, to pay the wife whom he wronged, the meager alimony of $350 per annum. The motion is therefore denied."

CAR HITS WOMAN'S COUPE

Mrs. W. C. Eagon and Mrs. Joseph Bixby Bruised.

An electric coupe owned and driven by Mrs. William C. Eagon of 4049 West Pine street, collided with a westbound Laclede avenue car on King's highway at noon yesterday. Mrs. Eagon and Mrs. Joseph Bixby of 5420 Cabanne avenue, who was with her, were bruised. The coupe was damaged $100.

FAMOUS IN A DAY FOR THE BEAUTY OF HER HANDS AND ARMS

A Free Prescription That Does Its Work Over Night—You Can Prepare It at Your Own Home.

"It's my own discovery and it takes just one night to get such marvelous results," answers Camille de Venier when her friends ask her about the marvelous change in the appearance of her hands and arms. "You can do the same thing if you take my advice," she says. "I feel it my duty to tell every woman what this wonderful prescription did for me. Just think of it! It did all this in one night.

It affords me a world of pleasure to tell anyone else just how such remarkable results were brought about. I'll give you, absolutely free, the identical prescription which has made me so happy by beautifying my hands and arms. You can form no idea of the marvelous change it will make in just one application. The prescription, which can be prepared at your own home, is as follows:

Go to any drug store and get an ounce bottle of Kulux Compound. Pour the entire contents into a two-ounce bottle, add a quarter ounce of witch hazel and fill with water. Mix this at home. Apply night and morning. The first application will delight you. It gives the skin a velvety softness, obliterates all discolorations such as tan, sun spots, freckles and coarse pores, roughness, and, in fact, every blemish the skin is heir to. It also produces a marvelous effect on the face, neck and shoulders. It is deliciously cool and soothing and is not affected by perspiration. It will not rub off.

If the neck is discolored from being exposed to the sun or from wearing high collars, this prescription will immediately relieve that condition. No matter how rough and ungainly the hands and arms, or what abuses they have had through hard work; no matter what exposure the skin has had to sun and wind, this prescription will work a wonderful transformation. Thousands of women are using this prescription with just the same results that I have had."—ADV.

HOW COUNCILMEN PLANNED TO DESTROY E. ST. LOUIS RECORDS

Remarkable Resolution Passed by Legislative Body Which if Carried Out Would Remove in Great Part Evidence of Irregularities in Handling City Funds Which the Post-Dispatch Has Exposed.

The article today on East St. Louis municipal conditions will deal with the passage of two remarkable resolutions by the East St. Louis City Council, which, if carried out, would mean the destruction of many of the records from which the evidence published in the Post-Dispatch during the past few days was obtained.

Mayor Chamberlin of East St. Louis and Comptroller Rodenberger, the latter having custody of the records, have said that they will ignore the resolution and will see that the records are preserved.

The records which the Council has ordered destroyed include every voucher and warrant showing the details of city expenditures during the last two years.

The resolutions, first reciting that a Council committee has conducted an investigation of all details of all offices, and found them in perfect condition, instructs the Treasurer to destroy vouchers and warrants.

The Finance Committee at the time of the passage of the first resolution was composed of Councilman Lee Brown, Tony Hahn, Frank Leckel, Joseph A. Fansler, Claus Tietje, Ed J. Epiesbach, Andrew Rouge and James M. Sheer.

None is an expert accountant.

Notwithstanding the report of this committee as to the conditions of the departments, two accountants have been working two months in an effort to compile a statement of the financial condition of the city and have been unable to get a satisfactory statement for the new Treasurer, Frank Keating. Although the law requires that all officers shall deliver all records, books and papers to their successors within five days after the successors take office, Keating has not yet received the records of the Treasurer's office from former Treasurer Gerold. Keating became Treasurer May 5.

The Post-Dispatch investigation also revealed that it is impossible to trace official financial transactions to the end from the records, because of the methods used in the Treasurer's and Comptroller's offices.

Vouchers in the Comptroller's office show that warrants for large sums of money were issued on vouchers which do not contain a detailed statement of the reason for the expenditure, and warrants which have been paid out by the Treasurer in numerous instances do not contain the indorsement of the person to whom the money was paid.

The voucher to cover the expenses of the junket to Buffalo in September, 1912, merely shows that $3600 was appropriated to City Treasurer Gerold for the expenses of the trip, and does not show to whom Gerold paid the money, or the detailed purposes for which it was expended. Many other vouchers are likewise lacking in details.

Many Warrants Not Indorsed.

A great number of warrants examined by the reporter show that in many instances they were indorsed and in about as many they were not indorsed, merely being stamped on their face. Many of these warrants were issued in the names of partnerships and corporations, and there is nothing in the nature of a receipt in possession of the city showing into whose individual hands the money went.

This is true of warrants made payable to the Merrill Printing Co., which occupies quarters in the building owned by the Gerold Storage, Packing & Moving Co., of which former Treasurer Gerold is an officer; is true of warrants issued to the Gerold company, and is true in the cases of many thousands appropriated to meet the payrolls of various departments.

The custom in St. Louis is to have every warrant bear the indorsement of the person to whom it is issued.

Auditor Sheehan of St. Louis explained to a Post-Dispatch reporter that a warrant is the same as a check, and that each should bear the indorsement of the person to whom it is issued and the person who cashes it at the Treasurer's office.

The Post-Dispatch interviewed a former official of St. Louis, who is a recognized authority on business methods. He would not pemit the use of his name in connection with an investigation of municipal methods in East St. Louis, but he declared that in his opinion the passage of a resolution ordering the destruction of vouchers and warrants was very unusual, and that if an attempt were made in any business in which he was interested to destroy such records, he would immediately institute an inquiry in an effort to determine the reason for the contemplated destruction.

"I do not know of any law which governs the length of time such documents should be preserved," he said, "but they certainly should be kept as long as there is any possibility that they would be needed. I should say that they should not be destroyed until at least 15 years had elapsed after their issuance."

Doubt Authority to Destroy.

An East St. Louis lawyer told the Post-Dispatch that in his opinion the Council has no authority to destroy public records.

Former Treasurer Gerold, when asked the reason for the resolution, said to the reporter:

"There is no reason for the destruction of the vouchers and warrants. That was not the purpose of the resolution. It was merely intended to have my reports approved by the Council. I objected to the clause ordering the destruction of the papers, but my attorney, who drew the resolution, told me that it must follow the language of the law, and that the law used the words he used in the resolution."

An attorney who made an exhaustive examination of the statutes of Illinois and the ordinances of East St. Louis reported that he could find no section which mentioned destruction of vouchers and warrants.

The first resolution covering this matter was passed by the Council, Feb. 25, 1913, and ordered such papers destroyed up to Feb. 1. The new Council in June passed a duplicate resolution, ordering the papers destroyed from Feb. 1. to May 1, the date of the change of administrations.

Report of Finance Committee.

Prior to the passage of the first resolution, the Council received the following report from the Finance Committee. The exact language, some of which is ambiguous, is quoted:

"We, your committee on the Finance, Ways and Means, beg leave to report that we have examined the records of the City Clerk, City Comptroller, Special Tax Collector, Plumbing Inspector, Boiler Inspector, City Electrician, City Attorney and City Treasurer for the period of time commencing May 1, 1911, to December 31, 1912, and that we have examined into the sources from which the various funds, received by these respective officials come, and have examined the accounts upon which moneys were paid out by said officials, and find that said moneys have, which credit is asked by said officials, was properly expended.

"We further report that we have inspected and examined the monthly and other reports of said officials during said period of time, and have compared the items of receipts and disbursements, as shown by the books and records of said officials, and find said reports to be a true and correct exposition of said books and records in respect to all of said matters.

"As to the said treasurer, we further report that we have examined the vouchers and warrants drawn against the City Treasurer and paid by the City Treasurer, and find that all of said vouchers and warrants were legally and properly paid by the said City Treasurer during said period of time; and we further find that proper transfer from one department to other departments of the city of funds of the various departments have been legally and properly made, and that each of said departments has been and is now in possession of such of its money as properly and legally belong to it."

The report then makes the same statements regarding an examination of the Treasurer's office from Jan. 1 to Feb. 1, 1913, and continues:

"Therefore, we respectfully recommend unto your honorable body that the various monthly and other reports made by the said city officials from the 1st day of May, 1911, to the 1st day of February, 1913, inclusive, be approved by your honorable body, and that the Clerk of the said city be directed and permitted to enter of record the confirmation and approval of each and every of said reports, and that the City Treasurer be authorized and directed to cancel or destroy all vouchers and warrants drawn against the city treasury and by him paid from the funds of the city, as by his said reports are shown to have been paid, all as required by law."

Officers Provided "Expert Aid."

Accompanying the report was another report signed by Councilman Fansler, in which he stated he had been delegated to make the examination of the records for the committee. Fansler says in his report:

"In the examination of the reports made by each individual official of the city, the undersigned was provided by such official with a competent aid with peculiar knowledge of the workings of such office, and was furnished with the reports and books made and kept by such official.

"That with the said assistant or aid, he inspected and examined each and all of the reports made by said officials for and during the period hereinabove mentioned, and compared said reports with the books kept by such official, and finds that said books correctly set forth and show all receipts and expenditures of said offices, and that the reports made by said officials correspond with the books of said officials and properly set forth all receipts and expenditures of said offices."

The resolution which was adopted approves the report of the committee and thus orders the destruction of the vouchers and warrants.

BANK OF COMMERCE IS SUED BY ARCHITECT

F. C. Bonsack Wants $7500 for Work Done in Trying to Get Tenants for Corner.

A suit for $7500 was filed yesterday by Frederick C. Bonsack, an architect, against the National Bank of Commerce on account of services he says he gave the bank between June, 1910, and June a year ago. He says he was employed by the bank to endeavor to induce the Pulitzer Publishing Co. (the Post-Dispatch) to move from its present site, which is owned by the bank, but for which the company holds a lease, to a site at the northwest corner of Broadway and Pine, also the property of the bank.

He further was instructed, he says, to try to get the German Savings Institution and later a hotel keeper to become tenants at Broadway and Pine. In connection with this work he had many interviews and drew numerous plans and specifications for a building which would be suitable for whichever tenant he got, he says.

When asked for a statement in regard to Bonsack's claim, Tom Randolph, president of the Bank of Commerce, told a Post-Dispatch reporter he knew Bonsack had talked about bringing action, but did not know he had done so until informed by the reporter. Randolph declared the architect has not a legal claim against the bank, but said he did not wish to discuss the case further.

DAUGHTER WANTS MORE OF ESTATE OF PAT SHORT

Heir of Theater Manager Says Income She Now Receives Is Insufficient.

Alleging that the income from the estate of her father, the late Pat Short, manager of the Olympic Theater, is not sufficient to maintain her in the station to which she had been accustomed when he was alive, Mrs. May Mueller filed suit yesterday for an increased allowance. She asks to have her father's will construed and certain provisions cancelled.

After making minor bequests, Short, who died May 19, 1911, provided in his will that the rest of his property should be held in trust by the executor, John D. Hurley, and that the income should be paid to his widow and daughter, Mrs. Mueller, the only child.

It was provided that if at any time the receipts were not enough to maintain them in their customary mode of living, enough of the realty could be sold by the trustee to make up the difference from the proceeds. This, however, could not be done, the will recited, on written request of the mother and daughter.

Although Mrs. Short died before her husband, he did not change the will, which had been written several years before. Consequently the trustee is in doubt as to whether he can legally sell any of the realty to provide more income on the sole petition of the surviving heir. Mrs. Mueller declares she is not receiving for her needs what her father would have wished, and she wants the will construed so that she alone can authorize the trustee to sell. Under the will, her son by a former marriage, who is 14 years old, gets $500 a year.

An inventory of the Short estate shows realty holdings with a rental value of about $10,000 a year. Most of this is St. Louis property. Besides, the estate comprises personal property appraised at $43,691.79. As all the unlimited legacies have been paid, Mrs. Mueller gets all of the income except the $500 a year for her son.

Under the terms of the will, the property is to remain in trust until after the death of Mrs. Mueller and until her youngest child shall have reached the age of 25 years. The daughter contends that this provision violates the law of perpetutities and might result in an intermidable trust. She asks that the provision with respect to its length be declared void and that control be vested in her.

The daughter lives in Milwaukee with her husband, Gustav H. Mueller, who joins her as co-plaintiff in the suit. Their attorney is William F. Woerner.

OUTLAW FILMS BANNED

SPRINGFIELD, Mo., June 21.—Acting under instructions from the Mayor, who, with the Chief of Police, City Attorney and members of the City Council, this afternoon witnessed a moving picture portrayal of the history of the Bald Knobbers of Taney and Christian counties, the theater management at 9 o'clock tonight discontinued the use of the outlawry films.

Complaint had been made to the city authorities by a local board of censorship composed of representatives of women's clubs. The most desperate encounters in the life of the famous clan were depicted in such a way as to arouse the censors, who declared that the pictures were demoralizing.

TWO FINLANDERS DONATE $50 AS PRICE OF DRINK

Smooth Bunco Man Speaking Beloved Mother Tongue Tricks Them at Station.

Sam Antillo and John Arhannan, who have come to America from Finland within the last six weeks, while awaiting a train connection at Union Station yesterday morning were approached by a fellow countryman and hospitably asked to "come have a drink." The two foreigners, who had not heard a word of their mother tongue for many days, fell upon the good Finlander's shoulders and accepted his invitation.

Before entering the buffet to which the polite stranger was escorting them he announced that it would be well for the three to pool their money so as to be sure to have enough to buy a high-priced American concoction. Antillo and Arhannan contributed $50 between them to meet any demands a St. Louis bartender might make.

As they were about to hand the money to their new acquaintance a fourth man appeared and announced that he was a detective. He arrested the companion of the two Finns, sent them back to Union Station and said he would bring them their money immediately.

After waiting until 7 o'clock at night for the detective and their money to appear, Antillo and Arhannan reported their loss to the police. The men were on their way to Bisbee, Ariz.

EAST ST. LOUIS TO SHOW ITS SILVER CUP IN EAST

Post-Dispatch Award in Club Membership Contest Used as Advertisement.

The Post-Dispatch silver cup, awarded to the East St. Louis Commercial Club for its victory over the St. Louis Business Men's League, in a membership contest, will be displayed in Eastern cities in the next two months by A. Lyman Donlin of East St. Louis. He will appear before the chief commercial bodies of New York, Philadelphia, Boston and other cities to tell them of the advantages of the Middle West, particularly East St. Louis.

The cup will first be placed on exhibition at the Merchants' Association of New York. It is an unusually handsome cup, with figured sides and ebony base.

LEGISLATORS OF ILLINOIS END WORK; DUNNE PLANS FAIL

Suffrage Bill Is Feature of Session but Many of Governor's Measures Die.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., June 21.—The forty-eighth General Assembly of Illinois completed its work shortly before 5 o'clock this morning and adjourned. Sine die adjournment will not come until the 30th, but the session is ended, the remaining time being given the Governor to sign the bills.

Smarting from gavel rule, the House quit at 4:20. The Senate, dignified and proper to the last, adjourned at 4:40 with a smile and resolutions of good will.

The session was free in its closing hours from any disgraceful scenes, said to have marked former sessions.

Suffrage Bill Passed.

With its principal feature the passage of the suffrage bill, the Legislature has been termed by members of all parties "above the average." It was marked by virtually the complete failure of Gov. Dunne's program, which included the initiative and referendum, tax reform and "home rule" for Chicago in the public utilities bill. His utilities ownership bill passed and he won a few primary amendments.

George Wilson, leader of the "drys," appeared with a statement today in which he said Speaker McKinley had broken faith with the dry forces in refusing to call up the residence district bill. The measure had passed both houses, but was amended by the Senate and sent back to the lower house for concurrence. It died through failure of the House to consider Senate amendments last night.

Important New Laws.

Important legislation passed is as follows:

Public utilities ("home rule" eliminated).
Primary amendments.
University of Illinois dry zone.
Legislative reference bureau.
Woman suffrage.
Public utilities ownership.
Fish and game consolidation.
Good roads.
Chicago outer harbor.
Epileptic colony with $1,000,000 appropriation.

Among the important bills which were killed are the following:

Antipass.
Constitutional convention.
All wet bills.
Residence district bill.
Tax reform.
Initiative and referendum.
Private bank supervision.
Free text books.
Anticigarette.
Women's 10-hour labor amendment.

Appropriations total approximately $37,600,000, which is $8,000,000 more than two years ago. The Democratic campaign had as one of its main issues extravagance of Republicans and future economy.

There was no minimum wage legislation and no commission was created empowered for further investigation.

SENATOR PROPOSES TO BAR DISTILLED LIQUORS

Works Suggests Amendment to Constitution to Be Effective in Three Years.

WASHINGTON, June 21.—An amendment to the Federal Constitution for the purpose of stamping out the use of distilled liquors was proposed this afternoon by Senator Works. If accepted by Congress and approved by three-fourths of the states, the contemplated change would prohibit the "sale, manufacture and importation of distilled liquor containing alcohol, except for mechanical, scientific and medicinal purposes."

In a brief explanation, Senator Works said he realized that the proposition was exceedingly drastic, but he had become convinced there was no other way by which the use of distilled liquors could be curtailed or suppressed.

If adopted, the terms of the amendment would allow three years for the readjustment of the traffic in liquor before suppression became effective.

25 PER CENT CUT ON AUTO TARIFF ASKED IN CAUCUS

Some Favor Only 10 Per Cent Duty on Cheap Machines, "Necessities."

QUESTION REFERRED BACK

Democrats Harmoniously Dispose of Several Schedules With No Changes.

By Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, June 21.—The Underwood-Simmons tariff revision bill, as agreed on by the Democrats of the Senate Committee, went through a full day's session of the Senate Democratic caucus today with virtually no change and with harmonious support for most of the alterations the Finance Committee members had made in the original Underwood bill.

The tariff duties on chemicals, oils and paints; on earthenware and glassware; and on two-thirds of the articles in the metal and machinery schedule had been disposed of when the caucus adjourned late this afternoon.

Democratic members of the Finance Committee met tonight to finish redrafting the income tax section of the bill. The important changes to be made in this provision, reducing the exempted incomes from $4000 to $3000, probably will be completed Monday, and the income tax and administrative features of the bill then will be turned over to the caucus for consideration.

Some Items Are Sent Back.

Criticism of the tariff bill in today's party conference was limited to a few specific facts and half a dozen of the items were sent back to the Finance Committee for further investigation and report. The committee's report putting cement on the free list was sustained after some debate. The proposed duties on flaming arc light carbons; on stained glass and on field glasses, optical and surgical instruments and photographic lenses came in for criticism and were referred back to the Democrats of the Finance Committee.

Cheap automobiles as necessities of business and farming life were the subject of much "debate." The Finance Committee Democrats already had cut the rates of the Underwood bill from 45 per cent ad valorem to 35 per cent on motor cars valued at less than $1500. Several Democratic Senators urged a further cut and recommended that the tariff be only 10 or 15 per cent on machines valued at less than $1000. This demand was made on the ground that cheap automobiles were now commercial necessities. The caucus did not settle the automobile controversy but asked Chairman Simmons and his colleague on the Finance Committee to investigate further. Advocates of the lower duty say the Government would lose little revenue as the high-priced machines pay most of the tariff.

Harmony was predicted by the Democratic leaders today, after the caucus broke up. None of the bitterly-fought sections of the bill had been reached, however.

Ready for Senate This Week.

Senator Kern, the party leader, said the caucus would bind all its members on all features of the bill except where they had made pledges to their constituents or felt that they could not conscientiously abide by the action of the majority.

Caucus consideration of the bill will be resumed at 10 o'clock Monday, and it is believed the measure will be ready for presentation to the Senate Thursday or Friday.

The income tax provision will not be given to the caucus until the committee is able to furnish also the estimates being prepared by the Commissioner of Corporations, as to the revenue the income tax would bring in if $3000 incomes were included within its taxing provisions.

Can't Beat "GETS-IT" for Corns—It's Sure

Never Tried It Before?—You'll Marvel How It Makes Corns Vanish.

There never was anything like "GETS-IT" for corns, and there isn't anything like it now. It is the corn cure on a new principle. Put it on any corn and in two seconds it stops pain, the corn begins to shrivel and disappears. It never fails. Simplest thing you ever saw. No fussy bandages, no greasy salves to turn healthy flesh "peely" and raw, no plasters that make corns bulge out. Your corns won't pull and hurt 'way up to your heart. Lay aside your knife and razor. No more digging and tugging and wincing, no more bleeding, no more danger of blood poison. "GETS-IT" never hurts healthy flesh; it is a painless, quick, simple, sure. For warts, callouses and bunions, too.

"GETS-IT" is sold at all druggists at 25 cents a bottle, or sent on receipt of price by E. Lawrence & Co., Chicago.

"Oh My, Oh My, What a Relief! 'GETS-IT' Stops Corn Pains Right Off and Gets Corns Every Time."

MISSOURIAN NAMED AS NEW MINISTER TO BOLIVIA; HIS WIFE

MRS. JOHN D. OREAR

J. D. OREAR AND HENRY VAN DYKE NEW DIPLOMATS

Missouri Lawyer Named by Wilson for Bolivia, Author for the Netherlands.

By Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, June 21.—The nomination of John D. O'Rear, an attorney of Mexico, Mo., a personal friend of Speaker Champ Clark, for Minister to Bolivia, was sent to the Senate today by President Wilson. He is a brother of Ed O'Rear, former Missouri State Insurance Commissioner. Other nominations by the President were:

Consul at Basel, Switzerland, Philip Holland of Tennessee.

Minister to the Netherlands and Luxembourg, Henry Van Dyke of New Jersey.

Postmaster at Wichita, Kan., John H. Shields.

Collector of Internal Revenue, Eighth District of Illinois, John L. Pickering of Springfield.

Commissioner of Patents, Thomas Ewing Jr. of New York.

First Assistant Commissioner of Patents, Robert T. Frasier of Tenessee.

United States Attorney for the Western District of Louisiana, George W. Jack.

United States District Attorney for the Eastern District of Tennessee, Lewis M. Coleman.

Collector of Internal Revenue, First District of Ohio, Andrew C. Gilligan.

Register of Land Office at Glasgow, Mont., Thomas R. Jones.

Receiver of Public Moneys at Glasgow, Mont., Edward C. Fargadine.

Promotion for Dr. Egan.

To Dr. Maurice Francis Egan, at present Minister to Denmark, has been tendered the Ambassadorship to Austria-Hungary. He has the offer under consideration. Indications are that he may find it impossible to accept the post.

The unusual honor has been conferred upon Dr. Egan by President Wilson of not only being offered retention in the diplomatic service, but promotion to the highest rank.

For many years Dr. Egan was a teacher of high rank in the Catholic University of America in this city. It is said Dr. Egan hesitates to accept promotion because of the added social obligation which would be entailed by living in Vienna.

Van Dyke Is an Author.

Van Dyke is 61 years old, a graduate of Princeton University and Princeton Theological Seminary. He is the author of about fifty books, many of them on religious subjects.

Ewing, new Commissioner of Patents, is a practicing patent attorney. He was once Assistant Examiner in the patent office and is a grandson of Thomas Ewing of Ohio, former Secretary of the Interior. He was born at Leavenworth, Kan., and twice was Democratic candidate for Mayor of Yonkers, N. Y.

Meredith Nicholson, Indiana novelist, has asked President Wilson to withdraw his nomination as Minister to Portugal if the appointment would embarrass him politically.

Objection has been raised that Nicholson had not always been a Democrat.

President Wilson wrote to Nicholson that all appointments had been made after personal investigation and that his name will not be withdrawn, notwithstanding political protests.

$100,000 BURGLAR GETS TEN YEARS IN PRISON

Owen D. Conn, Sentenced for Sixth Time, Posed as a Wealthy Man.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 21.—Owen D. Conn, the $100,000 burglar, was sentenced today to 10 years in the penitentiary, this being his sixth and longest prison term in a criminal career that has reached from New York to the Pacific coast. He confessed the burglary with which he was chcarged.

Conn's specialty was daylight burglaries. Posing as a wealthy man of leisure, he lived in fashionable hotels and his operations on the coast are supposed to have netted him $100,000.

Senate Accepts Request and Will Send Committee of Nine.

WASHINGTON, June 21.—The Senate today voted to accept the invitation of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania to attend the semi-centennial ceremonies of the battle of Gettysburg and Vice-President Marshall will appoint a committee of nine to attend.

Congressman L. C. Dyer of St. Louis, a Spanish war veteran, will attend as a member of the House committee.

COAL MINERS ARE ON VERGE OF WAR IN WEST VIRGINIA

Unrest Continues and Governor Will Ask Senate to Take Charge if Hostilities Arise.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CHARLESTON, W. Va., June 21.—The war between the striking miners and the coal operators of the Paint and Cabin Creek districts of West Virginia is not over.

Hostilities have only partially ceased. The issue over which property was destroyed and blood was shed six months ago is as acute today as it was in February. Had it not been for the strenuous efforts of President White and other national officers of the United Mine Workers of America fighting would have been resumed in the Kanawha territory this week.

Gov. Henry D. Hatfield, who released the prisoners sentenced to the penitentiary by the Glasscock military commissions and undertook to bring the operators and the strikers together, considers that his efforts should cease until the Senate committee reports its findings. He has withdrawn all the soldiers and lifted the martial law from the strike zone and will await developments.

The feeling of unrest has not abated. Many miners moved out of the Paint and Cabin Creek districts and are afraid to move back. Occasional assaults occur, and a numebr of threats of violence have been made within the last few days.

"If trouble breaks out again," said Gov. Hatfield to the Post-Dispatch correspondent, "I shall wire the United States Senate to take charge of it."

Mine workers among the union labor leaders and operators are trying to get the Senate Committee to name a commission to arbitrate the troubles between the warring factions, Senators Swanson, Kenyon and Borah may be asked to act on the proposed commission. If the plans on foot to bring about a settlement materialize, the Senate investigation may be abandoned.

Unless one visits the coal fields of the Kanawha district of West Virginia, he cannot realize how serious the situation is. A renewal of the civil war would mean, it is believed, by those on the ground, the death of hundreds of persons and the destruction of much property. The mountaineers who sympathize with or belong to the unions, are in an ugly mood.

$200,000,000 FOR ARMY

PARIS, June 21.—Taxes have been increased to meet the expenditure of $40,000,000 entailed by the new army proposals and the Minister of Finance has introduced a scheme for raising $200,000,000 for extraordinary expenditure in expediting military defense works, barracks, equipment and horses, necessitated by the proposed extra year's service.

The money is to be raised on a progressive income tax on all incomes of $2000 a year and over.

The young people taking part in this program have been hard at work rehearsing and an excellent performance will be given. Admission fees are 10 cents for children and 15 cents for grown folks. Tickets are now being sold and also may be obtained at the door on the night of the performance.

The Little Girls of Flad Avenue, an organization now in its sixth year, which has splendidly helped to save the tenement babies in past seasons, will give a beautiful performance of "Cinderella," a fairy play, at St. Margaret's Hall, Thirty-ninth and Flad avenue, next Wednesday evening, the proceeds of which will be divided between the Pure Milk and Free Ice Fund and Father Dempsey's Day Nursery.

Among those who will take part are the little Misses Alice Betz, Margaret Templeman, Augusta Erker, Virginia Scherrer, Mildred Aude, Ella Jens, Herma Rombauer, Marie Louise Bulte, Louise Becker and Elinor Holland Ring.

Full details of this entertainment, with a complete cast of the beautiful little fairy play, will be given later. The children are to appear in pretty costumes and the performance promises to be most enjoyable. An admission fee of 10 cents is charged.

The following letter quaintly sets forth how one little boy, with a temporary ally, worked to help save the tenement tots:

St. Louis, June 19, 1913.

Post-Dispatch Pure Milk and Free Ice Fund:—I have collected 64 cents for the Pure Milk Fund, and I hope that it will do some good. I stood on the corner of Spring avenue and Flora boulevard half of the time with my friend, Rene Mollenkopf, but he had to go home. I hope you will count him in, too.

Yours truly,
ROBERT CHARLES BENNETT,
2125 South Spring avenue.

Rene has been "counted in," and both these helpful boys are now members of the Post-Dispatch Pure Milk and Free Ice Fund League and owners of league membership cards.

So, too, has the name of little Violet Ruth Kern, three years old, of 4531 Wichita avenue, been enrolled on the league membership list and a membership card sent to her home address. She contributed 25 cents to help save the babies.

Elizabeth Russell, 3835 Westminster; Lucille Perry, 3821 Westminster, and Louise Rexford, 3829 Westminster, conducted a lemonade stand at the corner of Vandeventer and Westminster place and earned $3.35 with which to help save the babies.

All over town the children are working zealously for the Pure Milk Fund that rescues the little ones of the poor from death during the hot summer time.

They are all children of the league and their slogan is the league slogan: "Save the babies!"

BARKER SAYS NINE-HOUR LAW IS CLEARLY VALID

Tells Johnston It Can Be Enforced—No Distinction Between "Or" and "Nor."

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, June 21.—[illegible] the request of A. S. Johnston, State Factory Inspector, Attorney-General Barker prepared an opinion today, in which he held that the woman's nine-hour law is perfectly valid and can be enforced so as to prohibit the working of any woman more than nine hours a day. The Attorney-General says the average lawmaker makes no distinction between the meaning of "or" and "nor" and that the courts in construing an act attempt to draw no distinction.

The Attorney-General's opinion, addressed to the Inspector, follows:

"That portion of the law on which you desire an opinion of this department is as follows: 'More than nine hours during any one day or more than 54 hours during any one week.'

"We understand your inquiry to be: does this law prohibit such employment for more than nine hours during any one day of any female in any business operations mentioned in the law.

"Replying, we beg to advise you that this department has carefully considered your inquiry as to this law and we are of the opinion that this law is perfectly valid and may be enforced so as to prohibit any of the business concerns mentioned in the law from employing a female for more than nine hours during any one day."

BANKER HURT TRYING TO SAVE CHILD FROM AUTO

G. E. Hoffman Falls From Running Board—He and Boy, 6, Injured Slightly.

George E. Hoffman, cashier of the Merchants-Laclede National Bank, fell, yesterday afternoon from the running board of an automobile, where he had stepped to try to catch a child who was in the machine's path. He was slightly injured.

He did not succeed in catching the child, Frank Henry, 6 years old, of 4634 Delmar boulevard, and the boy was struck by the rear wheel of the car. He was not seriously hurt. Frank H. Farish of 5221 Washington avenue, who was driving the machine, carried Hoffman and the boy to a physician's office, and later took both home. Hoffman lives at [illegible] Westminster place.

Shot and Killed at Ladder Top.

EVANSVILLE, Ind., June 21.—John Hines, a negro hod carrier, was shot off the top of a ladder this afternoon by Simon L. Winfrey, another negro hod carrier, and instantly killed. The negroes had previously quarreled over a union card. Winfrey was arrested.

VATICAN PAINTING, STOLEN 300 YEARS AGO, FOUND IN U. S.

Dolci Masterpiece of 'Salome With Head of John the Baptist' in Philadelphia.

HIDDEN BY MODERN DAUB

Disguised as 'Youth and Love,' Face of Martyr had Been Made Dish of Fruit.

PHILADELPHIA, June 21.—It has just been discovered that a famous art masterpiece, which has been missing for centuries, has been hidden in the Wilstach collection in Memorial Hall in this city.

Instead of the beautiful painting which depicted one of the famous pictures of the sacred history of Christendom, as created by Carlo Dolci, this painting for nine years has hung upon the walls of the gallery as "Youth and Love," by Carlo Dolci.

In 1904 John G. Johnson, while abroad, bought it, with 84 other valuable paintings, and presented it to the city upon his return to Philadelphia. Recently, Johnson, as the head of the city's Art Commission, engaged Pasquale Farina to restore some of the works of art that adorn this gallery in Fairmount Park Farina discovered that the Dolci painting was one of the lost masterpieces of the world.

The daubs of paint which had altered the original puzzled the famous restorer. He knew that Dolci always took sacred subjects for his theme and he realized that the work in its present state meant nothing.

Painting With a History.

Convinced that the painting had a history, he began the removal of the paint. Little by little the colors which had been add to the original were removed, and, when he had finished his work, there was revealed one of Dolci's most treasured works, "Salome With the Head of John the Baptist."

It belonged years ago to Cardinal Fisher at the Vatican in Rome, but how it came to be covered up and disguised in the shape in which Johnson bought it may remain a mystery, for the painting is one of the lost masterpieces of the seventeenth century and it probably was stolen years ago.

Farina tells this story of his work:

"As the painting appeared in its altered condition, no meaning could be deducted from looking at certain kinds of beautiful fruits, perfectly rendered, placed before a group of figures seemingly surrounded by a tragic atmosphere.

"There was standing a figure representing a woman who manifested pride and a self-conscious sense of physical beauty, with a disdainful expression on her face.

Covered With Modern Paint.

"A maiden at her side, with a very sad expression on her face, inclines toward her, while observing the contents of the silver dish on the table filled with fruit and holding a pitcher with both hands. At the right lower corner was an angel holding a garland of flowers.

"I first tested the paints which had been employed and ascertained that they were of modern make, and then began partially to remove them. My convictions were soon verified. I then invited the custodian of the Wilstach collection to witness the uncovering.

"After eliminating the modern colors, in place of the fruit, I found portrayed the head of John the Baptist in a wonderfully good state of preservation.

Not a Scratch on It.

"There was not a single scratch upon it, not the slightest indication of the color fading, the tint cracking or peeling. Superbly drawn, delicately painted, highly finished, the picture expressed the calmness of a martyr.

"This head as now revealed is the most wonderful part of the whole composition as the artist painted it originally. The work of Dolci is now revealed in its true form.

"When the garland of flowers was removed, there appeared in the engel's hand a white scroll with a Latin inscription, which means 'Prepare the way for the Lord.'"

Picture Believed to Be Worth $200,000 Once Bought for 56 Cents.

VANCOUVER, B. C., June 21.—The picture which sold recently for 56 cents is on its way to the National Gallery in London from Melbourne, Australia, for confirmation of the belief of the owner that it is worth $200,000 or more.

Experts in Melbourne say a cablegram from London declared it a genuine Rubens. The canvas, known as "Thisbe and Pyramus," now is the property of Dr. A. J. Summers of Australia, who purchased it from a Melbourne vender recently for $250. The vendor said he paid 56 cents for it originally.

GEN. PERSHING PRAISED FOR SUBDUING MOROS

Governor-General Forbes Says Patience Was Exhausted Before Attack Was Ordered.

WASHINGTON, June 21.—Governor-General Forbes of the Philippines in a cablegram received today by the insular bureau with reference to the recent capture of the Moro stronghold of Bagsak on the Island of Jolo, says:

"It is my firm conviction that Brigadier-General Pershing exhausted all the virtues of his patience before taking the last drastic action of proceeding against the outlaws with armed force, that this action was necessary in the interest of good government, and that he has handled the situation with sagacity and skill.

"I hope that this will be the end of all trouble in that island."

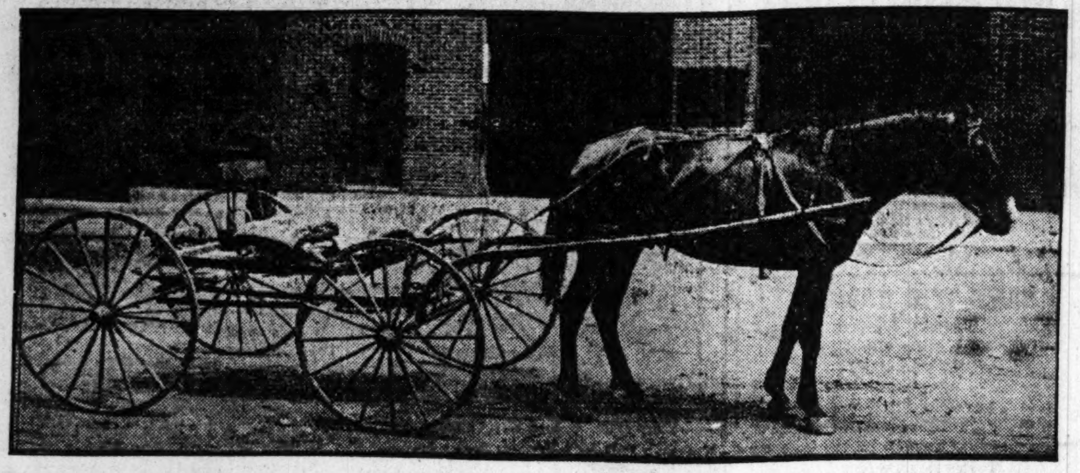
OLD ROMANS DRUG FIENDS

French Archaeologist Thinks He Has Found Proof of It.

PARIS, June 21.—Camille Pitollet, an archaeologist, has discovered proofs that the ancient Romans were pipe smokers, using lavender plants and leaves habitually and opium occasionally. Roman pipes recently found were made of a substance resembling meerschaum.

References to the smoking habit were discoverd in the literature of the time.

CAN YOU IDENTIFY THIS RIG, ONLY CLEW LEFT BY SLAYER OF YOUTH AT ROADHOUSE?



HORSE AND BUGGY IS ONLY CLEW TO SLAYER'S IDENTITY

County Authorities Publish Picture in Hope of Discovering Emsinger Murderer.

Having failed, after a week's investigation, to discover the identity of the mysterious murderer who shot and killed George Ensminger, a laborer, at Kammerer's roadhouse on the night of June 14, St. Louis County authorities have caused the publication of a picture of the horse and buckboard which the slayer abandoned. They hoped that someone would recognize the rig and thus supply a clew to its owner.

Diners at the roadhouse heard two shots, and found Ensminger dead, with one bullet through his heart and another in the back of his head.

Bloodhounds put on the trail followed it to the Missouri Pacific tracks, half a mile away, and lost the scent. It was thought that the murderer boarded a freight train for St. Louis.

He put up his horse and vehicle in the roadhouse stable at 4 o'clock in the afternoon, and left them when he fled.

FISHERMEN PROFIT BY ILLINOIS LAW'S CHANGE

Anglers From Missouri No Longer Need License When They Cross River.

The thousands of St. Louis fishermen who cross the river during the fishing season, to angle in Illinois rivers or lakes, will no longer be held up by Fish Wardens with a demand to see their license. After July 1 they will again be welcomed without penalty, for the State has abolished the license for foreign fishermen, who use pole and line.

Another change which will be appreciated by fish dealers in St. Louis is greater latitude in the size of carp and buffalo permitted to be taken. After next week fish 12 inches long of these varieties may be sold, where 15 inches is the present limit.

Other changes in the permissible sizes of fish caught in Illinois waters are: Rink perch, 7 inches; pike perch, 13 inches; striped bass, 8 inches; rock bass, 6 inches; black bass, 11 inches; pike and pickerel, 18 inches; crappie, 8 inches.

Trammel nets are prohibited at all times, but owners may seine their ponds or lakes with nets, a privilege heretofore denied. This will legitimatize much of the market fishing which heretofore has had to be carried forward by stealth.

JOHN D. BUYS SHEEP TO MOW GRASS ON LINKS

Rockefeller Finds Them Cheaper Than Motor Mowers and Sheep Like It.

TARRYTOWN, N. Y., June 21.—John D. Rockefeller is still economizing. While playing golf with some friends in the early spring one said: "Mr. Rockefeller, why don't you buy about 400 sheep and let them feed on your lawn, and in that way you would save the cost of cutting the grass, and, besides, the sheep would keep it in condition always."

"How much would they cost?" he said. The friend replied:

"About $6 apiece, making an expenditure of about $2400."

"Oh, that's too much," answered Mr. Rockefeller, and the matter dropped.

The idea did not drop with Mr. Rockefeller, however, and he went back to his house and started figuring the cost of his big motor lawn mowers and the cost of the sheep, and found out that his friend's suggestion was an economical one, so he placed an order for 400 Southdown sheep. Yesterday the last load was taken to Pocantico Hills by automobile and the sheep are eating their fill of grass on Mr. Rockefeller's estate and at the same time saving him money.

EMPLOYES TO GIVE PICNIC

Post-Dispatch Workers Will Have Outing at Belleville.

Employes of the Post-Dispatch will hold their second annual picnic next Sunday at the Belleville fair grounds. Direct cars will leave Eads Bridge at 8, 8:30, 9 and 9:15 a. m., and at 1, 1:30 and 2 p. m.

There will be a baseball game between teams of married and single men, and the winners will play a printers' nine. In the afternoon there will be a program of athletic events for prizes, features of which will be races for fat men, for married women and for girls.

The officers of the employes' association are P. J. Gordon, president, J. L. Claus, vice-president; Joseph Giles, secretary, and H. S. Grob, treasurer.

WIDOW TWICE, ST. LOUIS WOMAN TO WED AGAIN

Mrs. Ruth Alice Cole-Halliwell-Porter Is Engaged to New York Lawyer.

NEW YORK, June 21.—Mrs. Ruth Alice Porter, formerly the wife of the late Charles E. Halliwell of St. Louis, vice-president of the American Tobacco Co., is to be married for the third time. Her fiance, according to an announcement made today, is Warren C. Van Dyke, an attorney.

As Miss Ruth Cole, a trained nurse, she tended Halliwell during two severe attacks of illness in 1906, and in the fall of that year they were married. Six months later he died of apoplexy. A quarter of his $5,000,000 estate was left to his widow. Two years later she married William Porter, an intimate friend of her first husband. He was killed in an accident in 1911.

Halliwell rose from an office boy to the vice-presidency of the Liggett & Myers Tobacco Co., and on its absorption by the American Tobacco Co. took the vice-presidency in that corporation.

Chalice as a Racing Cup.

LONDON, June 21.—At a meeting of the Norfolk and Norwich Archeological Society at Yarmouth the Rev. E. C. Hopper, M. A., who read a paper on old church silver, said a cup won in a horse-race at Gloucester was found to bear an inscription which proved that it was a chalice from a neighboring church.

SULZER CHARGES MURPHY PLOTS TO BLACKEN HIM

Governor Tells Newspaper Men Fight Is Result of Refusal To Obey Tammany.

By Associated Press.

ALBANY, N. Y., June 21.—Accusing Charles F. Murphy of being "behind a conspiracy to blacken my character because I refused to do his bidding," Gov. Sulzer tonight gave in detail his version of his break with the Tammany chieftain. For more than an hour the Governor sat in the executive chamber and told to the newspaper correspondents a story bitter in its denunciation of Tammany's leader and replete with allegations that Murphy had attempted to influence the executive's action in matters of legislation, appointments and removal from office.

The Governor said he had seen Murphy only three times since his inauguration. The last meeting was arranged by a friend, who wanted to straighten the differences between the executive and the Tammany leader.

"I listened to his propositions," the Governor said, "but I refused to do what he wanted me to do, because, in my opinion, he was wrong."

"Was it as to patronage?" the Governor was asked.

"Yes, and Stilwell, and direct primaries. I told him not to issue orders to save Stilwell and to let the Legislature pass a fair and just direct primary bill. He refused. I left him. That was the last and that was final.

"I came back to Albany a sad man because some of my ideals had been shattered. I talked it over with Mrs. Sulzer because I have few confidants. I know I am surrounded by spies.

"When I finished telling the story to Mrs. Sulzer, I said there are just three things for me to do—resign, surrender or fight. I have carefully considered it all, and have made up my mind to fight. Mrs. Sulzer kissed me and said: 'You are right; go on with the fight; I think more of you now than I ever did in my life.'"

The Governor declared that he had been threatened with ruin unless he did as he was bid.

"I have always answered," he said, "as I am answering now; no man can ruin me but William Sulzer. I refused to do Murphy's bidding. I refused to be part of a criminal conspiracy to loot a state."

The New York Sun today printed a long story asserting that Gov. William Sulzer was presented by a Vermont jury for perjury and conspiracy in 1889, that no action was taken on the presentment and that all the court records concerning the affair have disappeared.

The Sun this morning quotes ex-Judge George M. Curtis, in whose office Gov. Sulzer read law, as saying: "I am very reluctant to tell you even this. The jury which found in favor of Mrs. Mary Maud Carr Watson, who had been sued for $10,000 legal fees by Mr. Sulzer, also presented through their foreman in writing a petition to the United States District Attorney that Mr. Sulzer be punished for perjury and conspiracy."

IMPORT OF GEMS FOR A YEAR ABOUT $50,000,000

Records Broken, Brokers Say Inrush Is Due to Attempt to "Beat" New Tariff.

NEW YORK, June 21.—Diamonds, pearls, rubies, sapphires, emeralds and other gems valued at $43,686,000, have come from abroad through the New York custom house in the last 11 months.

This beats all previous records. Maiden Lane experts estimate the year's importation of gems at more than $50,000,000.

Some brokers say the inrush is due to an attempt to "beat" the new tariff, it being feared that the rate on cut diamonds will be raised considerably. By bringing in $19,000,000 of cut diamonds ahead of the new tariff, the importers will make a net profit of $1,000,000 in duties alone.

Other diamond brokers say that the $10,000,000 increase in imports is largely the answer of the rich don't-cares to the cry against the high cost of living.

The Diamond Trust in South Africa has restricted the output. Oriental sapphires have risen to $400 a carat. The fad for pink pearls has driven them up 125 per cent. An Indian pearl trust has been formed. About half of the fine pearls in the world are owned in New York City, the purchases here averaging $10,000,000 a year.

William H. Coyle Is Acquitted.

GUTHRIE, Ok., June 21.—A verdict of "not guilty" was brought in late today in the case of William H. Coyle, wealthy cotton gin owner, who was charged by the State with forming a pool to raise the price of ginning and destroy competition in cotton buying.

WIVES ENCOURAGE MEN'S ATTENDANCE AT FINANCE SCHOOL

Graduates of St. Louis University Commerce Course Urged to Persist in Studies.

The average age of the class just graduated from the St. Louis University School of Commerce and Finance was over 30. The youngest "grad" was 21 and the oldest 42. Six out of the ten men who received their degrees were married.

These ten business men after working during the day for three years attended night classes three nights each week.

The men who successfully took this course to receive a university education along commercial lines are: Gustave G. Klausner, department manager of Marx & Haas Clothing Co.; R. L. Daly, auditor of the St. Louis Board of Education; F. G. Burgess, head bookkeeper of the Bellefontaine Cemetery Association; J. L. Rueve, of the Wabash railroad; A. C. Meyers, constructive engineer at the Brecht Manufacturing Co.; J. A. Neuman, of the Moline Plow Co.; Edward Bakewell, Union Electric Light & Power Co.; J. E. Croak, department manager of M. E. Croak Clothing Co.; G. F. Mason of the Board of Education, and W. F. Connor of the Continental Portland Cement Co.

First School in West.

The purpose of the three-year course is to give the student a more complete knowledge of the principles and methods of modern business. St. Louis University is the first University west of the Mississippi river to make this course a part of the collegiate curriculum.

"The ten men who made up the first class to be graduated from the new course," said the Rev. Father Davis, regent of the school, to a Post-Dispatch reporter, "are as their occupations show, business men who already occupy excellent business positions, but who realize that further advancement is a matter of more thorough technical training. One member of the class received four successive advancements from the firm with which he is connected during the three years of his course."

Wives Encourage Them.

The married men of the class, some of whom have children attending grammar schools, admit that they never would have had the perseverance and energy to keep up the pace for three years if it had not been from the encouragement they received from their wives.

Many evenings at home or with friends were sacrificed by them in order that "hubby" might be on time for the opening of his class. Also the fact that "father" had to report regularly to "mother" how he was getting along at school served to spur the student on to heavy exertions.

The School of Commerce embraces in its full course, economics, mercantile law, accounting and the commercial languages, and business administration, and special courses in particular lines of business. The professors are successful business men and leaders in the professions.

The course covers a period of three years and classes meet every Monday, Wednesday and Friday evening for eight months during the year.

RETIRED MERCHANT WEDS

Eugene Lewis Takes as Bride Mrs. Eva Ray of South Side.

Eugene Lewis, a retired merchant, living at 500 Culver Way, and Mrs. Eva Ray of 4100 Botanical avenue were married in the Methodist Church in Kirkwood at 5:30 p. m. yesterday. The Rev. J. D. Martin performed the ceremony. Lewis, 56 years old, had been considered by his friends as a confirmed bachelor.

Mrs. Ray is a divorcee. It was at the Veiled Prophet ball of 1910 that the couple first met. It was a case of love at first sight. One year ago their engagement was announced. They intend to spend a six-weeks honeymoon in Canada. After their return they will make their home in St. Louis.

END TO FRANKS PROPOSED

WASHINGTON, June 21.—The franking privilege which costs the Government millions of dollars a year, would be wiped out by a bill proposed today by Senator Kenyon. Official stamps would be issued to Government officials who would be required to give strict account of their use.

Testimony in the lobby investigation showed that in one instance sugar interests, under Senator Lodge's frank, circulated, at the Government's expense, mail matter which would have otherwise cost $16,000 in postage.

TALBOT'S 4 FIRSTS WIN STADIUM MEET FOR KANSAS CITY

Reller and Nicholson Star for Missouri A. C., but Visitors' Field Points Outweigh Theirs.

By Ralph Bryan.

IN the annual Western District Amateur Athletic Union track and field meet, in which three records were lowered, the M. A. C. track team was again humbled, for the fourth successive time, by their old rivals from the Kansas City A. C. at Francis Field yesterday afternoon. The final team score stood: Kansas City A. C. 78, Missouri A. C. 53, Hibernian A. C. 10, Central Y. M. C. A. 1, Christian Brothers College 1, and First Regiment 1.

The Kansas City team upset the preliminary dope by annexing nine firsts and placing in each of the 16 events, with the exception of the five-mile run.

Storm Interrupts Meet.

The meet dragged, and was kept from being run off in the best of style by the storm that blew up before the events were half over, and by the fact that a meet of Webster Groves youngsters had to be run off at the same time, due to the Stadium having been granted to them before the W. A. A. U. officials applied for the use of the field.

Before the advent of the storm, which prevented the athletes from showing to best advantage, three of the standing W. A. A. U. records were broken, the half-mile, mile and the hammer throw marks being the ones to suffer. And all of this record-breaking was in the hands of the men from up state.

In the second number on the afternoon's program, Porter Craig brought the former mark of two minutes flat for the 880-yard run down to 1m. 58 4-5s. The second mark to fall was Johnson's (K. C. A. C.) old time of 4m. 34s in the mile run. This was lowered to 4m. 31 4-5s. by L. E. Hutto, who, only three weeks ago, won the two-mile run from the pick of the Missouri Valley athletes in the big conference meet at the Stadium.

Lee Talbot, the premier weight man of this part of the country, broke his own mark of 166 feet in the hammer throw by hurling the weight 166 feet 7 inches.

How the Points Were Scored in Stadium Meet

Totals	78	53	10	1	1	1

As was known beyond a doubt before the meet began, it was this giant from Kansas City who proved to be the big individual point gatherer of the afternoon's events. Talbot had little trouble in annexing his customary four firsts, totaling 20 points, in the weight events.

John Patrick Nicholson, ex-captain of the famous Missouri University track team, ran second to the big Kansas Cityan, totaling 14 points. Nick, besides winning his usual first in the high hurdles, grabbed a first from Kirksey in the race over the low sticks, surprising the dopesters, who had all picked the latter.

Oliver Reller Wins 100-Yard Dash by Equaling Record of 9 4-5 Seconds

OLIVER RELLER, the fast St. Louis lad, who is making a name for himself in Eastern collegiate circles, running under Cornell's colors, lived up to all that was expected of him. He had things all his way in both the 100 and 220 yard sprints, and in spite of the lack of keen competition, covered the 100 yards in 9 4-5 seconds. This time, caught by four watches, equals the W. A. A. U. mark, as well as coming up to Reller's best time made in the Eastern meets when running against such international stars as Patterson and Lippincott.

McGinnis, the K. C. A. C. dash man, although running second in both the sprints, was unable to finish any closer than six yards behind the winner.

The M. A. C. team lost out on a first position when Blewett Wagoner, captain of the Yale track team and pole vaulter of repute, failed to show for the local club in the pole vault. Wagoner would have had little trouble in beating Woodbury's (K. C. A. C.) mark of 11 ft. 8 in., and with Miller, the 12 ft. 6 in. man of Harvard's '09 track squad running second or third for M. A. C., the local team's total would have been helped along considerably. As it was, Woodbury and Miller tied for first, with J. R. Goetzman of C. B. C. vaulting third. On the jump off, Miller's lack of training showed and allowed the Kansas Cityan to carry off the 5 points.

One of the noteworthy features of the meet was the performance of one Robert Simpson of the K. C. A. C. squad, who followed Nicholson in the point race, gathering one first and two seconds, a total of 11 points. He is a long and lanky youth, just out of high school, and destined to enroll in Missouri U. next fall. His work in general and especially his taking the broad jump from Nicholson and Ratican, caused considerable favorable comment among the spectators. His mark in the broad jump was 21 feet 9 inches.

As the Kansas City team's victory is credited largely to Mr. Lee Talbot, so can the Hibernian A. C.'s finishing third be laid to one Harry Ratican. The former C. B. C. lad annexed six of his team's 10 points by winning the hop, step and jump and getting a third in the broad jump.

The summary:

Half-mile—Craig, K. C. A. C., first; Kenaston, K. A. C., second; Probst, H. A. C., third. Time, 1m. 58 4-5s.

100-yard dash, final—Reller, M. A. C., first; McGinnis, K. C. A. C., second; Kirksey, M. A. C., third. Time, 9 4-5s., by four watches, tying W. A. A. U. record.

120-yard high hurdles—Nicholson, M. A. C., first; Woodbury, K. C. A. C., second; Martin, K. C. A. C., third. Time, 15 3-5s.

16-pound shot-put—Lee Talbot, K. C. A. C., first, 45 feet 2¼ inches; Bohm, M. A. C., second; Wulff, M. A. C., third.

440-yard dash—Henry Martin, K. C. A. C., first; Porter Craig, K. C. A. C., second; J. B. Latshaw, M. A. C., third. Time, 51 1-5s.

Boult, K. C. A. C., second; Bantin, M. A. C., third. Time, 4m. 31 4-5s. This beats the Western record by 2 1-5s.

220-yard dash—O. A. Reller, M. A. C., first; Harry McGinnis, K. C. A. C., second; Guy Kirksey, M. A. C., third. Time, 23 4-5s.

Throwing 16-pound hammer—Lee Talbot, K. C. A. C., 116 ft. 7 in., breaking his own record by 7 inches, first; R. S. Bowers, K. C. A. C., second; Hans Wulff, M. A. C., third.

220-yard low hurdle—J. P. Nicholson, M. A. C., first; Guy Kirksey, M. A. C., second; L. Winn, K. C. A. C., third. Time, 27s.

Pole vault—Tod Woodbury, K. C. A. C., Guthrie McMiller, M. A. C., tied for first; J. R. Goetzman, C. B. C., third. Height 11 feet.

Running high jump—O. Vassar, M. A. C., and R. Simpson, K. C. A. C., tied for first; F. L. Dover, M. A. C., and T. Woodbury, K. C. A. C., tied for third. Height, 5 ft. 6 in.

56-pound weight—Lee Talbot, K. C., 29 ft. 1 in., first; O. Friede, M. A. C., second; H. Wulff, M. A. C., third.

Broad jump—R. Simpson, K. C. A. C., first, 21 ft. 9 in.; J. P. Nicholson, M. A. C., second; H. Ratican, H. A. C., third.

Five-mile run—Frank Johnson, M. A. C., first; J. A. Probst, H. A. C., second; J. Kaysing, C. Y. M. C. A., third. Time, 28m. 52s.

Discus throw—Lee Talbot, K. C. A. C., first, 127 ft. 10 in.; K. Kenaston, K. C. A. C., second; W. C. Jones, First Regiment, third.

HARVARD DEFEATS YALE NINE AFTER BITTER STRUGGLE

Eli Team Appears a Winner, at One Time, but Loses 6—5.

NEW YORK, June 21.—The athletic sons of old John Harvard continued their victorious career this afternoon when they defeated Yale in the deciding game of their baseball series at Ebbetts Field, Brooklyn, by a score of 6 runs to 5.

More than 10,000 persons, many of whom had cheered the Crimson crews to victory on the Thames on Friday, saw the contest, and when the contest was over there were platoons of men, huge of build and strong of lung, who could scarcely speak above a whisper. They had "rooted" themselves hoarse at the boat races and put their vocal cords completely out of business helping the baseball men to victory.

Victory Carries Title.

Although the Yale team had played the better ball during the season, Harvard's victory earned them what is known in Yale and Harvard circles as the intercollegiate championship of 1913.

As a contest the game was a poor one. There was much more college spirit shown than there was good baseball. It was a loosely-played game. Both sides made few errors and hits, but the pitchers were wild and gave many bases on balls.

This was probably due to the fact that they had been overworked during the week. It was the opinion of veteran baseball experts that three games in one week is too much for young college twirlers, and because of their great showing earlier in the season Yale was an odds-on favorite. They were 1 to 2 in the betting before the game, and when the teams took the field without Clark on second base for Harvard the odds dropped to 1 to 3. Clark had come on here with the team, but this morning developed tonsilitis and was ordered to remain in bed.

Because of Clark's absence the entire batting order of Harvard was switched around. Everybody played in everybody else's place. Yale used three pitchers and Harvard two.

BIG LEAGUERS SEEK FORMER HARVARD STAR

WASHINGTON, June 21.—Chick McLaughlin, the former Harvard baseball captain and pitcher, has been offered a berth on the White Sox and is seriously considering the offer, according to a statement made by one of the White Sox officials.

McLaughlin said this morning that he had received not only one, but three or four offers from big League clubs to join, and intimated that it was merely a question of price which one he would accept. McLaughlin has been playing a whole lot of semi-pro baseball around Boston since graduation.

FORMER M. A. C. RUNNER SECOND IN DISTANCE RUN

CHICAGO, June 21.—Fritz Carlson of the Illinois Athletic Club today won the 15-mile cross-country run from Chicago to Evanston, in 1h. 29m. 5s. W. J. Kennedy was second and Sidney L. Hatch third. Hannes Kolehmainen, the Finnish Olympic runner, did not start.

CANADIAN TENNIS MEN WIN DAVIS CUP MATCH

LONDON, June 21.—Canada today won the deciding match from South Africa in the elimination round for the selection of a challenger for the Dwight F. Davis lawn tennis trophy when B. P. Schwengers of British Columbia beat R. F. LeSueur of South Africa in the singles by three straight sets, 6—3, 6—3, 6—3.

Canada had already won the singles match and the doubles match, while South Africa won one singles match. The Canadians will meet the Belgians in the semi-finals and the winners of that series will meet the Americans or the Germans, who are drawn together in the other semi-final.

EIGHTEEN-YEAR-OLD BOY WINS COAST TENNIS CUP

DELMONTE, Cal., June 21.—William Johnston of San Francisco, an 18-year-old boy, won the Pacific Coast lawn tennis championship in singles today, defeating John Strachan in the final match, 6—1, 6—2, 3—6, 4—6, 6—4. Maurice E. McLoughlin, holder of the title, was not present to defend.

Johnston, who has made a clean sweep of all the important tennis tournaments on this court in the last year, including the British Columbia championship, will represent the Pacific Coast Lawn Tennis Association in the Eastern events.

CORNELL YIELDS TO SYRACUSE IN BIG CREW RACE

For First Time in Five Years, Courtney's Entry Is Beaten at Poughkeepsie.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., June 21.—Carefully donning a pair of earmuffs to shut out a racket of up-State cheers, and adjusting some smoked specks to ward off a vivid orange glare that is lighting this old town's main street like a four-alarm fire, we will proceed (and take pleasure in so doing) to shoot in a new boat race story from the banks of the Hudson. It's new because Cornell, for the first time in five years, didn't win.

A fast-going, gamely-fighting, never-weakening crew from Syracuse University won the eight-oared varsity race by three-quarters of a length from Cornell, after taking the lead at the bridge, which marks the beginning of the last mile of the four.

They fought it out over that final heart-breaking stretch, neck and neck always.

Hard Pace for Oarsmen.

At the heart-breaking pace they were going, side by side, through a riot of cheers, whistles and cannon shots, it seemed inevitable that one or the other must "crack," that some lad of the 16 must find the job too terrific for his slender years.

But none did, and the prides of old Jim Ten Eyck, gazing sidewise through sweat-blinded eyes at the pets of old Charley Courtney, matched them stroke for stroke, spurt for spurt, and in the final few yards not only held them safe, but went further away from them. Therefore the racket and the orange glare hereinbefore referred to. Syracuse is turning the town upside down celebrating their first victory since 1908, and the town is helping them, because it's a fine thing for the town to have the prospect of the old-time great regatta crowds coming back. Cornell's four consecutive victories had threatened to kill off all interest in the race. The wearers of the Orange are "native sons" tonight.

Washington Crew Is Third.

But the newcomers—the Washington crew that journeyed all the way from far northwestern corner of the country to sweep things with the best of the East, have likewise been adopted, they "belong."

In a magnificent fight, just a few feet behind the big main struggle of Syracuse and Cornell, the boys from the Pacific Coast outplucked Wisconsin and Columbia and won for themselves third place by a length and the affection of everybody who saw them do it.

Every crew, except Pennsylvania, was in some sort of a fight. After Washington drew away the "Badgers" and Columbia had a lovely scrap of their own for fourth place. The New Yorkers, worn out by making all the pace for the first three miles, had to succumb. They finished three-fourths of a length behind Wisconsin, but half a dozen open lengths in front of the Quakers. The times of the first three were:

Syracuse, 19m. 28 3-5s.; Cornell, 19m. 31s.; Washington, 19m. 33s.

Cornell won the four-oared varsity race rather easily, with Pennsylvania second and Columbia third. The Ithacans always triumphed over the Freshmen eights of the others, although there, Wisconsin gave them a fight that was not over until the finishing gun banged.

St. Louis Feds Unable to Find Pitcher Hogue

Former Boston National Pitcher Helps Trim Terriers, Score 9 to 0.

COVINGTON, Ky., June 21.—Hogue, recently secured by Covington from the Boston Nationals, had little trouble winning the third game of the series here with St. Louis this afternoon, score 9 to 0. It was a plain case of too much pitching for St. Louis.

The nine hits secured by the visitors were scattered over as many innings, the only inning in which more than one single was obtained being the eighth. Two were on bases in this round and the chances were bright for a run for St. Louis, but Hogue tightened up and fanned his man for the second out and killed the third with an infield roller. Mullen, who was working for St. Louis, lacked control, passing seven men, but he showed good breaking curves when he was able to get them across, which is proved by his strikeout record of eight men.

One of the features of the game was the fast work of Miller in right field for St. Louis. He threw out two Covington men on hits to right, quite a play for this field.

Hannagan, a new man, went to third for Covington this afternoon in the place of Dietrick, and played a stellar game, getting three hits out of four times up, two of them doubles. He was robbed out of a fourth hit by the fast work of Miller in right. Besides his outfield work, Miller had a good day with the stick, getting three out of four, one of them for two sacks.

Mullen also got three out of four for St. Louis. Tobin was sent in to bat for Murphy in the seventh when two were on, but failed to come through, lining to Emery. The final game of this series will be played Sunday.

M'NAMARA MAKES GOOD IN BRITISH GOLF EVENT

HOY LAKE, England, June 21.—Play in the elimination rounds of the open golf championship of Great Britain continued here today. The Massachusetts champion, Tom L. McNamara of Wollaston, made the first round in 77 strokes and John Jones of Awasco, N. Y., completed the second round in 80.

W. Heinrich Schmidt, the young amateur of Worcester, Mass., who played so brilliantly in the championship tournament at St. Andrews, took 86 strokes to make the first round.

LITTLE AND HALL LOSE TENNIS CHAMPIONSHIP

NEW YORK, June 21.—Charles M. Bull Jr. and W. M. Washburn won the metropolitan lawn tennis championship in doubles here today at the West Side Tennis Club. In the final round they defeated R. D. Little and W. M. Hall at 7—9, 8—6, 6—4 and 6—2. The result was an upset, as Little is an ex-national champion and member of the Davis cup team, while Hall has been rated at No. 10 on the national list for the country.

The championship match in the singles, which was postponed because of a death in the family of T. R. Pell, will be decided next Saturday, June 28.

Another Cup for Travers.

NEW YORK, June 21.—Jerome D. Travers of Upper Montclair, N. J., national, metropolitan and New Jersey State golf champion, won the final match of the invitation tournament over the links of the Apawamis Golf Club, Rye, N. Y., by 1 up from T. V. Bermingham of Wykagyl today.

Travis Wins Golf Final.

WILMINGTON, [illegible], June 21.—Walter J. Travis of Garden [illegible] defeated B. Warren Corkran of Baltimore 2 up and 1 to play in the final round for the Wilmington cup today at the annual tournament at the Wilmington Country Club.

STICKNEY DEFEATS RIDER AND SETS NEW GOLF RECORD

Country Club Star Wins Trans-Mississippi Title From Des Moines Star, 5 Up, 3 to Play.

By W. J. O'Connor

STUART STICKNEY of the Country Club yesterday, on the Glen Echo links, won the trans-Mississippi golf championship, in its thirteenth renewal, from Ralph H. Rider of the Hyperion Club of Des Moines, Io., 5 up and 3 to play. Stickney assumed the lead in the fourth green of the morning round and never relinquished it.

His medal score of 70 for the morning round is the best ever made by an amateur for this course. The former record of 71 was held jointly by Carl Piepho and Rider, and was made in this tournament. The professional record is 68, made by Gil Nichols and Freddie McLeod.

With the exception of Albert Bond Lambert, who for one season held the championship of France, Stickney is the first St. Louis golfer ever to win a sectional title. The closest a local golfer ever came to greater fame than that achieved by Stickney yesterday was in 1910, when Harry Allen of Field Club, now a member of Bellerive, was runnerup to John D. Cady for the Western championship at the Rock Island Arsenal Club.

Stickney's best previous performance was made four years ago, when he lost to Fred Herreshoff in 37 holes in the national open championship. Herreshoff later was vanquished by Harold Hilton, champion of England, in the finals.

Stickney played sensational golf in the morning round yesterday, when he turned his 70 score. He was four under par and eight under bogey, shooting almost perfect golf for the entire round. His putting was deadly, while the fast, sun-baked course gave his drives great distance. He shot "straight down the aisle" from every tee and only one of his approach shots went wrong in the first 18 holes. A 20-foot put, the longest of the day, then saved the hole for him.

The afternoon round was marred by a wind storm which hit Glen Echo shortly after 4 o'clock. Rain followed driving the largest gallery of the tournament to cover while the players were not quite able to gauge their shots into the teeth of the wind.

Rider weakened after he had all but squared the count in the [illegible] green of the afternoon round. He continued his good work on the green, but his driving and [illegible] shots were below his best form. Stickney stuck to his knitting, bracing in the face of discouraging conditions and frequently retrieving the loss on a drive by a sensational approach. Going to No. 3, for instance, Stickney's ball lodged at the base of a bunker. He then dug into the turf and lifted his ball over the knoll, getting distance as well as clearing a minature hill that seemed almost perpendicular to the ball.

Stickney Sets New Record in Morning

TO gain an advantage of three holes over Ralph Rider in the first round of the final match in the Trans-Mississippi golf tournament at Glen Echo yesterday, Stuart Stickney was forced to set a new amateur record for the course. Here's his card:

Morning Round.

Both Finalists Played Par Golf for Better Part of Morning Round

THE first round was devoid of sensational features other than two long puts, one by each player. Stickney won on No. 4 by running down a 22-foot put. Rider retaliated by making a 20-foot put on No. 6, halving the hole. On the other greens the contenders played well nigh perfect golf, making the hard shots look easy by their deadly accuracy.

Stickney came through the first 18 holes with his foe three down. When the afternoon round started, Rider went forth with a rush, winning the first two holes. He drove 275 yards onto the green at the first hole and won it 3—4. Stickney missed a 6-foot put and Rider also won No. 2. That made Stickney only 1 up.

Stickney missed another short put on No. 3, but Rider had trouble with his first iron shot and the hole was halved 4—4. Stickney's weakness on the greens up to this stage of the afternoon round made his friends skeptical about the local man's chances. However he braced and won No. 4, but fell down on another short put, about four feet, and lost No. 5.

They halved Nos. 6-7-8 with fours and then Rider went to smash, losing No. 9 after he had pitched his ball across the lake into the hedge fence. This started the Des Moines star on a streak of desultory playing from which he never rallied. He also lost No. 10, after overapproaching the green, and was 3 down when they squared off for No. 11. This hole was halved, as was No. 12.

The most sensational golfing of the match was seen going to No. 13. A strong wind swept over the course from the north and both players failed to allow for it. As a result their first shots went into the ditch. Rider foolishly tried to play straight ahead for the hole. His ball hit a tree and bounded back 20 yards and into the ditch again. Straddling the deep ditch, he took another wild swing and the ball shot off at a tangent and hit Frank Fitzgibbons of Normandie, who was watching the match, on the chin, but didn't injure him. Rider then played his fourth from the tall grass and approached short of the green.

Stickney showed better generalship. He played his ball away from the course onto the next hill. He had practically the same lie as Rider, but profited by the latter's experiences. His second shot, which was a beauty, put his ball on the hill to the right of the No. 13 fair green, out in the tall grass going to No. 4. To approach the objective green, he was obliged to lift his ball over a clump of tall oaks and into a strong wind. He dug turf with several practice swings, then wopped his ball, landing it on the green. This shot provoked the longest applause heard during the match. Stickney laid his ball at the lip of the cup on his fifth and holed out in 6, while Rider took a 7.

No. 14 was halved in 3 and Rider then was dormie 4. He forfeited his last chance going to No. 15, when he topped his drive into the stream. He dropped a ball at the edge of the water at a penalty of one stroke and played his third to the edge of the green, but Stickney approached well, laid up for a 4 and holed out, 4—5.

It Now Appears That the Only Deal Possible for the Cards Is a Misdeal

JACKSON IS ONLY PERFORMER IN A. L. HITTING OVER .400

Shoeless Joe Slumps During Week, but Still Owns 18-Point Advantage Over Cobb.

PRATT STILL IMPROVING

After a Dismal Start, Brownie Second Sacker Now Owns a .288 Batting Mark.

Joe Jackson and Ty Cobb fell off in their hitting during the last week. Shoeless Joe's slump was even greater than that of the Peach, but the former owns an 18 point advantage over the Tiger. Their marks are, Jackson. 407, Cobb, .389. Their notches a week ago were, Jackson .432, Cobb, .395.

Burt Shotton slipped from the .300 section during the last seven days, his average today being .296, while a week ago he owned a .305 mark. He is the leading Brownie hitter.

After a dismal start, Derrill Pratt is coming into his own. Today, the stylish young Southerner owns a .288 notch He has made wonderful progress after hitting about .175 during the first month of the campaign.

WRAY'S COLUMN

Taking Another Chance.

MAKING a positive statement as to what a baseball team is going to accomplish in the future is an almost positive symptom of weakmindedness. Yet there are many now willing to hazard the opinion that the American League champions of 1913 will also be the world's champions, in October.

The Athletics and the American League pennant winners are synonymous terms to most of these, who see in the flying Mack machine an even stronger force than that which won the pennant from New York in 1911.

"Many a Slip" Etc.

BUT the Athletics are not yet "in," nor is it any certainty that even the powerful Mack attack will win the world's championship if it cops the American League flag.

The most that can be said is: It is the logical winner and the best all-round club.

Giants Are Coming.

RIGHT now it appears that McGraw will again fight it out with the Athletics for the world's laurels. The Phillies are weakening. They are sure to go even further to the bad, for the club is not the smart, close-defense club that McGraw's Giants nearly always are. With the McGraw pitchers coming and the Phillie team waning, it's another one of those good guesses that the Phils will not be able to hang on.

Tesreau Makes a Difference.

AND, far from finding the McGrawites a cinch, it may eventuate that Muggsy will turn out even tougher nut to crack than formerly. Had the Giants a Stengel in the outfield, the team could be looked on favorably as a possible world's champion.

This time the Giants should have a pitching staff that will be at its best. Instead of starting the season with a rush, it is starting slowly and growing better. This should bring it at its top stride near the close of the season.

In addition, the Giants this year will have three truly great pitchers instead of only two, as when the Giants tried the Athletics the first time. Tesreau will be a seasoned winner and should be hard for the Philadelphians to handle by October. With Mack minus his big asset, Coombs, with Bender performing in and out and with only Eddie Plank and a cloud of youngsters to rely on, the Mackmen have not the control of the situation their runaway race in the American League appears to lend them.

Not Even A. L. Winners, Yet.

FURTHERMORE, they haven't shaken off the contention in the League race hopelessly. Cleveland is hanging on doggedly and Chicago is surprising everyone, especially since Hal Chase began working so well. It's entirely too early to see the finish of either League race or the world series, unless you happen to be in the clairvoyance business.

PHILLIES TRIM BEANS IN DOUBLE HEADER

BOSTON, June 21.—Philadelphia defeated Boston, 5 to 4, and 5 to 2, in a double-header this afternoon. The visitors captured the first contest by a batting rally in the ninth inning, when they scored all their runs. Rudolph had held Philadelphia to five hits in the first eight innings.

The contests attracted the largest crowd that has been in the park this season, ground rules prevailing. Scores:

RUCKER BEATS MARQUARD IN GREAT PITCHING DUEL

NEW YORK, June 21.—Nap Rucker won a brilliant pitchers' battle from Rube Marquard today, Brooklyn shutting out New York, 2 to 0.

Rucker yielded only four hits, two of them being flukes. In spite of the fact that in five innings the first New York batter reached first base, the champions did not get a man to third and only two reached second.

NAPS OVERCOME SIX-RUN LEAD AND WIN, 7—6

CLEVELAND, O., June 21.—Overcoming the six-run lead which Detroit secured in the first inning, Cleveland won today's game, 7 to 6. Both Falkenberg and Dauss were driven from the box in the first inning in which Detroit made all their runs. Mitchell went in to pitch for Cleveland in the second and held Detroit to one hit. Hall replaced Dauss, but was taken out in favor of Lake in the seventh. Two bases on balls, Cobb's triple, singles by Veach and Gainer and McKee's home run over the fence brought in Detroit's six runs in the first. Cleveland scored four in their half of the first and three more in the sixth on Jackson's triple, Lajoie's double, Graney's single and Mitchell's single. The score:

HUGGINS SLUMPS IN HITTING, BUT REMAINS NEAR TOP

Manager of Cards Drops Ten Points but Gavvy Cravath Takes Deeper Plunge.

WINGO IS IN .300 CIRCLE

McDonald and Titus of Boston Braves Are Headliners Among Batters This Week.

The loss of 10 points during the week has not seriously crimped Miller Huggins' batting average. The small manager of the Cardinals this week is hitting .342 and still hobnobs with the leaders. He gained ground on Gavvy Cravath of the Phils, who showed the way for the N. L. batsmen last week with a .372 notch, but is hitting only .350 this week.

Infielder McDonald of the Braves, with a .370 mark, is the real pace-maker. In 30 games he has put together a better mark than any other man in the league. Old Man Titus of the same team is the runner-up with a .358 mark.

Ivy Wingo is the only other Cardinal besides Huggins who is mingling in the .300 set. Ed Koney, at 288, is next in line among the Robison Field cadets.

Saints Yield to Indians.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., June 21.—Indianapolis won another game here today by scoring two runs in the fourth, while the best St. Paul could do was a single tally. In the fourth, Metz doubled. Flynn singled, scoring the runner, stole second, reached third on Scott's error and scored on Downey's sacrifice fly. St. Paul scored in the second, when Autrey walked, was sacrificed to second by Riggert, reached third on Casey's error on Scott's bunt and scored on Miller's sacrifice fly to Reilly. Score by innings:

SOME PREVARICATOR.

MY bonnie lies over the ocean,
My bonnie lies over the sea;
When that bonnie of mine takes a notion
There's no bigger liar than he.

OUR OLD FRIEND.

IT is an ancient manager
His team is in the rear;
Says he, "With any sort of luck
We'll win the flag next year."

"The ball yard gates are open wide
And I am out to win;
The clubs are met, the stage is set—
Mayst hear the merry din."

He holds me with his skinny hand:
"I've got a team," quoth he,
"That, if we get an even break,
Will finish one, two, three."

"God save thee, ancient manager
From the fiends that plague thee thus!
Go spin thy tales to the marines
But tell it not to us."

LINES TO A CARDINAL PITCHER.

HIGHER still and higher,
From the earth thou springest.
Should anyone inquire
Thy offerings they stingest,
And stinging still they score;
And, scoring, ever stingest.

SENATORS TAKE TWO FROM CHANCE'S YANKS

WASHINGTON, June 21.—By bunching hits Washington took both games of today's double-header from New York, 4 to 1 and 6 to 0. It took but the first inning of each game for the locals to win, collecting three hits in the opener of the first game off Fisher and repeating the performance in the second on Keating. Both Mullin and Johnson pitched great ball, two doubles off the former scoring the visitors' only run in the first game, while in the last game but two New Yorkers reached second. Scores:

Pirates Pay $3000 for Pitcher.

MISSOULA, Mont., June 21.—Frank T. Jones of this city, acting as "scout" for the Pittsburg National League baseball team, bought Pitcher Duffy of the Great Falls club of the Union Association today for $3000. Duffy is to be delivered at once. Jones was 15 minutes ahead of Fred Lake, "scout" for the Detroit Americans, in procuring the pitcher.

BASEBALL BASEBALL

Most wonderfully exciting and intensely interesting indoor game ever devised. Clean all the way through. For the ladies and girls, as well as the men and boys. Just like the real big league games. Everyone can now be a "COBB," a "TINKER" or a "WALSH." Keeps all on tiptoes. Every home should have one. No more late suppers; everyone stays at home and plays it. Darkness Halts Cardinals' Game on 1913 Longest Day

Cards Get Federal Star

McGuire Should Strengthen Huggins' Pitching Staff in Opinion of Player Who Batted Against Him—Zimmermann Is Restored to Good Standing.

By Clarence F. Lloyd

Add another freak to the many strange things that have happened at Robison Field. Yesterday's contribution was the calling off of the game between the Cardinals and Cubs after three innings, because of darkness, despite the fact that June 21 has been named as the longest day of the year by the wise men who study the sun, moon and stars.

Fear that some of the prized athletes would collide in chasing fly balls in the dusk or that a player might leap with his spikes on some opponent, mistaking it for a base, was given by Umpire Willyam Brennan as the reason for the sudden ending of the pastime.

At the time the show was called off the score was 0 to 0, neither side having been able to score on the pitchers—Dan Griner for the Cardinals and George Pierce for the Cubs.

Windstorm Halts Matinee.

As early as the end of the second round at windstorm blew up and scattered the dust so plentifully in the air that Brennan called a halt. This lasted only five minutes, when the zephyrs let up and permitted the teams to go to it again for another session. Then it began blowing again and Brennan, fearing that bodily harm might come to the ball tossers, to say nothing of the possibility of the chicken coop press stand being zipped through the air out to second base, called it off.

His action in curtailing the show was displeasing to Manager Huggins as well as the rival leader, Jawn Evers. Hug requested the umps to have play continued, but he said nay.

Zim Apologizes, Saves Money.

When the show started, Heinie Zimmerman, third baseman, slugger and possessor of a temperament, was stationed at third base. This in spite of the fact that he had been indefinitely suspended and fined $200 for his run-in with Roger Bresnahan the day before. The pair had had words over Zim's play on a roller from Oakes' bat with two out. Roger called Heinie for attempting to throw to the plate when the proper heave was to first base.

Zim realized that to remain suspended would prove costly, even though he is packing half a hundred dollar bill in his hip pocket, and told Manager Evers that he was sorry. After begging to be restored to good standing, Zim was given a clean bill of lading and is again a Cublet in good standing.

Hug Gets a Federal Leaguer.

When the teams take the sward before today's matinee, Manager Huggins hopes to have a newcomer in his ranks. He is Thomas McGuire, a pitcher, seized from the Chicago team of the Federal League. For several days Hug has had his line set for not only McGuire, but for "Silk" Kavanaugh, a fly-chaser on the Chicago Feds. He split 50-50 with the White Sox, who grabbed Kavanaugh, through the Green Bay team, whose property he was, while Hug took McGuire, a free agent.

Among other things McGuire has done has been a double defeat of Jack O'Connor's Federals this season. He beat them on the home lot and also in Chicago. Charley Stis, the Fed shortstop who was "beaned" in practice during the last at-home stand of the local Feds, is just out of the hospital.

When Stis learned that Huggins had grabbed McGuire he ventured the opinion that the Card heaving staff had been strengthened. Stis has batted against him in two games and should know. He says the newcomer has a good spitball and knows how to use it with good effect.

Stis Quits Federals.

Incidentally, Stis has been given the "G. B." by the local Federal League team. He received notification of his unconditional release yesterday, immediately after leaving the hospital. As a result of being "beaned" Stis has practically lost the hearing in his left ear. His doctor has told him it may not be permanent. He is strong and expects to don the spangles again Monday.

Stis was one of the highest salaried men on the local Federal League team and it was for that reason, most likely, that he was dropped. He has already received several offers of jobs in the minors and doesn't expect to be idle long.

This George Whitted has made a hit with Manager Huggins. He has proven a capable infield substitute, and is now getting his chance as an outfielder. For a while at least Huggins intends to send the youngster to the pasture whenever a portsider is on duty for the opposition. Hug figures he has the edge on the other fellows that way, inasmuch as Louis Evans and James Sheckard, the other pasturers, are alleged to be weak against the side-wheelers

CARDS AND CUBS WILL PLAY ONE GAME TODAY

DESPITE the postponement of yesterday's game, only one contest will be played this afternoon by the Cardinals and Cubs. The starting time is 2:30 o'clock. Inasmuch as Tuesday is an open date in the schedule for both teams, they will play off Saturday's curtailed show then.

Manager Huggins said he would use Bob Harmon or Polly Perritt in today's game. Unless Manager Evers decides to send George Pierce, who started yesterday's game, to the hill, Charley Smith will do the twirling.

Whisk Broom II Wins Brooklyn Handicap Easily

Harry Payne Whitney's Six-Year Old Repeats Victory Over G. M. Miller and Sam Jackson.

NEW YORK, June 21.—Without being let down at any stage of the race, save for a mild shake-up by Jockey Joe Notter in the home stretch, H. P. Whitney's 6-year-old chestnut horse, Whiskbroom II, by Broomstick-Audience, won the revival of the Brooklyn handicap, over one mile and a quarter of the Belmont Park race track today in impressive style. The winner carried 130 pounds, an impost similar to that carried by Fitzherbert when he won the last running of this event at Gravesend three years ago.

The time for today's race, 2.03 2-5, is a new track record for this distance and a new time record for the event, as heretofore the race was run over a circular track at Gravesend, while the horses today had to make only two turns.

Broomstick Holds Record.

Broomstick, the sire of Whisk Broom II, holds the world's record of 2:02 4-5 for 10 furlongs, which he made when he defeated Irish Lad in the Brighton Handicap at Brighton Beach 11 years ago. The value of today's race to the winner was $3025. In previous years first money frequently exceded $15,000.

R. F. Carman's G. M. Miller, which ran second to Whisk Broom II in the Metropolitan Handicap three weeks ago on the same track, filled the same position at the finish today.

Motor Cyclists Resume Tonight.

Because of the rain yesterday afternoon, the races scheduled for the Motordrome last night were postponed. The usual Sunday evening program will be put on tonight.

St. Louis Shell Favored to Win Lemp Cup Race

Five Crews Will Start in Eight-Oared Contest on Mississippi Today.

Five crews will be starters in the annual race for the Lemp cup on the Mississippi River this afternoon. The event is for eight-oared shells, a two-mile upstream pull, the finish being at the St. Louis Club quarters at the foot of Chouteau avenue.

The entries include shells from the North End, Western, Mound City, Central and St. Louis Rowing Clubs. The St. Louis Rowing Club's crew is the present holder of the trophy and also favored to win today's race.

Joseph Dilg, president of the St. Louis Rowing Club, will act as starter, while Elmer Stire of the same club, will be the referee. They will start the race between 4 and 5 o'clock, weather and river conditions permitting.

Prior to the shell race, a mile swimming race for members of the St. Louis Rowing Club will be staged. A handsome gold medal, donated by Gus Marty of the St. Louis Rowing Club will go to the winner. The paddlers will start at Eads Bridge and finish in front of the St. Louis Rowing Club.

TWIN BILL SCHEDULED AT BELLEVILLE TODAY

The Belleville Peters, leaders in the Interstate League race, will play a double-header with the Mount Olive team at Belleville this afternoon. The Harrisons and White Sox play at Lansdowne Park, while the New Douglas and 990s will perform at Mount Olive.

BROWNS TO HAVE SHAKE-UP DURING STAY IN CHICAGO

Johnny Lavans, the Infielder From Michigan, Will Be Given a Trial at Short.

STOVALL OUT OF GAME

Brief Will Sub for Injured Manager in Today's Twin Bill With the White Sox.

By W. L. Veeck,
Baseball Editor Chicago American.

CHICAGO, June 21.—Rain today made it impossible for the Browns and the White Sox to foregather in the first game of their series, with the result that the two teams will meet in a doubleheader tomorrow.

There was never more than an outside chance of playing today's contest. Rain was falling when both the Sox and the Browns came in from the East and it continued to fall during the morning. At noon came the announcement that there would be nothing doing. Then Manager Stovall began to plan for the undoing of the Sox.

Of course, Stovall is eager of starting a winning streak before he takes his bunch back home, and he announced that there would be a shake-up in his lineup before the team took the field in tomorrow's double bill.

Lavans Will Play Short.

Johnny Lavens, the infielder from the University of Michigan nine, will go in at short. The youngster may play in both contests. Stovall isn't decided about that. But he is quite certain that he will look over the youngster in one.

Then Anthony Brief will play first in place of the manager. Stovall has a sore finger and says that it will be impossible for him to look after affairs at the first station.

Walter Leverens, the southpaw, has been picked to work in the first of the double-header, while George Baumgardner will do the pitching in the second. A southpaw has always been considered effective against the Chicago aggregation, while Baumgardner has pitched some mighty good games against the South Side outfit.

Stovall is still of the opinion that it was luck which made that Eastern jaunt a disastrous one for the Browns. "We played good baseball, but we were constantly getting the bad breaks while the other fellows were getting the good ones," said the manager.

"We were not beaten badly in many games. We usually lost by a run after an extra inning battle. That makes us look bad in the won and lost columns. Yet we played good baseball, and gave them all a fight."

Business Manager Hi Mason certainly suffered a blow when the game today was called off. The Sox returned with an even break and Hal Chase. The former Yankee played corking good ball with the Sox and the Chicago fans were eager to get their first look at him in a Chicago uniform.

"It's a certainty that a big crowd would have turned out and that the St. Louis treasury would have received a check calling for a considerable amount. But if Sunday is a nice day the double-header will draw lots of fans.

Wingate to Captain Harvard.

NEW YORK, June 21.—Dana Wingate was re-elected captain of the Harvard baseball club tonight. He was presented with a gold-plated bat in appreciation of his services.

Rheumatic Blood is Whole Story

Wonderful Specific for Sciatica, Lumbago, and a Cure for Dreaded Articular Rheumatism.

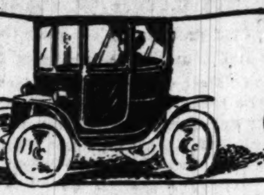
There is a host of pills, powders, tablets and what-not for rheumatism, but they all lack the first essential to being a natural medicine. To begin with, rheumatism is simply a name given to designate a variety of pains, and can only be reached by irrigating the entire blood supply with a naturally assimilative antidote. True, the pains may be eased with narcotics or the acids may be neutralized for the time being with other acids. But these merely temporize and do not even lead to a cure. There is but one standard rheumatism remedy, and it reflects the best thought of the day. It is prepared in the great Swift Laboratory in Atlanta, Ga., and sold in all drug stores under the name of S. S. S. at $1.00 a bottle.

Starvation has been advocated by many as a cure for rheumatism, and yet S. S. S. accomplishes in fact what faddists proclaim in theory and without the punishment of starvation. Hot Springs and sweating are often recommended, but S. S. S. does all that is expected of these expensive and weakening methods.

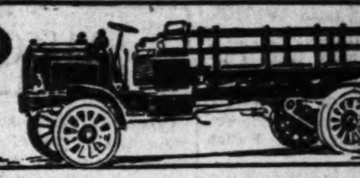
It is conceded by the closest students of the subject that rheumatism is caused in most cases by an acid condition of the blood and aggravated by the remedies commonly used for relief. In other cases rheumatism is the result of nerve depression; in still others it is the effect of some vitiated blood condition, having been treated with mercury, iodides, arsenic, and other poisonous mineral drugs.

The recoveries of all these types of rheumatism by the use of S. S. S. is a wonderful tribute to the natural efficacy of this remarkable medicine, for it is assimilated just as naturally, just as specifically, and just as well ordained as the most acceptable, most palatable and most readily digested food. Do not fail to get a bottle of S. S. S. to-day. You will be astonished at the results. If your rheumatism is of such a nature that you would like to consult a great specialist confidentially, write to the Medical Dept., [illegible]

AUTOMOBILE



NEWS.



PAPER LICENSE ON AUTOMOBILE WILL COST FINE

Dealers of St. Louis Will Make Test Case of Law Requiring Them to Issue Duplicate License Plates.

Claude D. Long, automobile inspector for Missouri, in whose hands the enforcement of the license sections of the State law lies found a St. Louis dealer Saturday who had just issued a paper card duplicate license to a purchaser of a car who was to drive it to Washington County. Mr. Long sent the buyer back for a dealers' license plate of the regular kind.

"The law is very specific," said Mr. Long, "as to the use of paper placards duplicates. They must not be used and practically every Sheriff in the State is on the lookout for them. The driver of any car on which a pasteboard license is carried will be arrested and his fine will be much greater than the cost of a license."

In Kansas City the dealers—some of them—are getting around the annoyance of waiting for a license plate for a new owner by taking out a license for every car as soon as it is unloaded from the railroad platform. When the car is sold the buyer drives it away having first sent in an application for transfer to the Secretary of State. The dealer collects for the license from the buyer. The cost of transfer is $1.

It is the purpose of the St. Louis Automobile Manufacturers' Association to test the legality of the State law as to this enforced issue of a dealers' duplicate license plate to a purchaser. As the law now stands the dealer has no option. It is planned to start out a car without a license but for which a license has been asked and then have the driver arrested so that a friendly trial can be instituted. It is maintained that the State has no right to force a dealer to supply a license plate. In case a dealer sold 10 cars in a single day the cost of license plates to lend for them would exceed $50 and he would then be uncertain of getting back his plates and no duplicates will be issued by the State.

SHUFORD NEW HEAD OF ACCESSORY TRADE

In a lively election and on a close vote, John F. Shuford of the Continental Equipment Co. was elected president of the Motor Accessory Trade Association at the meeting held at the Marquette Hotel, Wednesday night. There had been a warm but friendly contest between Allen H. Clark of the Vehicle Top and Supply Co. and Shuford, who was elected by a small majority. Shuford has been in the automobile accessory business for a number of years, having graduated from the Neustadt Auto Supply Co. He is president of the Continental Co., and a member of the Business Men's League, the West End Business Men's Association and of the Rotary Club.

The other officers elected were: J. P. Patterson of the Firestone Tire and Rubber Co., for vice-president; W. K. Norris of the McQuay-Morris Manufacturing Co., for treasurer. Robert E. Lee was re-elected secretary for the fifth time. Bart S. Adams was made sergeant-at-arms. Five directors were elected, as follows: Fred Campbell, retiring president; D. Donnelly of the St. Louis Auto Sales Co., A. N. Stanley of the Fisk Rubber Co., George M. Huffmann of the Republic Rubber Co. and A. D. Bauer of the A. C. Bauer Oil Co.

The next meeting of the association will be held at Sunset Inn the night of July 3, where the Coast Tourists of the Indiana Automobile Manufacturers' Association will be entertained as the guests jointly of the Motor Accessory Trade Association and the Automobile Manufacturers' and Dealers' Association.

BUILT A CAR IN AN HOUR

DETROIT, Mich., June 21.—The speed and accuracy with which a Ford car is built was demonstrated before the Society of Automobile Engineers of America when they visited the factory of the Ford company recently.

Guests of the American society included a delegation of the Institute of Automobile Engineers of England. The president of the English society, T. B. Brown of London, was told to mark a cylinder as he was passing through the machine shop. This he did.

When the party had finished the tour of inspection and were preparing to depart, Mr. Brown was greatly surprised to discover the cylinder he had marked in the car that was to carry him to a nearby hotel for luncheon.

The car had been built and was running under its own power in less than an hour.

START CAMPAIGN FOR 5000 MEMBERS FOR AUTO CLUB

Circulars to Registered St. Louis Motor Car Owners Tells of Benefits of Organization.

The Membership Committee of the Automobile Club of St. Louis has just issued a brochure setting forth the purpose and aims of the club; its benefits to the members and why every automobilist should be a member of the organization.

J. Boyle Price, chairman; S. S. Pingree and E. J. Krause, members of the Membership Committee, have opened an active campaign to increase the membership to 5000. Every one of the 1100 members has been appointed a committee of one to secure at least one new member, but the committee urge that the members do not stop their effective work with one member.

The club maintains a large, well furnished room on the ground floor of the Planters Hotel, Fourth and Pine streets, where telephones, writing materials, all automobile magazines, official tour books and maps are kept for the free use of members. The secretary is always at the club and will cheerfully give information regarding any American or European tour.

What the Club Offers.

The Automobile Club is not a social club. All the club revenue and energy is devoted to furthering the interests of automobilists. There are but three salaried employes. It is the object of the club to spend all moneys received in promoting the interests of automobilists in the following manner: Contributing to road oiling. Framing and promoting sensible traffic rules and regulations, and opposing unjust or unreasonable legislation in the city and State. Placing guide and warning signals on public highways; co-operating in the building and maintenance of city streets and State and national highways; offering rewards for the arrest and conviction of drivers causing accidents due to reckless driving; offering rewards and lending aid for the recovery of members' automobiles that have been stolen.

The club also gives an annual automobile outing—or "Children's day," to the poor children in the various orphan homes and institutions of the city, and holds "The Annual Owner's Reliability Tour," open to every owner; the winners receiving valuable trophies.

There is no initiation fee and the dues are only $10 per year, for which the members receive the following privileges and benefits:

Active membership in the club; privilege of the clubroom, including free telephones; leather-bound copy of "Missouri Tour Book," containing official maps and over 400 tours (value $2); annual subscription to American Motorist, the official publication of the American Automobile Association (value $1); membership in the American Automobile Association, which is the national automobile association; free notary service in connection with applications for State automobile license; Brass club emblem for radiator. Everything pertaining to the comfort and safety of motorists receives the active support and financial backing of the club.

THE 1914 LOCOMOBILE

Manager A. L. Ellwood of the Locomobile branch has received word that the first 1914 Locomobile has been shipped to St. Louis. The principal change is the right drive and left drive models, both with right-hand gear levers, the right or left drive being optional with the purchaser. A new carburetor, with air adjustment and priming device, which the builders claim is most economical, has been placed on the car.

Accessories, such as octagonal lights, harmonizing with the decorative scheme, electric self starter, electric lights, air compressor for inflating tires, a 70-mile per hour speedometer and a crank case oil drain, permitting the oil in the engine base being lowered without getting under the car, form the last thought in convenience for the driver. A new style, the Six "48," six passenger torpedo, with left drive chassis, is added to the 1914 line.

At present the local branch is torn up, pending the remodeling of the building, which, when finished, will double its size. Tile floors will be laid over the entire salesroom floor, and the decorative scheme will be white with the indirect system of lighting.

TANGUAY BUYS A CAR

When Eva Tanguay of "I don't care" fame was in St. Louis, she took a sudden notion that she wanted an electric car. She sent for the demonstrators and all of the time she was not singing "I don't care" at the Shubert Theater, she was being "shown" all of the electric cars in St. Louis. The graceful lines of the Argo roadster so impressed her that she purchased one from the De Luxe Automobile Co., 3104 Locust street, after a showing that the car could make the run from the theater to the Chicken Farm in an hour. The run was made in 40 minutes, as the Argo develops 30-miles an hour speed and will cover 100 miles on a charge. The car was shipped to New York last Monday.

COMBINATION AUTO LOCK

H. L. Mason, who is the inventor and patentee of a combination lock for automobiles, has removed from Kansas City to St. Louis and will install his plant here. The lock looks like the lock on a safe door and works by breaking the contact with the magneto and battery so that the car can be pushed around, but cannot be cranked or otherwise started. Mr. Mason is temporarily located at 712 Whittier [illegible]

TO BUILD CONCRETE ROAD OCEAN TO OCEAN

Permanent headquarters have been opened in Detroit for the Lincoln Highway Association, which has been formed to secure the establishment of the ocean-to-ocean highway, a project started two years ago by Carl G. Fisher of Indianapolis.

Plans for the highway are rapidly nearing completion. Approximately $4,200,000 of the necessary $10,000,000 already has been subscribed.

H. B. Joy, president of the Packard Motor Car Co., who has ben elected president of the association, is on his way to the Pacific Coast in his Packard "prairie schooner," making a preliminary survey for the cross-country route west of the Mississippi River. Mr. Joy has been prominently identified with the movement since its inception and $150,000 has been subscribed by the Packard Motor Car Co.

Final plans for the transcontinental highway call for a concrete road wherever practical. Permanent improvements will be made on fully 2000 miles of roadway.

PLACE IN EUROPEAN RACE

Europe was given a thorough demonstration of the superior quality of American-made automobiles recently when an Overland model 69T finished seventh in the third annual Targa Florio race, the classic endurance tour of the Island of Sicily. The Overland, the only one of the five American cars to complete the run and one of the 11 entries which lasted throughout the grilling race, finished the 650 miles of difficult travel in 23 hours 12 minutes and 47 seconds, a little better than three hours behind the high-powered Nazzarro, which took first place, and 14 minutes and 32 seconds ahead of the time set by the winner of the event in 1912.

IMPROVED CAR MILEAGE

W. J. Newcomb, manager of the special service department of the Rauch & Lang Electric Co., has just returned to the factory, after a month's stay in St. Louis. He has been establishing a service department here for R. & L. owners, in keeping with the policy of the builders of this car.

Recently they inaugurated a scheme whereby Newcomb regularly visits each distributing point, and looks over each owner's car and offers suggestions to owners and garage men for bettering of the service and securing of more and satisfactory mileage from their cars.

A VICTORY FOR THE YALE

The annual endurance run of the New Jersey Motor Cycle Club was for the fourth time a sweeping victory for the Yale. All Yale starters, four of them, finished. The Yale team won the team trophy. The run was two days and 450 miles long. The Yale is on display at the salesrooms of the Auto Owners' Supply Co., 209 North Twelfth street.

PLAN SUNSET DINNER FOR INDIANA TOURISTS

The Pacific coast tour of the Indiana Automobile Manufacturers' Association, which will reach St. Louis at about 3 o'clock p. m. of July 3, is to be elaborately entertained. There will be 100 tourists in the 30 automobiles which will start from Indianapolis the morning of July 1. The Automobile Club of Alton will entertain them at 11 o'clock, July 3, and the Commercial Club of Granite City, headed by its president, E. W. Hilker, will drive to Alton and bring the tourists as far as Granite City. At Granite City the members of the St. Louis Automobile Manufacturers' and Dealers' Association will pick up the guests and supply them with a cold bottle and a sandwich and then escort them across the McKinley Bridge to the Planters Hotel, where they are to stop for the night.

At 6 o'clock the members of the Automobile Manufacturers' and Dealers' Association and of the Motor Accessory Trade Association will call at the Planters Hotel for the tourists in St. Louis automobiles and will take them for a scenic ride to Sunset Inn, where they will arrive at 7 o'clock. There an elaborate dinner and a still more elaborate cabaret entertainment will be punctuated with humorous and other addresses by the visitors and local men. The tourists will leave the morning of July 4, at a red-hot pace for Columbia, Mo., and then continue on slowly for San Francisco. There are no ladies in the tour.

No-Rim-Cut Tires 10% Oversize

Don't Pay a Higher Price

Since our 11 per cent reduction, numerous tires cost users more than Goodyears.

That's a unique condition.

No-Rim-Cut tires used to cost one-fifth more than others. Yet they never were made better than today.

The Utmost

Bear in mind that, for years and years, No-Rim-Cut tires have been the high-price tires.

Nobody claimed to make tires that were better. But other standard tires cost less.

Yet No-Rim-Cut tires came to outsell all others, because of their proved economies. They saved their extra cost to users, two or three times over.

The demand for these tires doubled over and over, until last year's sales by far exceeded our previous 12 years put together.

With this multiplied output the cost came down, and the saving was deducted from our price.

Now no standard tire of any type costs less than No-Rim-Cut tires. And lesser tires, with a limited output, cost more than these famous tires.

You get, as always, in No-Rim-Cuts the utmost in a tire.

You get tires that can't rim-cut. You get 10 per cent overcapacity compared with clincher tires.

You get the tires which, by sheer merit, have won the topmost place in Tiredom.

It is folly to pay more.

FOUR YEARS OF VICTORY

FOR the fourth consecutive year, the annual endurance run of the New Jersey Motorcycle Club, May 30-31, was a sweeping Yale Victory. Four Yales started and all four finished in good shape—

The Only Machine That Had All Starters to Finish

The big team trophy was won by the Yale team, George Ricchey, P. W. Stevens and O. W. Stevens. It was a clean-cut victory with no other machine able even to give close competition, for NO OTHER TEAM HAD ALL THREE RIDERS TO FINISH the grueling two-day, 450-mile grind over towering hills and primitive roads. The test was so severe that it brought Yale superiority out prominently.

One winning might be called luck or accident, but when the same machine wins decisively year after year, as the Yale has in this annual New Jersey contest, it is convincing proof of its superior road ability. The "Big Y" is the kind of machine YOU want.

Call and inspect, as you will be obliged to admit the Yale superior to any on the market; price and terms reasonable.

THOROUGH SERVICE WORK

W. J. Newcomb, special service representative of the Rauch & Lang Carriage Co., is in St. Louis on his first visit in the working out of the factory service department recently established for the benefit of the owners of Rauch & Lang electric cars.

This service consists of regular trips by Newcomb and his assistants to all points where Rauch & Lang cars are in use, when he makes a thorough inspection giving not only advice to owners upon care which will prolong both the life of the cars and batteries, but showing the dealers and garage men how to improve upon their service.

CAPITALIZED FOR MILLION

Papers have been filed with the Secretary of State at Lansing, Mich., increasing the capital stock of the Hupp Motor Car Co. from $750,000 to $1,000,000. This increase was made by a 33 1-3 per cent stock dividend taken out of the surplus and added to the capital stock.

This makes the sixth increase in the capital since the incorporation of the Hupp Motor Car Co.

AUTO NEWS AND GOSSIP

Claude D. Long, automobile inspector from the office of the Secretary of State of Missouri, was in St. Louis Saturday checking up on the nonlicensed owners and dealers. He took an evening drive in a Locomobile as the guest of A. L. Elwood of the Locomobile Co.

Charles A. Russell, sales manager for Hopewell Bros., New York, manufacturers of tire covers and other specialties, was in St. Louis last week visiting the trade.

P. P. Willis, advertising manager for the National factory at Indianapolis, has issued a clever little booklet, the story of the great 500-mile race, which is absorbingly interesting. It is an interview with an automobile.

June 28 the Petty Tire and Rubber Co., Nineteenth and Locust streets, will have an "anniversary" celebration. Two years ago that day the Hirsch Building, next to that of the Petty Tire and Rubber Co., fell upon it and destroyed it. The loss was heavy, almost total, but the Petty company is now rehabilitated and again on the high road to success.

The Meyer-Busch Motor Car Co. has just sold a Speedwell four-ton truck to the Capitol Brewery Co. of Jefferson City, Mo.

Mrs. L. P. Brandenburger of 5942 Whittemer place and Mrs. John Benson of 4013 Marcus have purchased Woods electric cars, models 35 and 24, respectively.

The Cochrane Motor Sales Co. delivered last Tuesday Cartercar touring cars to J. J. Morse of the American Car Co. and E. Robb of East St. Louis.

MISSOURI HAS 30,700 LICENSED MOTOR CARS

Missouri is fast becoming a great automobile State and this year there are more automobiles owned in the small towns and in the country by farmers than in the cities. The reverse of this has been true in previous years.

At the close of 1912 there had been issued 24,879 licenses for motor cars of all kinds in Missouri. An immense increase over this is already noted and not half of the year is gone and the brisk buying season is still ahead. Up to last Monday night there had been issued a total of 30,700 State licenses by the Secretary of State and that office is preparing for 10,000 more before the end of the year. Of this number St. Louis had taken 8400 licenses and Kansas City a little under 5000.

As the automobile fund goes for the building of roads, the automobilists of the State will pay the appropriation of $225,000 made by the last Legislature in two years and have $75,000 left over for other road use. The legislative appropriation was specifically made to improve the roads between all county seats in the State making a chain of fine highways leading to every corner of Missouri.

According to the statistics, St. Louis is forging ahead of Kansas City in the sale of cars, with largely increased sales in the tributary territory.

CLOSED CARS IN SUMMER

While it may sound a bit paradoxical to say that there is at present a growing tendency towards the adoption of closed cars for spring and summer use, it nevertheless is a fact, according to John G. Dale of the Simplex Automobile Co., who explains it this way: "From several owners of Simplex cars who have toured in Europe and who have been close observers of automobile conditions, I am told that a great number of cars of the limousine and landaulet types are now being put into service for summer touring abroad. From statistics which I have gathered a similar condition exists here and this is best evidenced by the number of the closed cars now seen on the highways and on the city streets. The protection which the closed car affords passengers from dusty highways, heat of the sun, sudden showers, etc., are a few reasons why owners cling to the closed body type. The luxurious appointments of the limousine and landaulet cars which are not generally found in open cars also add to the popularity of these types.

A TROUBLE INSURANCE

With the advent of the open season for prolonged touring come requests for methods and means of insuring trips from the usual troubles and inconveniences of "balky" and power-lacking motors.

The accepted cause of all this is carbon. Carbon is the natural result of combustion, but it also is one of the greatest causes of worriment.

Until lately there was but one effective remedy for carbon. It entailed "tearing down" the motor with all its resultant expense, delays and sometimes improper reassembling.

Twentieth century inventiveness has evolved a harmless, inexpensive carbon killer. Motorists—who know—who have tested it thoroughly are never without "Six Little Yankees." They carry it with the rest of their equipment at all times. "Six Little Yankees" can be used without changing or delaying a single mile of the day's trip. It is placed in the cylinders and works while the motor runs. It is guaranteed perfectly harmless and absolutely efficient. "Six Little Yankees" have done everything claimed for them in two years' trial in the Packard, Peirce, Peerless, Winton, Ford and other makes of cars.

TRUCKS' UPKEEP RECORD

Probably the most accurate and complete forms for keeping daily records of motor truck upkeep costs is printed and distributed free to motor truck owners and persons interested in motor truck upkeep costs by the B. F. Goodrich Co., Akron, O. The Goodrich record system consists of two complete but very simple forms. One is a card for the driver's record showing trips made, mileage, the record of tires, load pounds carried, the oil, gasoline or electricity consumed per mile each day. The larger form for the office files is a monthly report made up each day from the driver's daily report card.

The Goodrich record forms are so complete that an owner can tell at a glance just what his trucks are costing him each day—including wages of drivers and helpers.

RELIC FINED FOR SPEEDING

"Cruelty to machinery" is the only term to be used in connection with the Police Court fine which was assessed last week against the driver of a 1905 single-cylinder Cadillac car. He was accused and convicted of driving this 8-year-old relic at a speed of 24 miles an hour. The car is owned by A. A. Allen of the Eureka Motor Parts Manufacturing Co.

Buying, selling, trading, hiring—all come within the realm of a Post-Dispatch Want Ad.

TO REPLACE GASOLINE

Just previous to the time the Standard Oil Co. announced the new fuel known as "Motor Spirit" which serves to take the place of gasoline at 25 per cent less price, Henry H. Taylor of the Corn-Planter Refining Co., an independent refining company of Warren, Pa., announced the discovery of a fuel product known as "Gasene," resulting from the special distillation of crude oil, which product was very similar to that announced by the Standard Oil Co., although produced by a process of refining radically different. This fuel can be sold on the market at a cost to the retail buyer at about 75 per cent of the regular price of gasoline as it is now.

Along this line, the management of the Abbott Motor Co., whose principal stockholders are interested in the oil refining business in Pennsylvania, have been conducting elaborate experiments along a line different from that followed by automobile engineers in general; namely, they have been making a series of dynamometer test on automobile chassis, employing a fuel made up by mechanically compounding the new "Gasene" and "Motor Spirit" with the commercial grade of kerosene oil.

The tests are not yet completed but the log sheets of the engineering department show already that a fuel can be obtained at the present time by combining these two, that can be purchased at retail at about 9 cents per gallon, as against about 17 cents, which represents the average retail price of gasoline at the present time.

ESSENKAY REORGANIZED

The Essenkay Products Co., 1125-27-29 West Thirty-seventh street, Chicago, has acquired the copyrights, trade marks, patents and good will of the Essenkay company, as well as the exclusive right to manufacture and sell Essenkay. The new company has reduced the selling prices of Essenkay materially. The plan of establishing general agencies has also been changed so as to permit all supply houses and garages to sell and install Essenkay. The company is composed of F. D Mayer, former general manager of the Essenkay company; William L. Weber, inventor of Essenkay, and William B. Russell.

BERKLEY TO SELL COLES

Fred J. Berkley has been appointed salesmanager of the Bagnell Automobile Co. With the recent additions of territory, and in keeping with the policy of expansion, Nelson S. Gotshall, general manager, found it necessary to create this office in his sales organization. Mr. Berkley will have direct charge of sales in St. Louis, leading six salesmen selling Cole cars. Mr. Berkley has been selling automobiles in St. Louis for several years and was formerly with the Oldsmobile company.

Vitalized Rubber

answers your demand for
MORE MILEAGE

More mileage over country roads

All types of Diamond Tires are made of Vitalized Rubber—a new process discovered by our chemists which toughens pure rubber.

Vitalized Rubber in Diamond Tires will give you the greatest mileage over rough country roads, in wet and dry weather—stand the friction of the road and the pull of the engine—adapt itself from one end of the thermometer to the other—from high speed to low. Under all these conditions you, at the wheel, are riding with mind-comfort and free from possible tire worries.

Additional Diamond advantages—Perfect 3-Point Rim Contact, No-Pinch Safety Flap for inner tube protection—and, if you wish, the now famous Diamond Safety (Squeegee) Tread.

So this time buy Diamond Vitalized Rubber Tires—you can get them at any of the

"BLOOD IS THICKER THAN WATER"

Without good red blood a man has a weak heart and poor nerves. Thinness of the blood, or anaemia, is common in young folks as well as old. Especially is it the case with those who work in illy ventilated factories—or those who are shut up indoors in winter time with a coal stove burning up the oxygen or emitting carbonic (oxide) gas. This blood, or blood which lacks the red blood corpuscles, in anaemic people may have been caused by lack of good fresh air breathed into lungs, or by poor digestion or dyspepsia. Sometimes people suffer intense pain over the heart which is not heart disease at all, but caused by indigestion. Whatever the cause, there's just one remedy that you can turn to—knowing that it has given satisfaction for over 40 years.

is a blood cleanser and alterative that starts the liver and stomach into vigorous action. It thus assists the body to manufacture rich red blood which feeds the heart—nerves—brain and organs of the body. The organs work smoothly like machinery running in oil. You feel clean, strong and strenuous instead of tired, weak and faint. Nowadays you can obtain Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery Tablets, as well as the liquid form from all medicine dealers, or tablets by mail, prepaid in $1 or 50c size. Adress R. V. Pierce, M. POSSE FIRES MAN'S HOME AND HE DIES IN IT

Fugitive Accused of Arson Shoots Two Pursuers When They Fire on Him.

OROVILLE, Wash., June 21.—J. H. Ethel, charged with arson, successfully defied the efforts of a Sheriff's posse to take him alive last night. The officers set fire to his home after sending sevearl vollies into it. Ethel's body was found in the ruins. One deputy was fatally wounded and another seriously hurt by Ethel's return fire.

Ethel, a sawmill owner, was charged with arson and jumped his bond. The posse pursued him to his home, 12 miles away. He turned his family out of doors and stood off the officers with a rifle until they set fire to the building.

WATERS PIERCE TO GET $9,600,000 OF NEW CAPITAL

Rothschild Interests Expected to Furnish Money for Reorganizing Company.

PIERCE TO KEEP CONTROL

Change of Name and New Directing Officials Are Contemplated.

Plans for making the Waters Pierce Oil Co. the most formidable American rival of the Standard Oil Co. by the introduction of $9,600,000 of new capital into the company and a reorganization of its officers and directors virtually have been completed, according to authentic information received by the Post-Dispatch yesterday.

A large portion of the money required for refinancing the St. Louis corporation is to be furnished by the Rothschilds of England and Germany, who are largely interested in foreign oil companies which for years have been fighting the aggression of the Standard Oil Co. in Europe.

Legal representatives of the New York, London and Berlin bankers who are interested in the reorganization of the company have been in St. Louis several days investigating the affairs of the company.

Pierce to Keep Control.

The reorganization plans contemplate the increase of the capital stock from $400,000 to $10,000,000, and a change of the name of the corporation. It is said that H. Clay Pierce, now chairman of the Board of Directors, will retain a controlling interest in the corporation, and be the active head of the rehabilitated company.

Pierce has been working for several months to bring new capital into the company. A few months ago he purchased the 2700 shares of stock in the corporation held by John D. Rockefeller and other Standard Oil interests. It was understood that London bankers, probably the Rothschilds, furnished the money, something more than $2,000,000, for the purchase of this stock. Pierce owned about one-third of the stock of the company—1300 shares.

It is said the property of the Pierce Fordyce Oil Association, which acquired the Texas business of the Waters Pierce Oil Co. after it was fined $1,800,000 and ousted from Texas four years ago, probably will be taken over by the new company. This branch of the business was sold by the Waters Pierce Co. to Pierce for more than $2,000,000.

While the Waters Pierce Co. has been capitalized for only $400,000 in its entire existence, it long has had assets valued at many millions of dollars. Its stock, which paid a few years ago as high as 600 per cent dividends, or $2,400,000 in cash each year, sold on the market for from $800 to $1300 a share.

Pierce purchased the Standard Oil stock a few months ago as the outcome of a bitter fight between himself and the Rockefeller interests for control of the corporation. The fight started soon after the Supreme Court of the United States gave a judgment of ouster against the Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey and ordered its dissolution.

The Standard interests, which had controlled the Waters Pierce Oil Co. for more than 20 years, attempted to assert its control by devising a plan to oust Pierce as chairman of the board of directors of the company, and his son, Clay Arthur Pierce as president.

Pierce Rejected Ballots.

The battle reached a climax in February, 1912, when the Standard interests pooled their shares to elect their own board of directors. Pierce, who appointed the tellers at the annual election, caused them to reject the ballots offered by the Rockefeller representatives.

This led to a legal fight, the Standard interests being the aggressors. Pierce fought back by charging that the Rockefeller interests were attempting to evade and violate the decree of the Supreme Court by exercising control over all the subsidiary corporations which the Standard formerly owned.

The Standard interests contended Pierce had been inefficient and extravagant in his management of the corporation, and had brought it to a verge of insolvency. After the Missouri suit was decided against the Standard and Waters Pierce companies five years ago, Pierce had active as well as nominal control of the company. It was charged by the Standard interests that the 600 per cent dividends had vanished, and that in the last two years the company had paid no dividends, but, on the other hand, had been a heavy borrower to get money to conduct its business.

It further was charged that Pierce caused his relatives in official position with the company to be paid unreasonable large salaries.

The fight in the courts was waged with much bitterness for months, and then suddenly came the announcement that all litigation was to be dropped, as the Standard had consented to sell its holdings to Pierce.

Pierce Busy on Reorganization.

Pierce went to London with invoices of the company to raise the Money to buy out the Rockefeller and allied holdings. In the last few months he has spent much time in St. Louis working out the reorganization plans.

The Waters Pierce Oil Co. has had a stormy existence since Herbert S. Hadley, as Attorney-General, filed a suit against it, the Standard of New Jersey, Standard of Indiana and Republic of Ohio, charging them with being in an unlawful combination.

Suits later were filed against the company by Oklahoma, Arkansas and Texas, resulting in [illegible] aggregate of fines of more than $2,[illegible] and attorneys fees of nearly a [illegible] more. As the result of the Missouri suit ammunition was furnished to the government on which the suit of the Federal government against the entire group of Standard Oil companies was based.

HER SUDDEN MARRIAGE SURPRISE TO FRIENDS

SILVIA NAOMI SMITH-ELSNER

GRADUATED ONE DAY AND TAKES A BRIDE THE NEXT

Martin Elsner of Sweet Springs Weds Girl at Home Where He Had Boarded.

Martin Elsner, 21 years old, got a diploma at Walther College, Wednesday, and took a bride Thursday. His friends knew all about the first event, but they were not let into the secret of his wedding with Miss Silvia Naomi Smith of 2325 Whittemore place.

Elsner came to St. Louis from Sweet Springs, Mo., to take a special course in the college. He boarded at the home of Miss Smith's parents. Miss Smith and Elsner left home Thursday afternoon, saying they were going to a summer garden. Instead, they obtained a marriage license and went to the home of a minister, who made them one.

No formal announcement of the wedding was sent out. Elsner will enter the real estate business in St. Louis.

Miss Smith's parents had objected to her marriage because of her youth. She is 18.

NEWBRO'S HERPICIDE

INCREASES THE JOY OF SUMMER VACATIONS

GOING! HERPICIDE WILL SAVE IT
GOING!! HERPICIDE WILL SAVE IT
GONE!!! TOO LATE FOR HERPICIDE
HERPICIDE CO.

THE coming of summer is fraught with the keenest of anticipations. We are looking forward to that trip to seashore, lake, mountain or country and the amusements attendant upon the season. If we have red blood the sports and pleasures of the vacation period such as tennis, golf, boating, fishing, etc., appeal to us.

But this season of outdoor enjoyment also brings with it added responsibilities, in the extra care which must be devoted to the toilet. The hair in particular needs much more attention than any other time. The sebaceous glands throw off more waste material and there is a consequent larger and more rapid accumulation of dandruff, which makes the frequent and intelligent use of Newbro's Herpicide imperative.

Regular applications of this valuable scalp prophylactic keeps the head perfectly clean and the hair and scalp healthy. Herpicide adds gloss and beauty to the hair and thus increases one's personal charm and attractiveness.

The cooling effect, the sensation of cleanliness and the exquisite odor all tend to make Newbro's Herpicide a most delightful hot weather hair dressing. It stops itching of the scalp almost instantly.

Send 10 Cents for Trial Bottle and Booklet. SEE COUPON.

Herpicide is sold at all toilet goods counters in 50 cents and $1.00 sizes where it is guaranteed to produce results or money refunded.

Applications obtained at the better barber shops and hair-dressing parlors.

RUSSIAN TENOR GIVES FINAL CONCERT TONIGHT

Samuel Meisels to Be Heard at Synagogue in Songs of Three Nations.

Samuel Meisels, the Russian tenor, will conclude his engagement in St. Louis tonight at the B'nai Amoona Synagogue, Garrison and Lucas avenue, where he will sing four songs in Hebrew, one in German and one in Russian."

His first two selection will be Hebrew hymns, "Habein Yocker li" and "Rzei." The third number will be selection from "Martha," the German opera.

"Adonoi, Adonoi," a Hebrew opera, will follow as the fourth number, while "Ov Horachamim," a Hebrew song is the fifth number. The entertainment will conclude with selections from "Kuda Ve Udalelis," a Russian opera. Miss Mary Rabonivitz will furnish the piano accompaniments.

July 20 Meisels, who makes his home in New York, will sail for Europe, where he will fill engagements in London, Paris, Vienna and Budapest. Meisels first sang in Warsaw, Russia, and his success was so great he was persuaded to go to New York. For five years he sang in the Fifth Avenue Synagogue.

FINS AND FEATHERS

By Jock Bellairs.

The gigging game has been so strenuous along the various streams of the State, acording to information brought in by anglers, that some concerted action by the natives themselves is necessary if the stream bass fishing is to be preserved. Anglers who have come in from floats and from trips along Black River, Current, Gasconade and other streams report a condition that threatens the future of the very finest of all sports, the whipping of streams for bass trophies.

Unfortunately there is no law against gigging. There is a provision that "not more than 50 pounds of fish" shall be taken per day with gig or spear, except in the Mississippi and Missouri rivers, and there is an idea that the finest spear users in the world cannot hope to outwit the bass. One allows a raiding of streams. The other is worthy of contradiction.

The expert with gig spear can plant the barb in a bass with about the same accuracy that a good hunter can drop a mallard. If there is any dispute as to this, I refer to some of the native experts themselves.

Bass Easy Prey.

The bass is easier prey than the rough gentleman of the waters, for the expert gig thrower. The bass darts straight ahead. The rough fish shoots here and there. The trail of the bass is as easy to follow as is the rise of a surprised water fowl. The expert gigger merely gauges distance, heaves and a lordly specimen awaits the pan. And that is being done with great regularity on the streams of the Ozarks.

Howard Sidener has returned from a trip to Hunt's Farm below Sabula, and a further float on the Black River. Sidener has heard the gigging stories. So have other fishermen. Wholesale gigging of bass is like killing the goose that laid the golden egg. Plenty of game fish in our streams is one of the best advertisements the State could have. A catch of bass means a rush to that territory by dozens of anglers. The natives themselves should take the lead in stopping the gigging of game fish.

Diving at Beaver Dam.

Col. W. L. Reynolds is a moving spirit in lodge work. He carries some 250 pounds of ideal good nature around with him and this was on display at Beaver Dam Lake last Sunday, until the diving stunt. Then it was a case of dry clothes with Colonel William. Charles J. Fritz was responsible for the appearance of Col. Reynolds at the lake. Col. Reynolds wanted to catch a big bass or see one caught, and he watched the fly game with interest.

He did much of the rowing. Then came a time when he wanted to do some brush fishing. He landed a wampus at once. A wampus in angling parlance is a snag. When he reached to disentangle it he went in head first. The water was about five feet deep at that point. Col. Reynolds rescued the oar and then got ashore himself. Next time, he promised Fritz, he is going to hug the center of the boat.

And then there was Sam Goodman. He fished under a circus tent, seated on an orchestra chair, with a bottle of egg lemonade under the seat. He hooked onto a chip basket of big goggle-eye and one dandy bass. The weather was hot, but the sport good. All who went to the Rhodes establishment came back with plenty of fish. The list includes Mr. and Mrs. H. Friedman, Mrs. G. H. Willett, Mrs. F. H. Smith and boy, Frank Eckhardt, Charles Hotze, J. Auer, L. Bauman, A. and L. Schwartzman, J. O. Daniels, P. O. Needham, W. L. Rogers, G. E. Goodsell, C. F. Rogers, L. E. Behlendorf Jr., Al Behlendorf, O. W. Stegemeyer, Michael Cohen, E. Neumeister and wife, V. J. Gruend and wife, Louis F. Scoville and son Paul, L. Ritter, A. Miller, William Schwab, William Nagle, F. Fagle and R. Lochen.

Game Is Good Astream.

The hot weather has not interfered with good fishing. The game has been good astream and at lakes. Murdock Lake sends in good reports. Big Creve Coeur Lake is giving some good returns in crappie. Chouteau Slough, Horse Shoe Lake and Eagle Park are good. Spanish Lake is in fine shape and King's Lake is said to be right. The Cuivre Lake boys and those along the river of that name are getting returns. Bahret Creek, the Piscatorial members and the Seeberger Club have been getting results.

Great returns are obtainable at Chillicothe, Ill., on the Illinois River, 150 miles from here. Charles B. Davis, former Assistant Circuit Attorney, got back from there last Monday, and reported the most marvelous returns from every sort of bait. He and his brother, John F. Davis, using the wooden minnow, caught 110 bass on Thursday, 78 on Friday and 65 on Saturday. The levee broke just above Chillicothe and the water flooded a tract of some 3000 acres. Where the break occurred there is a deep hole extending over some three acres. In this hole, Davis says, all classes of fishermen gathered. He saw hundreds of bass caught and declares not less than 1000 were taken out in the four or five days he watched the sport. The fish rose to flies, grabbed worms, minnows, spoons, anything offered, and the fighting was fast and good. The bass ranged from three-fourths to three pounds weight.

Club Basket Picnic.

Next Sunday the Kimmswick Fishing and Hunting Club will put on a little basket picnic for its members. The club has set aside $300 for some additional grading and the making of a canal to allow for two islands in its lake. A concrete wall is also to be put up to strengthen the levees. Several outings are scheduled for Ten Brook next Sunday.

If you take a rifle with you don't shoot squirrels. The season under the new law does not come in until July 1. And then get your license first.

To the Public

The following letter was sent out Saturday night to every telephone operator who failed to report for work during the last week:

June 21, 1913

To the Telephone Operators Who Have Recently Left the Service of This Company:

Now that the excitement of the past few days has passed, we hope our former operator employes will take time to do some thinking for themselves.

None of the operators who left our employ of their own accord has been permanently dropped from our rolls. We do not wish to take such action until you have had an opportunity to consider the matter and advise us whether you desire to return or not. A reasonable time will be allowed for you to do so.

While we will welcome all who return, at the same time we do not desire any to return who will not do so in the right spirit and with the belief that the Company intended to treat and will treat its employes fairly. We believe the majority of those who quit did so in good faith, accepting the statements and representations that have been made by those interested in having them leave their work. It must be evident to you now, and you must be the judge, as to whether these statements were true or sufficient to warrant you in giving up your position.

Some of you have been with the Company a long time, and will be giving up not only your position, but the valuable benefits under the progressive wage schedule and Pension, Sick Benefit and Insurance plan.

In addition to the liberal increase in wages on May 1 last, and the proposed shorter hours which will become effective in the Fall, the following are some of the benefits that you will be giving up:

Pensions

1% added for each year of continuous service.

Accident Disability Benefits

Total Disability—Full pay for thirteen weeks, and half pay for the remainder of disability, not exceeding six years in all.

Partial or temporary Disability—Full pay for thirteen weeks; half pay until able to earn a livelihood, not exceeding six years.

Sickness Disability Benefits

If term of employment is 10 years or more—full pay 13 weeks; half pay 39 weeks.

If term of employment is 5 to 10 years—full pay 13 weeks; half pay 13 weeks.

If term of employment is 2 to 5 years—full pay 4 weeks; half pay 9 weeks.

Life Insurance

For employees whose term of employment with the Company has been 5 to 10 years, 6 months' average wages.

For employees whose term of employment with the Company has been 10 years or more, 1 year's average wages.

The maximum payment in any case to be Two Thousand Dollars ($2,000.)

From the above you can tell how many and how much of these benefits would be sacrificed by you. The longer you have been with the Company the more important it is to you.

It is not necessary for you to give the Company immediate notice. We have sufficient help, and a reasonable length of time will be given for you to consider this matter before receiving final notice. Your name will then be dropped from our rolls unless you have notified us of your desire to return.

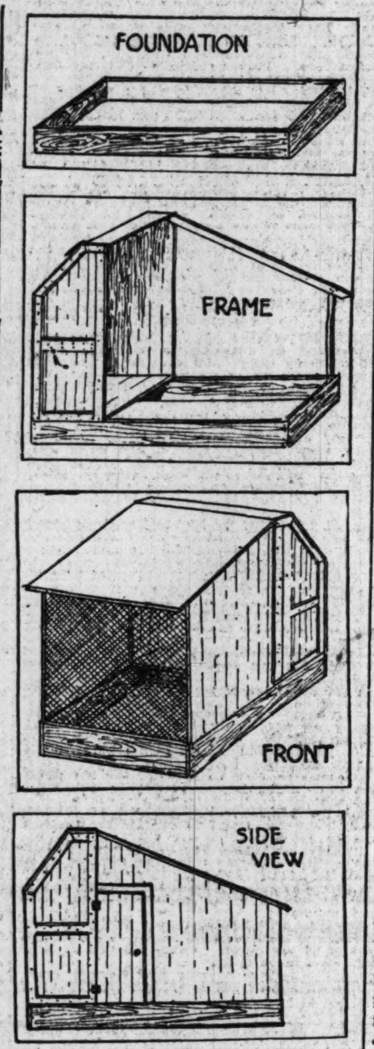
PIANO BOX HOUSE IDEAL HOME FOR SMALL FLOCK

Twenty Birds Can Be Made Comfortable for Winter and Summer at Expense of $10 and a Bit of Home Labor.



One of the most serviceable poultry houses for the utility flock in the city back yard can be constructed with a piano box and very little additional material. This house will accommodate from 15 to 20 hens very comfortably, and can be erected for less than $10 and the labor.

With a large upright piano box the house can be made 6 feet wide and 9 feet long, and can be used with success as a summer and winter house in any climate. This combination house is just the thing for those who are keeping poultry in a small way, and for farm purposes, where a large number of birds are raised, a series or colony of these houses can be erected at a very small cost as compared with a large house, and can be used for growing chicks and laying hens with success.

The foundation is made of 2x12 planks, and should be 6 feet wide and 9 feet long. The foundation should be placed level on the ground with one narrow end facing directly south. Place the piano box on the north end of the foundation with the back of the box toward the south. Remove the back of the box and nail the box securely to the foundation frame. Set one piece of 2x4 to rise four feet above the top of the foundation, in a vertical position in each corner of the south end of the foundation frame. Place another piece of 2x4 across the front, connecting the two vertical pieces. This completes the front frame.

As to the Roof.

Run the two pieces of 2x4 from the top, back corner of the box to the front of the frame, and put the back of the box which was removed, on top of these 2x4s, cleets down. This, with a few pieces added, will complete the boarding necessary for the roof.

Set a piece of 2x4 on the east side of the house, far enough from the box to make a door. Board up the sides with 1x2 board, and weather strip the cracks with laths or stripping. Stretch a piece of 1-inch wire mesh across the front.

The roof should be covered with composition roofing paper, extending down the back of the house to the center of the box. This gives protection from north wind to that part of the house in which the fowls roost.

The foundation frame should be strengthened in the center with a piece of 1x3 to keep it from bulging when it is filled. Fill with rock or bricks to prevent rats from getting into the house. The frame should be filled to level with the top with dirt, which raises the house above the ground, this keeps the floor very dry at all times, which is very essential for healthy poultry.

The bottom of the piano box will serve as dropping board, and the earth from the piano box to the front of the house makes a good scratching place in bad weather.

For the Interior.

For roosts set two pieces of 2x4, 2½ feet from the floor in the north end of the house.

The 2x4s should be set on edges, and the corners slightly rounded. It is a good plan to set these roosts into drop cleets from which they easily can be lifted at any time.

Ordinary orange boxes make first-class nests, and should be laid on their side with a small three-inch strip across the front. They can be placed conveniently in the house, and can be cleaned and kept free from lice more easily than a stationary nest.

A coat of whitewash or paint will give this house a good appearance, and with the use of a drop-curtain to be let down over the open front in extreme cold weather, this house will be found very comfortable. The open front will give the birds plenty of fresh air, and it has been found that flocks kept in open-front poultry houses are healthier than those housed where all air is shut off.

Vermont Hen Leads in Egg Laying Race

English Pen Still Holds the Collective Lead, but Drop in Individual Race.

A buff Wyandotte hen from Vermont now leads the national egg-laying contest at Mountain Grove, Mo., with 167 eggs to her credit for the six months and a half, or 197 days. An English S. C. white leghorn hen held first place from the beginning of the contest.

This English pen holds the pen record, with a total of 1338 eggs for this period. This pen has also laid about one hundred soft shelled and unmarketable eggs, which, if they could have been credited with, would have put them far in the lead. The total laid in May was 22,455 eggs, and this runs the grand total to 59,975. May was the hottest month experienced at this place for more than ten years. We lost two hens as a result of the heat and the hot, dry weather is affecting our egg records considerably.

A pen of S. C. brown leghorns from Fulton, Mo., and a pen of barred Plymouth rocks from Sioux City, Io., tied for the silver cup for May, each pen laying 239 eggs. Two buff Wyandotte pullets, No. 860, from Vermont, and No. 600, from Missouri, each laid 31 eggs in the 31 days. The last mentioned pullet has laid 62 eggs for 62 consecutive days. She will have to lay 20 more eggs to equal Lady Showyou's record of last year.

If it so happens that you failed to plant sunflower or other seed to furnish plenty of shade, make some artificial shade by building framework, the top of which is about three feet from the ground. Cover with burlap, old carpet, sod or grass. This may not be the most sightly affair, but answers the purpose quite well and adds to the fowls' comfort. Shade is of vital importance and is as much so as pure water and good food.

Before marketing the old hens, if it is desirable to keep part of them over, examine the pelvic bones, and if close together those are the ones to sell, and retain the ones with these bones wide apart. The latter are most certain to be in better laying condition.

A Good Dog Often Will Stop Groundhog's Levy on Turkeys.

If the turkey hen only brings part of her brood home at night the chances are that groundhogs have gotten in their work during the day. They are sly creatures and carry off numberless young turks during a season. A good dog is a groundhog's worst enemy and will soon catch onto the knack of hunting this pest. A favorite method of a dog is to get between a groundhog and his burrow when the groundhog is out on a foraging expedition. When startled the groundhog will take a bee-line for his burrow and will be intercepted by the dog.

Now Are the Days Children Need Care

A mother cannot do better for her children than to teach them from their earliest days regularity of the bowels. Regularity can be promoted without the child knowing it by watching its food and by so varying the food that all the elements of digestion are used, when nature will do the rest. The future health of the child depends upon this.

But try as you will there are times when the little one will become constipated and bilious. In hot weather immediate attention is necessary, as many serious diseases result from stuffed-up bowels. Don't give salts of cathartics or purgatives as they are too harsh, but give a gentle, pleasant-tasting bowel stimulant like Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. It has been used by the children of this as well as a former generation, and thousands of families are proud to speak well of it, among whom we can mention Mrs. Louise Reynolds, 909 Jackson st., Lynchburg, Va., who is glad to recommend it, and Mr. Chas. W. Allen, Manor, Tex., who writes that he [illegible] felt 100 years old, but feels younger now than his years.

Every druggist sells Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, and the price is only fifty cents and one dollar a large bottle. It will cure constipation and biliousness in young and old, break up a cold and stop summer diarrhoea by ridding the bowels of the poisons and germs that cause the trouble. It is a grand family laxative, with valuable tonic properties.

Families wishing to try a free sample bottle can obtain it, postpaid, by addressing Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 418 Washington st., Monticello, Ill.

Poultry Problems Solved

Feed for Moulting.

J. A. B., St. Louis, Mo.—The best time to force the moult is after your hens stop laying. They should be fed only enough to exist on for a week. A dry mash only during this period has given good results. The second week they should be given, mixed with the mash, one ounce of flaxseed or linseed meal to each bird. This mixture should be fed damp about three times during the second week, and it will cause the feathers to slip very fast. It is also a good idea to look over the birds and if you find any dead feathers after they start to moult pull them out.

Rheumatism.

One of my hens began to limp a few days ago and does not use her toes. The foot is not bruised.—W. A. Wood, Malvern, Ark.

Your hen has rheumatism. Soak the foot in turpentine and give her a good dose of epsom salts.

Squirrel Tails.

What causes squirrel tails in my leghorn cockerels?—N. A. Carroll, Salem, Mo.

A squirrel tail is often caused by jamming the tail when young, but when it appears in all of the birds, it is inherited from the parent stock.

Birds and Space.

How many leghorns can I keep on a lot 200x400 feet? Can I buy yearling hens at a reasonable price at this time, and where?—L. A. G., St. Louis.

You can keep 1000 birds on the tract. It depends on what system of housing you adopt. You can purchase hens at this time from any of the large leghorn breeders. I would advise you to wait until the last of July and buy pullets hatched this year. Good utility pullets will cost you from $1.50 to $2 each.

Line Breeding.

Will chicks breed from pullets mated to the father and from hens mated to a son give good results? The chicks appear to be very strong and healthy.—F. A. Kerr, Dennison, Tex.

Yes! They will give the best of results if the parent stock was strong and vigorous. This is termed line breeding and has been practised with success for years.

City Back Yard Stock.

What are the best chickens to select for the city back yard? I want chickens for the fresh eggs and have room for about a dozen. Robt. K. Forrest, St. Louis, Mo.

There is no best variety. It all depends on the one who handles them and the care given to them. I would suggest any of the dark colored varieties in the Mediterranean or the American classes, viz., brown leghorns, black Minorcas, barred, buff or partridge Plymouth Rocks, silver or buff Wyandottes. These varieties are best adapted for the city, because of not showing the dirt and they will make a better appearance at all times than the white varieties.

A. M. Davis, St. Louis, Mo.—Would suggest that you write to T. E. Quisenberry, Mountain Grove, Mo., for Poultrymen's Guide, covering results obtained at the experimental station.

A. Bradford.—Your chickens evidently have the roup. Commercial remedies will relieve them.

Mrs. G. W. A.—See answer to J. A. B.

Poultry Show Date Thanksgiving Week

Effort Will Be Made to Obtain Exhibit of Every Known Water and Land Fowl.

Arrangements for the great St. Louis Poultry Show were completed at a meeting of the St. Louis Poultry Association at the Marquette Hotel. The show will be held in the Coliseum and the services of the best judges in the country have been obtained. The management anticipates a large entry, as inquiries are being received from all parts of the United States and Canada.

A number of foreign birds were exhibited at last year's show and this year an extra effort will be made to secure exhibits of every known variety of land and water fowl.

The officers are: E. W. Grove, president; W. W. Henderson, vice-president, and Henry Steinmesch, secretary and treasurer.

Announcement of the Third Annual Contest at Missouri Station.

The third national egg-laying contest will begin at the Missouri State Poultry Experiment Station at Mountain Grove, Dec. 1, 1913. Requests are being received for places in this contest. Only three pens of 10 hens each, or a total of 30 hens of each variety, will be accepted. An absolutely square deal is insured every contestant. Not an egg will be sold from any pens for hatching. Each pen should consist of 10 early-maturing pullets. Liberal prizes will be offered. All of the leading varieties should be represented in 1914. Write to the experiment station at once for a copy of the rules and regulations governing this next contest. Liberal premiums will be offered for the best record made by each variety, also sweepstake prizes, and a silver cup for each month. The best breeders of each variety and the specialty clubs should see that their varieties are properly represented.

The fresh egg beats to a froth easier than a stale one. It takes a longer time to boil a fresh egg than it does a stale one. The fresh egg when boiled will stick to the shell, while one a few days old will peel off smoothly. The stale egg is not as heavy as the fresh one, and the shell becomes shiny smooth from the oil that exudes by evaporation.

Conduct of a Setting Hen Rests With Owner

Dust Bath, Whole Corn and Fresh Water Nearby Will Relieve Restlessness.

After all, almost anyone can succeed in the poultry busines if the little things are paid strict attention to. It is these little things that bring success and fill the pocketbook. Perfect cleanliness and strict attention to detail is all that is required, and even a child can grow a nice flock of chickens.

Did you ever wonder why so many hens are restless and break their eggs while setting? The chances are in favor of the owner not doing his part in making the setting hen comfortable. Upon becoming broody it is only natural for a hen to stick to her job, and she will gladly do it if provided with only a few small comforts—a dust bath, convenient runway so she can easily get off her nest and exercise, whole corn and fresh water readily accessible—and you may rest assured that she will do her part.

Do the little things like making the setting hen comfortable all down the line in the poultry business, and you will be on easy street in a few years.

OLIVE STREET IS CENTER OF PLANS FOR BUILDINGS

A. R. Schollmeyer Declares Need of Greater Office and Store Facilities for Accommodation of Present Population Will Force Early Completion of Projects.

1,000,000 POPULATION IN IMMEDIATE ZONE

Twelfth Street District Is Expected to Profit Liberally From Success of Several of Buildings to Be Announced After the Vacation Season.

As to actual transfers the St. Louis realty market is comparatively quiet, but there are many large operations in the perspective, according to operators.

Definite plans for the erection in downtown St. Louis of two more large buildings, it is believed will be announced within 30 days. These projects are under way and give promise of successful issue, it is said.

The outlook in the business district is reassuring, to say the least. Buildings of the first magnitude are projected for corners both east and west of Twelfth street. The consummation of any one of the larger projects would give development in this section of the city the needed impetus, it is presumed.

There is a dearth of office space and stores, according to reports. This is ascribed to the fact that the accession of commercial interests of the city has been disproportionate to its building growth.

Center for 1,000,000 Population.

Downtown St. Louis, according to A. R. Schollmeyer, formerly president of the St. Louis Real Estate Exchange and who for many years has been spokesman for the fraternity, is the clearing house of a district of 1,000,000 population. St. Louis has a population of 851,570 and the East Side, 200,000 or more, the several cities being virtually a whole, he contends.

This does not include, he points out, the suburbs of St. Louis, which represent another 100,000, and which sooner or later will be included in the city.

The business center, accordingly, should have accommodations commensurate with the population of which it is the center, he says.

The offices of most of the manufactories of East St. Louis, or the tri-cities are located in St. Louis, which also houses the majority of their workers.

According to Gould's City Directory, St. Louis is the center of a population of 1,001,200. This is the data given in the directory:

St. Louis proper	851,570
St. Louis County	68,680
East St. Louis	76,250
Granite City	13,100
Madison	7,600
Venice	4,000
Total	1,001,200

Demand for Factory Sites.

The removal of the terminal embargo will complete the consolidation of the West and East Side cities, he says, creating a Greater St. Louis.

The demand for manufacturing sites is daily increasing, indicating that, notwithstanding the disadvantages of the Terminal Railway proposition, St. Louis is a center of attraction.

The opening of the Railway Exchange Building (the Famous-Barr), it is believed, will reawaken St. Louis. The mammoth store, it is predicted, will be a rebirth to Olive street, the thoroughfare now being considered for a galaxy of projects, some of which will be secondary in importance only to the Railway Exchange Building.

The concensus of opinion is that the Railway Exchange Building will anchor the retail or business center of the city, the tendency of which has been westward.

Loans Difficult to Obtain.

The stage has been set for larger performances in the busines center, but the curtain will hardly rise before fall, the vacation season being at hand.

The inability to obtain building loans is curtailing building in the West End, but this will redound, it is said, to the good of the market. Contrary to that in the business district, the ratio of building in the residence districts has been greater than the increase in the population.

There is a demand for building sites in the West End, in the section south of Delmar, but it is not equal to that of last year. Agents are advising their clients to buy rather than to build, especially since the prices of flats and apartments have reached such low levels.

With the exception of Cabanne, sites north of Delmar, apparently, do not appeal to apartment house builders. In the Cabanne district many high-class apartments have been erected, displacing, in many instances, former high-class homes.

Leading South Side sales include the Bryn Mawr Apartment, a new six-family building at 3842 DeTonty street. It was transferred by the Trade Realty and Building Co., a subsidiary of the F. J. Cornwall Real Estate Co., to a client of Eugene Altheimer, for $27,500. The annual rental of the property is $2940. The improvement occupies a lot 50x130 feet.

A North Side sale was that of 809-11-15 North Jefferson avenue, a two-story building, by Henry Pechmann, to the Peabody Investment Co., for $27,500. The purchase comprises stores and apartments, the net annual rental of which aggregates $1800. The premises occupy 79 feet 9 inches on Jefferson, by a depth of 76 feet.

As part payment, a row of old two-story buildings at 1514 and 1516 Morgan street, occupying lot 49x144 feet, was deeded to Pechmann. The trade was conducted by the Weisels-Gerhart Real Estate Co.

GREATER ACTIVITY IN REALTY IN NEW HOME DISTRICTS

Hillcrest and Maryland Terrace Have the Call in the High-class Additions.

SOUTHAMPTON GROWING

West Walnut Manor and Wilson Heights Continue to Be Popular at Easy Terms.

Activity in the St. Louis realty market is confined in a large degree to the outlying districts.

Of the high class additions, Hillcrest and Maryland terrace have the call, while Southampton leads in the medium price section.

North University City, which is to be disposed of by auction Saturday, June 28, is attracting both homeseekers and investors.

The record was scored at Hillcrest last week when a dozen or more of the choicest lots in that subdivision were picked for costly homes.

The addition lies just west of the Art Museum in Forest Park and is ideally situated for homes of the better class.

Already many houses are under construction in Hillcrest, which promises to rival Parkview.

Leahy Bros. Real Estate and Building Co. is erecting four houses on Arundel avenue in Hillcrest, at a cost of $12,500 apiece.

Among others who are building handsome homes in the addition are Cornelius of the Butts Realty Co. and Adolph Pasquier. Both houses occupy commanding sites on Dartfort avenue.

The lots in Hillcrest are being offered by A. R. Schollmeyer, formerly president of the St. Louis Real Estate Exchange, in connection with the Title Guaranty Trust Co.

One of the most active offices in St. Louis realty circles is the Davis Realty Development Co., handling Maryland terrace and other big subdivisions. Between $25,000 and $30,000 worth of lots has been disposed of in this tract, according to Everett Davis, president of the corporation.

Some handsome homes are planned for Maryland Terrace, one of a group of high-class subdivisions embraced in University City.

Southampton Is a Magnet.

An enterprising campaign to dispose of Southampton addition, located on South King's highway, has been launched by the Mercantile Trust Co. with Roscoe Buchanan at the helm.

Hundreds of prospective purchasers have visited this subdivision during the last week. A dozen or more lots have been disposed of.

Southampton is one of the most advantageously situated subdivisions in Southwest St. Louis, and should appeal to homeseekers.

The lots are within reach of persons of all means, ranging from $10 to $25 a foot, the terms of purchase being extraordinary. These prices include complete street improvements of the highest character.

High-class medium priced houses are contemplated by most of the purchasers.

The general topography of the land suggests home building, especially of the bungalow character.

The original subdivision has been built up with houses, which have added immeasurably to values in the subdivision, the indications being that the growth of the second addition will be ever more rapid than that of the first.

Southampton, Buchanan declares, offers opportunities for both homeseekers and investors.

Wage Earners' Choice.

West Walnut Manor and Wilson Heights continue to be the choice of the wage earners. From 20 to 25 lots change hands each week in these tracts. The prices have been cut there, and the terms place the lots within the means of almost everyone.

A grand special sale is announced for the remaining lots which the David P. Leahy House and Homes Co. has resolved to close out this season. Several hundred houses have been built in the Manor and the Hights, the later addition bids fair to be a rival.

Both tracts are high and healthful and are located in one of the most rapidly developing parts of northwest St. Louis.

Phil Smith, manager of the Leahy company, announced yesterday that the transfer system in effect will make this property accessible to and from all parts of the city for a 5-cent fare. Both tracts are reached by the Bellefontaine-Union avenue car line in connection with the St. Louis and Jennings Railway, which leads direct into this territory, and which is owned by the David P. Leahy House and Home Co.

HEIDBREDER COAL CO. LEASES LINDELL BARNS

Modern Equipment Will Be Installed Through Terms of 10 Year Lease.

The Heidbreder Coal Co., of which George L. Heidbreder is president, has leased for 10 years the old Lindell Street Railway car barns at 2212 to 2222 Washington avenue.

The lease was arranged by the Mercantile Trust Co. The property fronts 125 feet on the south side of Washington avenue, by a depth of 150 feet through to St. Charles street.

Heidbreder declares the growth of his business has necessitated larger quarters and that the general offices of the company will be established in this building, in which the most modern equipment will be installed.

Extensive operations will be made, for which contracts have been let to the T. J. Ward Construction Co. The building is owned by Andrew H. Gay of Plaquemaine, La.

LIGHT COMPANY NOW OWNS ENTIRE BUSINESS BLOCK

Union Concern Obtains 99-Year Lease on Property on Ninth Street.

LAST OF FOUR DEALS

After Three Sales Mercantile Trust Co. Makes Final Transfer.

The Union Electric Light and Power Co. has leased for a term of 99 years the southwest corner of Ninth and St. Charles streets, thus acquiring the entire block extending from Ninth to Tenth streets. There are 86 feet on St. Charles street by 100 on Ninth street.

The Union company now occupies the Tenth street side of the block.

The lease was purchased from Charles W. Wall, treasurer of the Meyer Bros Drug Co., who had leased the corner from the late Judge Valle Reyburn. The ground rental is 4½ per cent net on a valuation of $125,000.

Plans for the development of the block have not been announced by A. C. Einstein, vice-president of the company, but it is understood that improvements on a scale commensurate with this locality are contemplated.

Fourth Change in Property.

The transaction was negotiated by C. H. McMillan, vice-president of the Mercantile Trust Co. It is the fourth transaction involving the property that has been made by the Mercantile Trust Co., including two sales and a 99-year lease and one sale of a 99-year leasehold estate.

The property is across the street from the site of the new addition for the Rice-Stix Dry Goods Co., which is being erected by the Liggett & Meyers estate, and which will add immeasurably to the appearance of this locality.

The deal insuring this improvement was also promoted by the Mercantile Trust Co.

ST. LOUIS COMPANY GETS BIG CLEVELAND CONTRACT

James Black Masonary and Contracting Co. to Build Store for May Co. There.

The James Black Masonry and Contracting Co. of St. Louis has been awarded the contract for a modern six-story department store building to be erected in Cleveland, O., costing $3,500,000, which will have a ground area of approximately 100,000 square feet as compared with 62,000 square feet occupied by the Railway Exchange Building in this city.

Albert E. Black, vice-president and manager of the St. Louis office of the Black company, in the Wright Building, yesterday made announcement of the plans of the giant structure. A peculiar coincidence is that the May Department Stores will occupy the Railway Exchange Building here, and the entire Cleveland building.

James W. Black, president of the Contracting company is in Cleveland in connection with the exectuion of the contract, which will be undertaken at once.

D. H. Burnham & Co. of Chicago are the architects. The structure will be of steel construction with concrete floors, and includes every modern appliance and improvement designed to add to the comfort of department store customers.

The Black company built the Butler Bros.' building, the largest monolithic structure in the world; the Wright Building, the Frisco Building the Liggett building, the Monogram building, the Chemical building annex, the Frisco building at Joplin, Mo., and larger structures in other cities.

The building is being erected and will be managed by the May Building Co.

AUTO ACCESSORY MAN MOVES TO 1109 LOCUST

Mercantile Trust Negotiates a Lease for Larger Quarters With Fred Campbell.

Fred Campbell, one of the largest dealers in automobile accesories in the city, has leased through the Mercantile Trust Co., the building at 1109 Locust street. The building is to be altered to facilitate the conduct of the business of the lessees, the growth of which has been such as to necessitate larger quarters.

Campbell is located at 1127-29 Olive street. This lease was made for the account of Thomas Dunn, who owns this building, recently involved in important leases, among them being the White Star Steamship Line and the Faust Fulton Market.

This leaves but one vacant space in the entire half block.

GLEN ECHO PARK NO. 2 OPENED FOR BUILDERS

Subdivision Lots on Lucas and Hunt Road Offered by Paul Jones & Co.

Glen Echo Park No. 2 was formally opened yesterday by Paul Jones & Co. The property lies on the east side of the Lucas and Hunt road, between the St. Charles and Natural Bridge roads and is accessible by the St. Charles electric line and the Ferguson-Kirkwood line.

There are 600 lots in this tract, the prices of which range from $8 to $25 a foot. The terms of sale are $10 cash and the balance in weekly installments.

A number of the lots have been disposed of to home seekers.

SPACKLER'S NAME REPLACES AIPLE'S IN REALTY FIRM

Change in 20-Year-Old Title Honors Man for Six Years Vice-President of Company.

Real estate circles were interested yesterday to learn that the name of the Aiple & Hemmelmann Real Estate Co. had been changed to the Hemmelmann-Spackler Real Estate Co. The firm has been doing business in St. Louis under the old title for 20 years.

The members of the firm are Theodore Hemmelmann Jr. and Richard C. Spackler, who has been the concern's vice-president for six years. R. C. Spackler was with the John Maguire Real Estate Co. for 18 years.

The Hemmelmann-Spackler company announced that with the changing of the firm's name it expects to keep up its record of lending money to thousands of home builders "without the loss of a dollar." That has been its slogan. Last year, the firm declares, it lent $1,985,000 for homes, and if its business expectations are borne out this year, the members say, the total will go to $2,500,000.

The firm was distributing handsome pocket pencils to callers during the day.

NORTH UNIVERSITY SALE PROMISES GREAT SUCCESS

New Owners of Subdivision Say Prospects Are Good for Record Breaking.

The offices of the Hewack Realty Company, the new owners of North University addition, are elated with the prospects of a record-breaking sale Saturday, June 28, when the remaining lots in the subdivision will be disposed of by auction. Since the tract was placed on the market several years ago by the W. L. Musick Realty Co., many substantial homes have been erected in the subdivision.

A red tag sale of lots was inaugurated several weeks ago, when the Hewack company acquired the subdivision, but that has proved too slow. Hence the auction sale.

There is maturing a deed of trust against the property, which must be converted at once in order to provide for the payment.

North University City addition is beautifully laid out and improved while the location is in line with the city's growth.

It is only four minutes from Delmar Garden and 40 minutes from the heart of the business center of the city.

The street or municipal improvements, which are of the best construction and quality, will be included in the prices at which the lots may be knocked down.

North University City addition will reap the benefits of the universal transfer system.

$50,000 BUILDING TO GO UP ON PULITZER LOT

Property Will Be Leased at $9200 a Year Establishing a Valuation of $230,000.

The Childs Real Estate Co. of New York virtually has perfected negotiations through the Nicholls-Ritter Real Estate Co. for a 99-year lease of the vacant lot on the north side of Market street, between Broadway and Sixth street, formerly owned by the estate of Joseph Pulitzer. The lot has an area of 52 feet 3 inches by a depth of 107 feet.

An annual net rental of $9200 will be provided for in the lease, thus establishing for the land a valuation, on a 4 per cent basis, of $230,000.

The lease also will provide for the erection on the site of a $50,000 building. The lot is owned by the Guardian Real Estate Co., of which C. H. Whiteside of Paul Jones & Co. is the guiding spirit.

About a month ago Clark H. Whiteside, on behalf of Grover Campbell, acquired the lot of the trustees of the Pulitzer estate for $52,600, the assessed value of the ground, but last week it was transferred to the Guardian Realty Co. the deed fo the trustees and that of the Guardian company were filed simultaneously, the consideration in both instances being $100. The actual consideration in the last instance, according to Whiteside, was a trifle under $100,000.

Throughout the transaction Campbell was represented by a straw man.

As yet, it is said, the principals in the Guardian company have not been disclosed.

GROWING WEATHER STEADIES PRICES IN COTTON MARKET

Timely Rains Puts Texas Fields in Condition to Promise Big Crop From State.

While the cotton market remains steady and the spot demand continues in satisfactory volume, the contract markets seem to have lost their steam. The prediction that the fall months would sell above 12 cents in New York has been general, but there seems to be considerable pressure brought to bear on these months at around 11.50.

The improving weather has been of great benefit to the plant and has changed sentiment to some extent. The timely rains that have fallen in Texas have made conditions there vastly better and except for the lateness, from 10 days to two weeks, the outlook is very satisfactory and a big crop in that State is promised provided the weather continues favorable.

Memphis advices are that the crop in that territory is in excellent condition, especially in Mississippi. Alabama and Georgia report late and rather spotted crops, due to the unseasonable cold weather and the long spells of dry weather. The Carolinas report improvement, especially in the North State. Generally the crop is improving, though somewhat too small for this date. Extreme hot weather is reported in Alabama, but not to a damaging extent so far. No complaints of hot winds have been heard.

Spot Markets Higher.

Spot markets are generally higher and sales are satisfactory in price. Of course these prices are nominal, as is the rule at this season. White cotton brings the full quotation, but off-colored cotton is selling at considerable discount. Stocks of cotton in the United States, in the aggregate, are about as last year at the same time, and the falling off in the into-sight movement is about the same as the falling off in exports.

The Census Bureau reports consumption by domestic mills during May at 510,416 bales, against 503,677 the previous month, and cotton on hand in manufacturing establishments May 31, 1,505,257 bales, against 1,746,611 bales April 30. This is a reduction in mill stocks of 241,000 bales, or about half a month's supply and would indicate that the demand from American mills has been brought about by their actual need of cotton to fill their requirements and maintain a reasonably safe reserve. This demand is likely to continue as long as goods are in demand.

Although buying by spinners may not be as active with the turn to good weather as might have been the case had the outlook been more unfavorable, the demand is much healthier and proportionately has less of speculative buying. Mill business is good in this country and mills, as a rule, are sold far enough ahead to make them comfortable.

Less Worry About Tariff.

The uneasiness caused by the fear of the tariff reduction, if not quite allayed, is less marked. Manufacturers seem to have grown less fearful as they have come closer to this bugaboo. A good business has been done with China and India and not a little with the Red Sea country. Domestic trade is active and there is a good inquiry for spot goods. No department of the trade is overstocked.

Abroad business is improving and mills are sold pretty well ahead, particularly the British mills.

In New York the situation in the July and August contracts has changed to the extent of many shorts. How much of a weak short interest yet remains is difficult to determine. The stock in New York is about 45,000 bales of certificated cotton, the total value of which is considerably below $3,000,000. An amount within the ability to handle of quite a good many New York houses. Present prices in spot markets do not make shipping cotton to New York an attractive proposition, so the danger in being short of these two months is apparent; probably too apparent to allow anyone to be caught.

The movement is normal and about like last year, in proper proportion to the size of the crop. Stocks in the interior show some decrease, but are still above last year by nearly 100,000 bales. Port stocks are about 100,000 bales less than last year.

DROUTH HURRIES STOCK TO MARKET AND PRICES FALL

Lower Grades of Beef Cattle Slump Sharply When Receipts Continue Heavy.

Receipts National Stock Yards.

	This Week.	Last Week.	Year Ago.
Cattle	27,500	19,635	27,083
Hogs	55,000	52,585	41,256
Sheep	33,500	36,017	34,397
Horses and mules	1,750	1,991	1,632

Generous receipts of all kinds of killing cattle, as well as stock and feeding cattle, was a feature of the week's trade. In comparison with the previous week, the arrivals show a big increase, although they were just about even with the corresponding period a year ago. The drouth that has prevailed throughout the Middle Western States has caused a great influx of cattle and it is safe to say that about 50 per cent of this week's arrivals were those which normally would have come later.

Beef steers were in generous supply. The period opened with all classes holding firm in the face of generous receipts. The market showed but little change from the close of the previous week. Dating from the second day, however, there was a weakness prevalent at each session on the medium grades, and these kinds at the close of the week were fully 15@25c lower than the previous period, with all grades of good to choice beeves about steady with the previous period. Top was made for the week at $8.85, and there was a good showing of the choice kinds clearing from $8@8.50. A load of Iowa steers brought $8.35.

Heifers Break Sharply.

Liberal supplies of butcher cattle also were in evidence. Especially was this true of the run of heifers. Choice kinds were not exceedingly numerous and the best straight load sold for $8.35. The market was rather mean and a slump of 15@25c was encountered on Wednesday. The bulk of heifers at the close of the week were a good 25@35c lower than last week.

Cows came in for a good trade the fore part of the period, but at the close sold generally weak at a 10c loss.

Bulls slumped 10@15c.

Canners and cutters were about steady all week and closed on this basis.

Veals were on the downturn all week and by the latter part were 75c@$1.25 lower than last week. Prime kinds sold from $9@9.50 at all stages of the week.

Receipts in the quarantine division were liberal. The opening day saw the largest run of the current year, 103 cars. Of the supply, Texas and Oklahoma, as usual, contributed the bulk. Mississippi, Arkansas, Louisiana, Alabama and Tennessee also shipped. Up till the mid-week session the market was active with values on a good, firm basis. However, on Wednesday, sales of Texas steers were generally slow at a 10@15c decline from the fore part of the week. Steers from Texas topped at $8.30 for the week, which was within a nickel of the best price of the year. Bulk of heavy fed steers sold from $7.90 to the top. Heavy grassers went at $6.75@7.40 and lights at $6.25@6.65. The balance of Southern cattle, embracing the usual assortment of canners and cutters, sold generally steady at all stages of the week. A load of Louisiana oxen brought $6.35.

Hogs in Sharp Slump.

A liberal number of hogs was received and prices took a good big tumble on all kinds. At the opening of the week the top was $9 for quite a lot of hogs, but later the top was down $8.85, which show loss of 45c on the top and the bulk suffered to about the same. The hogs averaged quite good in quality, as there were a lot of good, smooth hogs weighing 175 lbs. and over. On Saturday the top was up to $8.75 and the bulk sold at $8.60@8.70.

All buyers were rather bearish, but the shippers and city butchers did not hammer the market to the extent that the packers did. All weights seemed to decline about the same. The best sellers were the smooth hogs weighing 175 lbs. and over and the shippers got most of them. Packers satisfied themselves with the plain grades as they were able to buy them at prices under the figures good hogs were bringing.

Lights, weighing less than 165 lbs. the middle and latter part of the week sold at $8.25@8.50, fair grades $8@8.25, best quality pigs under 125 lbs. $8@8.30, medium grades $7.40@7.85, fair kinds $7@7.35, and rough packers $8@8.25.

Lambs in Big Tumble.

A liberal supply of sheep was received each day and as a consequence the market was on the decline most of the week and reached the lowest basis this season. Lambs suffered to a much greater extent than did sheep, as most of the arrivals were lambs. Sheep lost 25@40c during the week, while lambs dropped $1@1.50, and the poorer grades were very slow sellers.

A good share of the offerings were from Tennessee and they sold at $8@8.35 the fore part of the week, at $7.50@7.85 the later. Best native lambs the first of the week went at $7.50@7.85, and later at $7@7.25, while the medium grades the middle and latter part of the week sold at $6.50@7, and fair kinds $6@6.50, and the culls $4@5.50. Buyers sorted their lambs extra close.

Quite a lot of lambs remained in the yards two or three days before they could be sold on account of there being so many on the market. Best mutton sheep the first half of the week went at $5 and later at $4.75. The number of sheep was only moderate and buyers needed them. Stockers and all fair grades sold poorly and at unsatisfactory prices, bringing $3@4 according to grade. Bucks sold at $3.75@4.

Horses Steady; Mules Lower.

The run of horses was fair to moderate. The auction offering for the first three days totaled close to 600 head, most of which were chunks and drafts suitable to the Eastern trade. Buyers were in larger attendance from the Eastern States than from the Southern, but neither section bid higher, although they were rather active in bidding. The volume of buyers was small all through the current week. Good chunks and drafters met the best demand, but with no change in prices.

The mule situation was not as good as it was the previous week. All classes decreased from $10 to $15 a head. Buyers were scarce and as a result too many mules were in the commission barns. Good, big mules and miners or any kind of an extra good work mule sold well, but the other kinds, such as green and unclassed stuff did not sell at all and shippers should be slow to ship this class.

SUNDAY POST-DISPATCH'S REVIEW OF MARKETS

NEW YORK STOCK MARKET REFLECTS BEAR PRESSURE AT WEEK'S FINAL SESSION

New Currency Plan Fails to Stimulate Demand From Investors.

LONDON LIST IS MIXED

Best Opinion Is Bank of England's Rate Will Be Raised.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, June 21.—The Evening Post, in its copyrighted financial weekly review, says:

"If one were to ask just what impression the new banking and currency proposals have made on the minds of business men and financiers, he would not find a ready answer. This is not altogether because of the slow and more or less fragmentary form in which the provisions of the bill as it reached the public. Even had its complete and verbatim terms been published last Monday, the business community would not have been ready with its judgment.

"The problem is technical and to some extent also intricate. With the average man the reception of any such proposal would be regulated by the extent to which he had convinced himself that banking and currency reform was a vital, immediate necessity, or the extent to which his habitual suspicion of new experiments in such fields made him dislike the prospect.

"Anyone deeply imbued with the first of these ideas would incline to welcome even an unwise plan without examining it. Anyone under the second influence would be apt to shake his head over even a model measure. Most people's minds are balanced between the two influences.

"As the discussion grows into intelligible shape it is probable that three considerations will hold the foreground, with the business community as with the statesmen and economists.

"These are the plan for 'regional central banks,' instead of one national reserve institution; the plan for exceptional concentration, with a politically appointed commission of control over the country's banking, and the plan for an increase in the currency, kept below the $500,000,000 limit only by the ability of banks to put up the requisite commercial paper and gold reserve, or by such tax as the central board at Washington chooses to impose upon it.

The Reserve Bank Plan.

"The 'regional reserve' bank plan has encountered, so far as its principle is concerned, extremely little opposition. It certainly removes at a single stroke one haunting doubt which, in discussion of the Aldrich plan pervaded the minds even of friendly critics, the doubt as to who would really control the immensely powerful organization which was to supervise the whole credit system of the United States.

"It removes the perplexity which surrounded that earlier plan as to how such a national institution was to rediscount for communities as unlike one another as New York, California, Texas, Montana and North Dakota, and was to maintain a uniform rate for rediscounting in them all.

"The 'regional bank' plan makes no such undertaking. It also commends itself to the American traditions which allow each state to manage its own particular affairs with the National Government attending to things which concern them all.

"How the high concentration of paramount authority with a Washington commission, in such matters as the tax on note circulation and the official rate of rediscount at the several 'regional reserve banks,' will impress the mind of the business community, must doubtless depend on their faith in the omniscient of Federal commissions.

"Early in the discussion of the Aldrich plan it was pointed out that his central bank expedient had to steer between the menace of control by private banking interests and the menace of control by political influences. It was alleged by opponents of the Aldrich plan that the first of these dangers surely lay before it. But the question will be asked, regarding the present plan, whether in avoiding Scylla it is not heading pretty straight to Charybdis.

The Currency Issue.

"The still very vague idea of an additional note issue currency, superimposed on all the rest, and limited only to half a billion dollars, will no doubt appeal differently to different minds.

"There are people naturally inclined to currency inflation who would have liked to see the Aldrich-Vreeland emergency currency act of 1908 stripped of its rigid safeguards; who would have welcomed the delusion of the collateral behind the present bank notes, and who secretly believed that the Windom treasury notes of 1890 would have been a complete success if John Sherman's parity clause had not tied them down to gold redemption. Such people will naturally not object to the full scope of the present plan.

"There are others who will oppose any plan for injecting a new form of currency into our circulation on top of all the rest; who will describe that project as inflation, even if the machinery is provided to force such currency back again in the Washington board's discretion?

"There are probably others also who will ask just how the new expedient would work, when a sum of gold, one-third as great as the notes to be put out had to be withdrawn for the purpose directly or indirectly from the bank reserves.

"That the provision, in the new banking bill, for placing control even of certain details of the banking business in the hands of a politically appointed commission at Washington should impress the banking community most unfavorably was inevitable.

"The character of the suggested Federal commission is unknown; the powers are enormous; it would certainly be to a very large extent a leap in the dark.

"It is public opinion which is likely to settle the fate of the present proposals, and the country is yet to be heard from. How is the measure likely to impress the average business man?

"Stocks closed the week around the lowest level, with wide declines in the active shares. Saturday's market was weak."

LONDON TRADE CHECKED BY STIFF MONEY RATES

Best Opinion Is Bank of England Will Be Forced to Raise Discounts.

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch and New York World.

LONDON, June 21.—The conspicuous fact in the situation as the half-year approaches its end, is the worldwide attitude of caution. This is especially true of London—where, by a curious contradiction, expectation is now so unanimous of acute money stringency in the autumn as almost to suggest to some minds that it will not occur at all.

After the July settlements are over, money rates should temporarily relax, especialy at Berlin, where there will doubtless be much talk about actually easy money and a satisfactory position.

It is impossible to forget, however, Berlin's chronic condition of dependence on other markets, and its repeated borrowing from New York and London, before the end of older previous quarters, at rates as high as 6 and 7 per cent. Nor can the recent sensational failure of the Imperial and Prussian loans be without its effect on the Berlin situation.

London a Lender.

So far as regards the midsummer and autumn requirements of your money market, London is fully prepared to lend to the United States the usual amount which it advances to move the crops. But difficulty may arise through nervous mistrust as to whether the money is not desired for speculative purposes.

The tendency, therefore, will be to investigate scrupulously the genuineness of the requisitions rather than to refuse accommodation.

The recovery on your stock exchange since the culmination of the break last week is naturally welcome to our markets, but its continuance is doubted; for experienced observers here remain more optimistic concerning your trade outlook than regarding your finance.

The relapse of our own financial markets into depression, during the last half of this week, was partly due to the approach of the mid-year readjustments, which will for the time increase the money market's stringency and necessitate large sales of stocks against options maturing at the end of the present month.

The immediate outlook, therefore, favors continued depression on the stock exchange for the next week or two.

After that we look for dead calm in the markets until autumn, when everything will depend on the money situation. If present indications are to be depended on, there is reason to expect a 6 per cent Bank of England rate before the end of the year.

Sale of Department Store Bonds Are Offered.

Altheimer & Rawlings Investment Co. of St. Louis, in conjunction with Greenbaum Sons Bank & Investment Co. of Chicago and the Tillotson & Wolcott Co. of Cleveland, announce the sale of $2,000,000 of six-per-cent first mortgage gold bonds, secured by the new May Department Store building in Cleveland O. In the announcements of the sale of these bonds the Altheimer & Rawlings Co. lay stress on the fact that the May Department Stores Co. has assets of $27,000,000; that this corporation is the lessee of the building for which the bonds are issued at an annual rental sufficient to pay all expenses, fixed charges, interest and principal of bonds as they mature, and that the rent is payable monthly to trustees for the bondholders.

These bonds are issued in denominations of $500 and $1000 each, and mature from two to 20 years, interest being paid on March 1 and Sept. 1.

DIVIDENDS DECLARED.

NEW YORK, June 21.—The Indiana Pipe Line Company declared a regular quarterly dividend of $4 per share, payable August 15. Kanawah & Michigan declared a regular semi-annual dividend of 2½ per cent and an extra dividend of 1 per cent, payable June 30.

It was a weather market in grain again the past week, but the price range was irregular, wheat meeting some selling after an early bulge, while corn reflected strength.

The weather map showed good rains in the spring wheat belt, especially in North Dakota, where the drouth has been temporarily relieved.

There was not much comfort for the bears in corn, as the weather was decidedly bullish. High temperatures without rain prevailed over the entire growing belt, and unless a change comes quickly the drouth damage of 1911 may be duplicated.

Nearly all reports sent in over commission house wires were bullish, as authentic information is that the crop is past the danger line over a wide area.

Fortunately, the present dry spell came early, and the corn is in a position to recover, which it would not have been late in July. Good rains would no doubt work wonders with the crop, but expert opinion is that they must come within the next 10 days.

Market News Scarce.

Aside from the weather, there was not much of importance in the week's news on wheat. The export demand continues to reflect a good foreign inquiry for our wheat, despite the near aproach of the winter harvest, which is going forward under the most favorable conditions. While some buying was indulged in on the dry weather in the Northwest, the trade overlooked the fact that the dry map over the Southwest made conditions absolutely perfect for the winter wheat and in the territory east of the Mississippi River the crop will prove a bumper where a year ago it was practically a failure.

Foreign crops also are making progress in all the leading producing countries and the indications are for a world's wheat yield at least as big as a year ago. Should the quality of the foreign wheat be more favorable than a year ago, our exports may prove less satisfactory, as last year's yield abroad was of an inferior grade and has stimulated the demand for our wheat.

Stock Market Is Weak.

In the late week the decline in the New York stock market made bull traders cautious, as Wall street continues to talk business depression and possible liquidation in all commodities as well as labor.

There is no doubt much menace in the continued decline in securities, as Wall street invariably discounts prosperity or depression six months or a year in advance and on this theory the stock list seems to be blazing the way for very uncertain business and financial conditions. It remains to be seen if Wall street is to be the indicator it has been in the past, or whether history will fail to repeat itself in the first Democratic administration in 20 years.

The first car of wheat of the 1913 crop was auctioned off on the Merchants' Exchange Wednesday. It graded No. 2 red, weighed 59 pounds to the bushel and brought 96½c. The shipment was made by the Brown-Defield Grain Co. of Charleston, Mississippi County, Mo., to the Elmore Schultz Grain Co. It sold to Fred Young of the Mound City Elevator Co. P. P. Conner acted as auctioneer.

The domestic wheat visible decreased 1,701,000 bu for the week; corn increased 2,935,000 bu, oats 77,000 bu.

The total visible showed:

	Today.	Last Year.
Wheat	32,951,000	26,362,000
Corn	7,332,000	8,172,000
Oats	8,533,000	4,785,000
Changes—		Last week.
Wheat, decrease		3,288,000
Corn, increase		1,844,000
Oats, increase		351,000

The European wheat visible now is 87,705,000 bu, against 89,680,000 bu last week and 97,100,000 bu last year.

Broomhall's foreign crop summary said:

United Kingdom—Wheat heading under fair weather conditions. Spring crops need rain.

France—Outlook generally favorable.

Germany—Outlook mostly favorable; some complaints regarding thin rye plant; oats outlook moderate.

Russia—In the south, outlook favorable. In Volga region crop continues to improve. In the center promise is for moderate crop. Supplies generally light at ports.

Roumania—Crop outlook favorable.

Hungary—Present outlook promises favorable.

Austria—Crop outlook favorable.

Italy—In north some deterioration, but generally a good average crop is expected.

North Africa—Moderate harvest is indicated.

India—Offers of wheat smaller with holders firmer.

Australia—It is expected that there will be a larger acreage sown this year.

200,000 due Mar. 1, 1932
$200,000 due Mar. 1, 1933

Privilege to prepay on March 1, 1918, and on interest days thereafter, upon 60 days notice and paying a premium of 3% in addition to principal.

Principal and semi-annual interest payable at Greenebaum Sons Bank and Trust Company of Chicago, Ill., or The Guardian Savings and Trust Company of Cleveland, Ohio, Trustee.

We call your attention to the following important facts regarding this issue:

1. Security consists of new, massive, fire-proof, six-story and basement, steel, granite and terra cotta business building, fronting about 200 feet on Euclid Avenue, extending 480 feet through to Prospect Avenue and fronting 218 feet on Prospect Avenue in the very heart of the best retail business district of Cleveland, Ohio; together with valuable long-term leasehold estates. We estimate conservative value of security at double the amount of the mortgage over and above financial responsibility of May Department Stores Company, lessee.

2. The MAY DEPARTMENT STORES COMPANY, with assets of $27,000,000, is lessee of the building at an annual rental sufficient to pay absolutely all expenses, fixed charges, interest and principal of bonds as they mature.

3. Terms of this lease provide for deposit of the rent with the trustee monthly in advance to meet these payments and lease assigned to trustee.

4. Net earnings of MAY DEPARTMENT STORES COMPANY for year ending January 31, 1913, were $2,578,922.61, or nearly fifteen times amount necessary to meet requirements of lease.

5. The serial payment of principal annually increases the margin of security. Bonds mature two to twenty years and should enhance in value as the margin of security becomes greater.

6. Protection against fire by first-class insurance companies for benefit of bondholders. Title Guarantee Policy by Chicago Title & Trust Company, capital and surplus over $8,000,000, and legality of issue, form of Trust Deed and Bonds passed upon by Attorneys Simeon Straus and Henry L. Stern of Chicago, and Messrs. Squire, Sanders & Dempsey of Cleveland.

7. It is an unusual opportunity for conservative Investors to secure a high rate of interest with absolute safety of principal. Considered by experts the choicest security of its kind. Legal investment for banks and Insurance Companies. Purchased by the most conservative Investors.

THESE BONDS HAVE OUR UNQUALIFIED RECOMMENDATION

The undersigned will receive subscriptions for a limited amount of the above bonds at 100 and accrued interest from March 1st, 1913, to yield 6% to purchasers.

INQUIRY ORDERED BY U. S. INTO RAISE OF FREIGHT RATES

WASHINGTON, June 21.—An inquiry will be made by the Interstate Commerce Commission into the application of the railroads east of the Mississippi and north of the Ohio and Potomac rivers, for permission to advance freight rates, both class and commodity.

Early today an order was issued by the commission denying the application of the 52 Eastern lines to reopen the old advance rate case, No. 3400, which was a proceeding looking to the increase of class freight rates.

Coincidentally, the commission issued a second order instituting, on its own motion, an investigation of the general proposal of the railroads to increase all freight rates, both class and commodity.

Late this afternoon, after a conference, the commission issued a third order rescinding its order of investigation and announcing that a substitute would be issued later.

The last order created wide conjecture among those interested, as it was accompanied by no explanation. It was said later by commission officials that the form of the order of the investigation would be changed in the forthcoming order, in phraseology rather than in principle.

Superfluous Hair Truths

Stop Experimenting

There are but few depilatories sold. You think there are hundreds because you have used the same identical preparations under several different names. This is easily explained. Women stop using

So-Called Hair Removers

when they learn that they are harmful. Therefore, they cannot be sold under the same name for any length of time. Then the identical, worthless, harmful concoctions are given new names and advertised again as totally different preparations to who innocently buy them over and over again under different names, and this will continue as long as women are so unwise as to experiment with unknown, so-called hair removers.

De Miracle

Has Stood the Test of Time

De Miracle has been sold as De Miracle for over eleven years, and its name has never been changed. It is acknowledged the world over by eminent authorities as the one safe, perfected hair remover, therefore it is the only depilatory you can use without experimenting.

Leaves No Tell-Tale Smell

If you use De Miracle it will be impossible for any curious person to know that you have used a hair remover, because De Miracle evaporates immediately after accomplishing its work, therefore leaves no odor whatever. On the other hand, if you use any depilatory with a distinctive odor, an offensive, tell-tale smell will cling to your skin for hours.

Avoid Permanent Disfigurement

by refusing substitutes. If your dealer will not supply you send $1.00 direct. Free information how to determine which depilatories are harmful and worthless sent in plain, sealed envelope.

We All Eat Too Fast!

We all do more or less, but the worst feature of fast eating is the unavoidable swallowing of air with the food. Is it any wonder then, that after a few mouthfuls of food, or after a meal, you feel bloated, uncomfortable and nervous?

Fast eating is, to a great extent, nervousness, or rather the craving of the stomach nerves for a quick supply of food, and Baalmann's Gas-Tablets are a typical specific for this undue craving of the nerves which results in eating quickly.

Baalmann's Gas-Tablets CANNOT make you eat slower, but through their direct action on the excited gastric nerves calm the craving stomach and relieve you of swallowed air, stomach gas and its bad effects. These peculiar Tablets are sold for 50c by all druggists, but insist on getting the genuine in a yellow carton.

For a free sample send to J. Baalmann Co., 338 Sutter st., San Francisco.

Any sufferer mailing this coupon, with name and P. O. address, to J. Baalmann Co., 336 Sutter St., San Francisco, Cal., will receive a free trial treatment of Baalmann's Gas-Tablets, postpaid. Write today. (5)

MISSOURI HAS 245 NEW LAWS TODAY ON STATUTE BOOKS

Measures Passed by Last Legislature Became Effective at Midnight.

ORR BILL NOW ENFORCED

Act Which Caused Insurance Companies to Withdraw From State Is Now a Law.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY., June 21.—Just 245 new laws passed by the last Legislature go into effect Sunday night at 12 o'clock.

Included in this list are laws for the protection of working women, three corporation laws, several important school and road enactments, laws amending existing statutes, and a series of bills dealing with probate matters, one of these putting married women on the same plane as married men in the custody and control of children.

The last Legislature passed more than 250 bills, but five were vetoed by Gov. Major, so that the actual number to become effective, including the home rule, full train crew and county unit laws, which have been suspended or may be suspended by the referendum, is 245.

Lunch Bill in Effect.

One of the laws of the session is a bill abolishing free lunch in saloons. This law was backed by the Missouri Retail Liquor Dealers Association and received the enthusiastic support of the "drys" in the Legislature.

The law restricting women's work to nine hours is declared to be valid, and enforcible by the Attorney-General and is among other laws for the protection of workers which become effective at the same time.

Other laws to become effective are the law to restrict the spread of occupational diseases, a measure backed by the labor organizations of St. Louis; the act giving to silica and glass workers a nine-hour day, and a law prohibiting the working of operators of interlocking switches more than nine hours.

The "blue sky" law, which gives to the State Bank Commissioner the power to pass upon the solvency of investment concerns before they can offer their stock or bonds for sale, is one of the new laws.

The other laws affecting corporations, and which are regarded as exceedingly drastic, are the corporation registration law, which gives to the Secretary of State power to inquire into the inner workings of corporations and to require from them annual registration and the payment of a $5 fee, and the law requiring all foreign railroads to incorporate in Missouri.

In signing this act, Gov. Major construed it so that it could not be made applicable to foreign railroads now operating in Missouri. He said to preserve its constitutionality it could apply only to railroad corporations which may hereafter seek admission to Missouri.

Mann Act Supplemented.

One of the important enactments of the session was the Craig law, supplementing the Federal Mann act. This law was promoted by the W. C. T. U. and other women's organizations.

Among the laws indorsed by Circuit Attorney Harvey of St. Louis, which become effective Sunday night, is that giving the Circuit Attorney power to take an interpreter before the grand jury and to direct him to attend all Coroner's inquests wherein a criminal charge might arise. A law of interest to the educational interests of St. Louis was the bill backed by Supt. Blewett and others of St. Louis, permitting children to attend kindergarten between 5 and 6 and the opening of the schools at night to persons over 20.

This law is general, however, in its character, and any district of the State that desires to stand the extra tax may avail itself of the provisions of the law.

A non-partisan judiciary for St. Louis is provided in one of the laws. This law, the author of which was Senator Mike Kinney, provides for the taking of the judiciary of St. Louis entirely out of politics, as the School Board is.

The Orr anti-trust law, which the foreign insurance companies claim is so drastic that it has compelled them to suspend business, will become effective Sunday night. This has been the most-talked-about measure passed by the Legislature. The enacting clause of the measure is defective, so that a new section known as 10313A, about which the fire companies complain may be invalid, was enacted. Several important bills affecting the schools of Missouri become operative Sunday night.

Blanket Ballot Again.

One important election law becomes effective. This is the Orr bill restoring the blanket ballot in Missouri and providing for the printing of party captions and candidates upon it. This law also has a provision prohibiting fusion, which was apparently intended to prevent the Progressive and Republican parties from getting together.

The St. Louis County excise law, a blow aimed by the Democratic Legislature at the alleged Republican machine in St. Louis County, becomes operative.

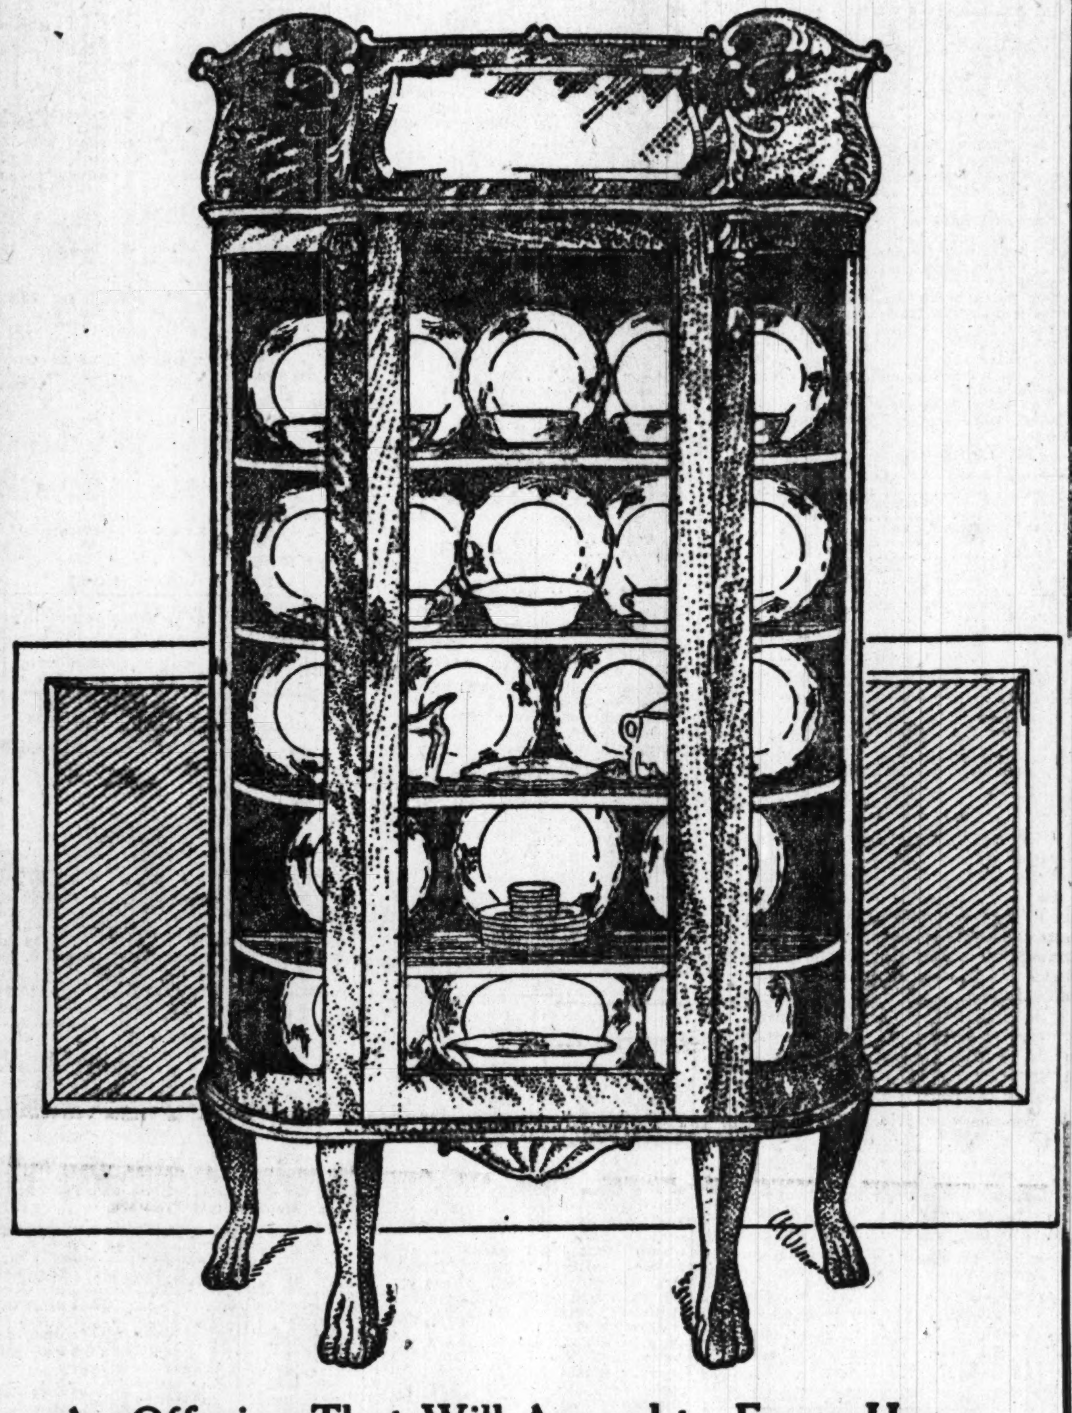
This provides for the appointment by the Governor of two Excise Commissioners, one a Democrat and one from some other party, to license and control the saloons. The County Court is stripped of all jurisdiction in the management of saloons.

A number of important laws are already in effect. They are those creating the State Public Service Commission, the State Highway Department, the Board of Pardons and Paroles, the office of Drainage Commissioner and the St. Louis municipal primary law. These carried emergency provisions and became effective when signed by the Governor.

TWO EXTRAORDINARY $17.50 SPECIALS

Handsome China Closet

Filled with Attractive 56-Piece Dinner Set . . . $17.50
$1.00 CASH—$1.00 A MONTH



An Offering That Will Appeal to Every Home

Furniture can be bought in many stores, it is true—but nowhere else will you find such attractive combination offers, low prices and pleasing terms as this store presents. Take this offering for example—the China Closet alone is worth more than we ask for the entire outfit—an example of the unusual values we are offering our patrons in these columns every week—it will certainly pay you to watch for our announcements and take advantage of them.

For Several Weeks

We have been searching the market for the prettiest China Closet and the nicest Dinner Set to go with it—and we are ready tomorrow morning with a combination that cannot fail to meet with your enthusiastic approval.

The China Closet

Is exactly as shown in the illustration—a new and extremely attractive design—made of solid oak throughout and finished in a manner that would do credit to the highest class of furniture—the illustration gives you an excellent idea of the design, but to appreciate its size, finish and carving you must see it for yourself.

Has Bent Glass Ends

You will notice that this China Closet is broad and high—made with bent glass ends—large dustproof door—adjustable shelves—and is surmounted with handsome pattern plate beveled mirror—and set off with touches of hand carving and French claw feet.

The Dinner Set

Consists of 56 large pieces—all of extra fine white ware—ornamented in floral designs and trimmed with gold edges—it is exact copy of a fine Haviland Set and finished with almost the same care as the original.

56 Useful Pieces

This Dinner Set is carefully made up of the most-needed pieces—consisting of 6 Cups.

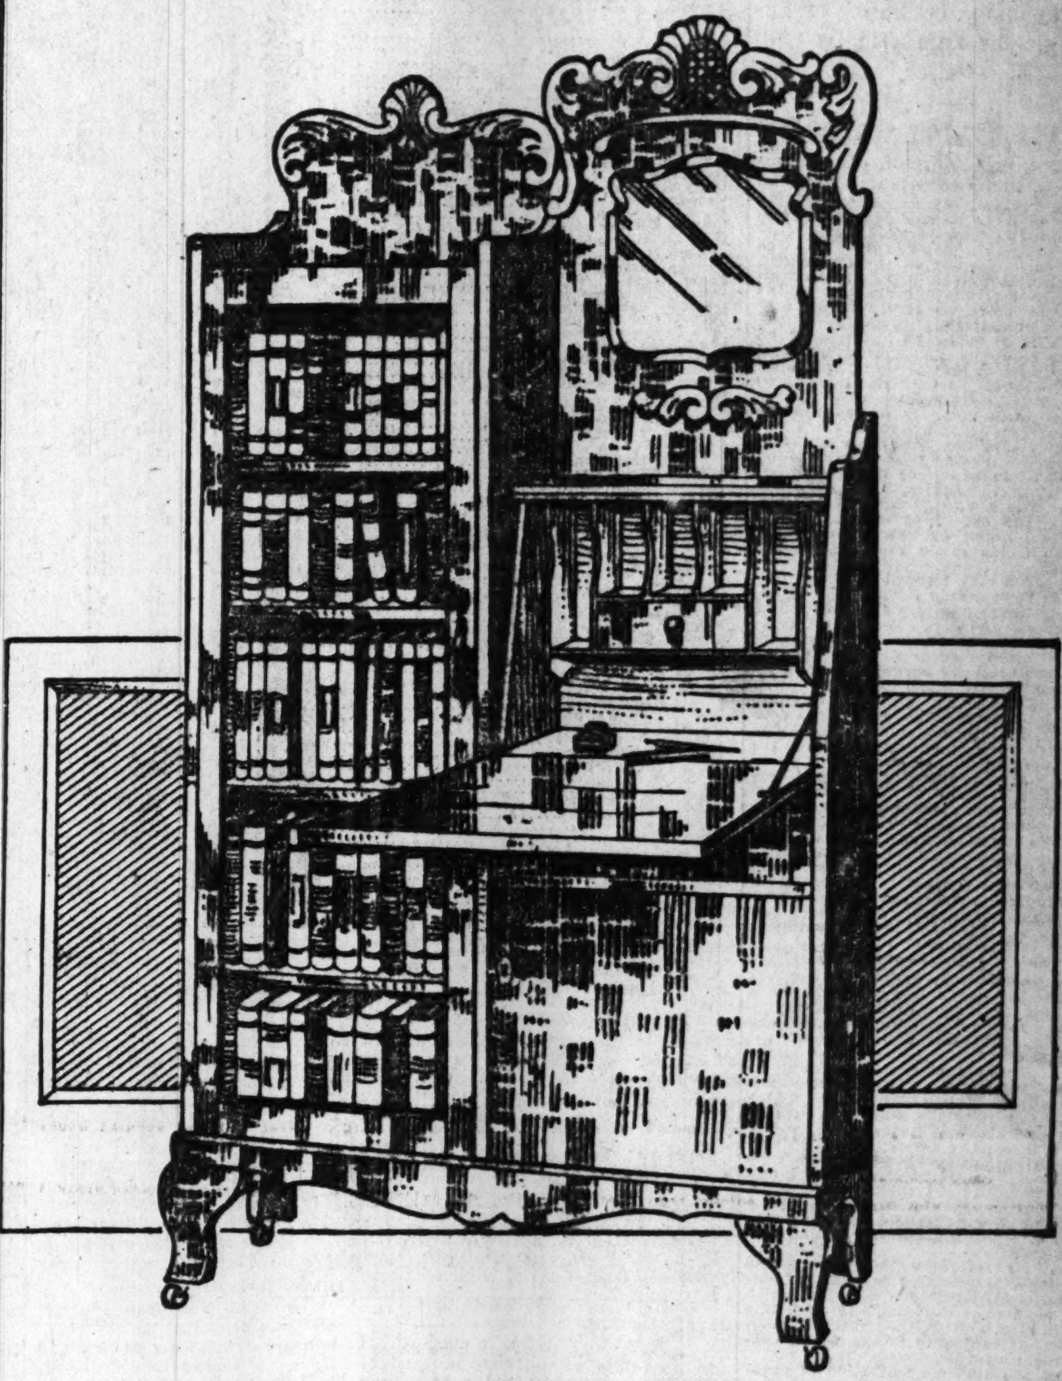
6 Saucers.
6 Plates—7-inch.
6 Plates—5-inch.
6 Plates—4-inch.
6 Soup Plates—6-inch.
6 Fruit Plates—4-inch.
6 Individual Butters.
1 Dish—8-inch.
1 Baker—7-inch.
1 Nappie—7-inch.
1 Cake Plate—8-inch.
1 Covered Sugar Bowl.
1 Cream Jug.
1 Pickle Dish.

A Remarkable Value

The China Closet by itself could not be bought regularly for less than $19.00—the Dinner Set in any exclusive china store would certainly cost you at least $6.75—so you see we are offering you practically a $25.75 value for $17.50—and on terms of $1.00 cash and $1.00 a month—payments so small that they will hardly be noticed in the current expenses of the household.

Combination Bookcase

Complete with Twenty Cloth-Bound Books $17.50
$1.00 CASH—$1.00 A MONTH



Are You Awake to Your Opportunities?

Many people have such attractive homes because they watch our announcements and take advantage of the special values we offer from week to week. Their income may be no greater than yours—their expenses just as high as yours—yet they have far more home comforts than you, and the only reason is that they profit by the opportunities that we offer. Hundreds of such patrons will grasp this opportunity tomorrow—they will be glad to profit by it—and it would pay you to do so, too. Remember, $1.00 is all the initial payment that is required.

A Combination Bookcase

Like this is something that is needed in every home—it is a useful, practical and attractive piece of furniture—combining a roomy bookcase and a well-arranged Writing Desk, all in one piece of furniture, and taking up very little room.

The Construction

This Combination Bookcase is made of selected oak throughout—it is 72 inches high, 37 inches wide and is set off with attractive 12x12-inch pattern plate beveled mirror—the Bookcase is roomy, has adjustable shelves and dustproof glass door—the Writing Desk is nicely arranged with drawer and pigeonholes as shown in the picture—and has large compartment underneath.

Guaranteed Construction

We secured these Bookcases from one of the best-known makers in the Middle West—and we have their written assurance that we can guarantee these Bookcases to our trade—so confident are they of the high quality of their product that they offer to replace any Combination Bookcase that should prove defective in any way—and this guarantee is not a temporary one, but holds good definitely—for as they say, "Their Furniture Is Made to Last."

The 20 Books

With each Combination Bookcase we include 20 standard cloth-bound books—these books are printed from large type, on good paper, neatly bound in cloth covers and the titles are lettered in gold. The stories are written by the world's greatest authors and will give the whole family clean, interesting, stirring and wholesome reading for many months to come.

Note the Value

This Combination Bookcase by itself is well worth $18.50—the books would sell regularly at 75 cents a piece, which would make them worth $15.00—in other words, we are offering you a $33.50 value for $17.50—and if that isn't a bargain, you never saw one.

The Terms Are Easy

You don't need to bring a lot of ready cash when you buy here—notwithstanding the low price we name—we offer this Combination Bookcase and set of books for only $1.00 cash and $1.00 a month—and you can figure for yourself how long a time this gives you to pay for the outfit. We want your account—and we trust you will take prompt advantage of this unusual offer.

A Dress Without a Button, a Hook or an Eye!

That's Lady Constance Richardson's Latest

Only Seven Yards of Material Required to Make This Wonderful New Gown.

IS ALL IN ONE PIECE

Equally Serviceable for House or Street Wear, Says Titled English Woman.

By Marguerite Mooers Marshall.

A Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, June 21.

LADY CONSTANCE STEWART RICHARDSON, daughter of 1000 Earls—more or less—and granddaughter of the Duke of Argyll, has done it again. Known as "the most unconventional woman in England," she first shocked society by leaving off her shoes and stockings and following in the barefoot tracks of Isadora Duncan. Now she has left off hat, skirt, coat, gloves, all the insignia of conventional fine ladyhood and put on a strange costume, half Arabian, half Italian Renaissance, wholly and entirely Lady Constance.

And she talks dress reform with all the vivid enthusiasm she lavished on Greek posturing four years ago, when she came to New York to dance at social and charitable functions.

I met her then, and when I talked with her following her professional debut at a local roof garden, I saw at once that it was the same Lady Constance. Perhaps she is trained down to an even more supple slenderness, certainly the years have erased the hint of nervousness which used to tinge her vivacity. But her eyes of oak-leaf brown, the perfect line of her chin melting into her throat, the rushing, windlike movements—above all, the atmosphere of untamed, unchallenged vitality—are as notable as ever. Lady Constance combines the beauty of a Greek bas relief with the untrammeled spirit of an Eleonora Sears, and the result is worth looking at and worth knowing.

Idea From Ancient Arabia.

Whether one may say as much for her new style of dressing is a question. It looks well on Lady Constance, but that means both much and little. She doesn't hesitate to recommend it to other women. I do. But listen to her description of it:

"I COMBINE a dress worn by the Arabian women with certain medieval features," she explained to me, eagerly. "These sleeves are Florentine—see, they end just below the elbow, are very wide and are bordered with facings of a contrasting color. Then I have cut down the costume at the throat in a deep V and faced that like the sleeves. The rest of the dress is pure Arabian. It is all in one piece, with only two seams, one in either side, and it comes only to the angles. It is slit up about six inches in two places, to insure perfect freedom of movement. Around my waist I have a deep sash of the same material as the garment, the ends crossed over and hanging below the knees at the left side.

"The costume only takes about seven yards of material and is very easy to make, although not quite so uncomplicated as it looks. It is simple to put on. One slips one's head into it, that is all. There are no buttons, no hooks and eyes, no fastenings of any sort.

"I wear this dress in the house or on the street. In cold weather it is made of heavy material, and in very cold weather I wear a long cloak over it. I wear no gloves unless it is very cold, no veil and no hat. Around my head I wind a piece of filmy chiffon of a contrasting color with my gown and let one end float down over my left shoulder.

Evening Dresses Same; Never Wears Corsets.

"MY evening dresses are made in the same way, except for a bit of additional drapery. This consists of a piece of goods about four yards long which is wound about my hips, over my gown, in such a fashion that there is a long end to hook up over my left shoulder. Of course, I never wear any corsets.

"With the use of this additional drapery the costume could be worn becomingly by a stout woman. I think she would look much better in it than in a closely fitting dress. Isadora Duncan isn't stout, but she is quite a bit larger than I, and she is beautiful in a gown such as I have described."

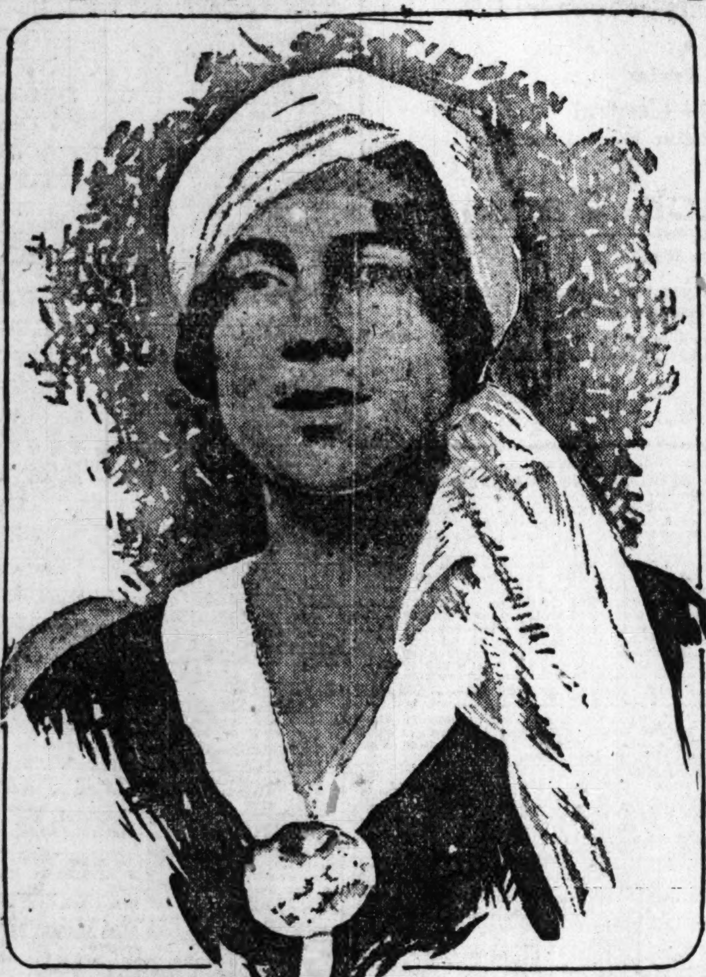
I advanced the obvious objection to the dress for those of us who don't travel in taxis or a private motor. "Don't you think it would make one extraordinarily conspicuous?" I urged.

"The styles worn at present are so eccentric that the costume I prefer wouldn't create any sensation at all if a few other sensible women adopted it. I think that women are getting more and more silly about their clothes. The extremes this season are worse than anything I have ever seen. All the clothes are fussed up so much! And the hobble skirt is dreadful!

"I like the fact that they are wearing more bright colors. Personally, I am very fond of the vivid shades, and I think there are some lovely ones in the dress stuffs this season. But so many colors ought not to be combined at once. Two are enough. I don't care for the eccentric cubist designs."

"Why no hats?" I asked. "It seems to me that the shapes this summer are rather artistic."

"But I don't believe in hats!" Lady Constance hurried on. "I have never worn one in my life when I could help it. I grew up without one. I spent most of my time in the forests and on the moors, riding and tramping, and I couldn't be bothered with hats! Now when I wear even the lightest straw it gives me the most frightful headaches. I thing millinery is awfully bad, both for the head and for the hair. And no woman should ever wear false hair. She is likely to destroy her own. Anyway, there's nothing so beautiful as one's own locks simply parted and done down low on the head, to show its shape. A fillet is ornament enough."



Lady CONSTANCE STEWART RICHARDSON

Lady Constance's own red-brown tresses are arranged in the way she describes. When she adjusts her chiffon head covering she pulls forward a few wavy locks to frame a triangle of white forehead.

"And now I've not spoken of one of the most important articles of a woman's attire—shoes," she continued. "Really, in the first place, my whole costume was arranged to go with what I wear on my feet." And she exhibited a pair of purple velvet sandals, buckled over purple silk stockings and exactly matching her dress. "Leather shoes are dreadful," she averred, "and as I wished to preserve my feet I wouldn't wear them. But sandals and a tailored suit are an anachronism. Therefore my costume!"

"If Ankles Are Pretty, Why Not Show Them?"

"I SEE you don't ban the slit skirt," I observed, glancing at hers, under which there was a white silk lining, however.

"Some slit skirts are very charming. I think it all depends on the sort of legs a woman has. If her ankles are pretty why shouldn't she show them? If not, she's surely very stupid to call attention to them.

COMES JUST TO THE ANKLE

"Why Shouldn't a Woman Show Her Ankles, if They're Pretty" Dancer Asks

"Modesty, like beauty, is in the eye of the beholder. Although, personally, I think the very tight-fitting dresses or suits are bad taste and vulgar. That is because they are not frank. Moreover, they are so uncomfortable that I do not see how any woman can wear them. I believe that one should wear clothes that are attractive to the eye, but that leave the body free. Then the wearer is not all the time thinking about her dress. One or two beautiful pieces are all right, but if one is loaded down one can't be at one's ease.

"When I ride I wear riding breeches and a long coat, because it is the free, suitable costume for sitting astride a horse. At other times I wear what I have told you. I don't have to bother about changing styles. I save money and time and thought, three things which most women waste unpardonably on their wardrobes. And they might put all three to so much better use!"

But Lady Constance's best argument for her costume is the way she herself looks in it. And that argument has only a very limited application.

Concerning her dancing on the professional stage, Lady Constance said:

"I AM doing these dances, first, to earn needed money, and secondly, to show people that classical dancing purifies the mind and tends to strengthen and perfect the body.

"The human body is the most marvelous work of God, and it is a sin to regard nakedness from a sex point of view. People have got to be re-educated and children taught to develop their bodies to the highest point of perfection in strength and beauty. False modesty is idiotic and wicked. Children should not be taught to cover all but face and hands.

"Corsets are brutal and stupid. They mar a body; they torture a mind. A loose flowing tunic showing the perfect lines of the form is charming, sanitary and decent. The stiff shirts and collars that men wear are ridiculous. They should go back to the early robes."

Woman Asks for a Job Which Others Shun

She Has Ambition to Be a Juvenile Judge

Miss Adelaide E. O'Brien, Practicing Lawyer, Thinks Women Should Control Delinquents.

By Jon E. Gorse

An earnest band of women is the Woman's Bar Association of St. Louis. It has long ago settled such minor matters as votes for women, considering the struggle in England much as churchmen here look upon the Christianization of Darkest Africa.

To be sure, they do not vote, but to again invoke a parallel, neither is Missouri definitely Christianized. They look upon the vote as they look upon the delay of justice through judicial error; the question has been presented in the lower tribunals and there remain innumerable appeals with the certainty of ultimate triumph. In the meantime who should worry? Certainly the calm, wide brows of the Woman's Bar Asosciation are unruffled.

Would Be Juvenile Judge.

They look forward beyond the ballot to the occupancy of high office. The first office upon which their covetous eyes rest is one which every occupant has fled from at the earliest day he might—Judge of the Juvenile Court.

The bench in this court is filled by the seven Judges of the Circuit Court in rotation. Not one of them has ever developed such a liking for the cure of juvenile offenders that he asked his brothers to let him remain as much as an additional day in the Juvenile Court. On the contrary, each occupant has reckoned his rotatory assignment there as a time of unprofitable weariness and a strain upon patience. The Criminal Court is bad enough in all conscience, say they, but deliver us quickly from the snare of the Juvenile Court.

Thus Miss Adelaide E. O'Brien, who initiated the movement among women lawyers of St. Louis may find, made to her hand, the effective weapon of sympathetic advocacy by all the eminent men lawyers who have sat on the Circuit bench since the children's court was established.

Miss O'Brien is an interesting figure in the woman's movement. She is a convent graduate and yet a lawyer. After study in St. Louis schools she went to St. Clara College at Sinsinawa, Wis., where she graduated, then through the Benton Law School into State license and practice—with an office in the International Life Building.

As chairman of the Woman's Bar Association Legislative Bureau (created on her motion) she brought in a resolution, which was adopted, committing her sisters to a campaign for a law permitting the election of a woman Judge of the Juvenile Court.

Miss O'Brien made this statement of her case:

"The Legislative Bureau of the Women's State Bar Association of Missouri, the aim of which is to secure legislation affecting women and children, is now engaged with the problem of the separation of the Juvenile Court from the Circuit Court, and the eligibility of women lawyers as judges thereof.

"According to section 4099 of the Revised Statutes of Missouri, the Juvenile Court is under the jurisdiction of the Circuit Court, the Judges of latter court, in turn, presiding over the Juvenile Court.

"The Women's State Bar Association favors the distinct separation of these two courts and the establishment of a Juvenile Court. First, not open, and, second, presided over by a woman Judge for women delinquents especially, if not for all youthful offenders. Why have women probation officers to watch over women delinquents out of court, and balk their efficiency by having a man as sole mentor within the court?

"We advocate the abolition of public trials, such as that witnessed lately in the trial of the youthful Barbara Arnold, and protective and corrective measures for all offenders of tender years. The public trial is vicious and immoral in its tendency, because it gives to the child a wholly false and erroneous impression of the status of offenders, in that it leads him to regard himself somewhat in the light of a hero, in place of seeing his true plight as a malefactor, and one who needs to correct himself. Thus is the specific reformatory purpose of juvenile work retarded.

"The social system of the world, since time immemorial, has recognized that the mother is the proper director of the child. The first requisite for any judge is to know his subject; and women since earliest ages have had experience with the subjects of the Juvenile Courts the children. The necessary legal training while important, is secondary.

"Under our laws a woman may be elected a Judge of the Supreme Court of Missouri, but she may not occupy any other judicial position. If the lawmakers see no reason to bar her from the Supreme bench, why is she barred from a court for which her natural qualifications are immeasurably superior to man's.

"We do not claim that women would judge juvenile offenders more leniently nor more severely; we are, however, sure they would judge them with more understanding."

Slip in the Law.

The odd little slip in the law which she says makes women eligible to the Supreme Court bench lies in the omission of the words "qualified voter" from the qualifications of a judge. All other state officers must be qualified voters until the Legislature removes that restriction.

"We have before us a year and a half of campaigning to create public sentiment," says Miss O'Brien, "then the Legislature will be in session and we can open our effective campaign for a law that will make it impossible to publically arraign a girl, as in the Barbara Arnold trial and destroy all the sweetness of her nature, her native modesty and womanly refinement by a man-conducted ordeal as barbarous as the trial by fire."

CHILDREN AND GRANDCHILDREN.

In Memoriam.

In loving remembrance of our dearly beloved father, Louis F. Peters, who departed this life four years ago, June 22, 1909.

Those four years have passed away and we still think of you each day, and let come no matter what, you will never be forgotten. Loving remembrance and sadly missed by DAUGHTERS.

In Memoriam.

In memory of Marguerite E. Buster, who died June 18, 1912.

The moon and stars are shining
Upon a lonely grave
Where sleeps our dear daughter,
Whom we loved but could not save.
We miss her coming footsteps,
We miss her everywhere,
Home is not what it used to be
Since our dear Marguerite is not there.

Sadly missed by

PARENTS AND SISTERS.

In Memoriam.

In loving memory of my dear husband and our dear father, Jacob B. Stussie, who departed this life one year ago.

One year has passed, my heart still sore,
As time goes on we miss him more,
His loving smile, his welcome face,
None can fill his vacant place.

Sadly missed by his WIFE AND CHILDREN.

In Memoriam.

In memory of our dear sister, Bertha Schwemmer, who departed this life six years ago today, June 22, 1906. Gone, but not forgotten. Sadly missed by her SISTERS.

In Memoriam.

In loving remembrance of my beloved son and our dear brother, Joseph Bramalser, who departed this life one year ago, June 22, 1912.

Like ivy on the withered oak,
When all things else decay,
Our love for you will keep green
And never fade away.

Sadly missed by his MOTHER, SISTERS, BROTHER AND ALL WHO KNEW HIM.

In Memoriam.

In memory of my dear wife and our dear mother, Clara Muckermann (nee Herold), who died [illegible] ago, June 25, 1912. Requiem mass at Holy Name Church, Grand and Emily street, Wednesday, June 25, at 8 a. m. Sadly missed by

C. L. MUCKERMANN AND CHILDREN.

In Memoriam.

In remembrance of my beloved son, William B. Vogel, who departed this life one year ago, June 22.

Though you're gone, you are not forgotten.
Loving hearts will often linger
Round the grave where you are laid.

Sadly missed by father, brothers and sisters.

FRED VOGEL.

Requiem Mass.

On Tuesday, June 24, 1913, at 7:45 a. m., there will be an anniversary high mass celebrated at St. Mark's Church for the repose of the soul of Mary Lee. Friends are respectfully invited. (c)

Lost and Found

Solid agate, 10c line; minimum 20c.

THAT LOST ARTICLE MAY NOT BE FOUND TODAY

Or tomorrow or next week. In fact, a month or more may elapse before it turns up. A little persistency may be necessary. Often the article remains unfound; often fear of prosecution or hope of a more satisfactory reward may delay the restoration. Then the belated awakening of the finder's conscience explains many delays. But persistency and Post-Dispatch wants will usually recover a lost article if an honest person finds it. The service of the Post-Dispatch Lost and Found Bureau is also enlisted in behalf of advertisers.

IMPORTANT—READ THIS—If you act immediately, you may get an opportunity for experiences such as come but once in a lifetime—the participation in historical events—the chance to see foreign countries without expense—to attend one of the world's greatest expositions. These are chances open to men who enter the United States Navy before July 1.

This winter the Atlantic Squadron will be sent on a big foreign cruise, visiting the most interesting ports of the world. Plenty of shore leave to see these ports will be given all the men. Such a trip would cost hundreds of dollars to anyone in civil life.

Also, some of the men who enlist now will be on the first ships to go through the Panama Canal—an event in history. They will go up the Pacific Coast and will visit the great San Francisco Exposition—without a cent of travel expense.

And all the time, these fortunate young men will be making good money and receiving one of the finest trainings—mental and physical—given by any institution in the world. They will be living healthy open-air lives with plenty of good food, good clothes, good place to sleep and good companions.

Some will be learning and working at special trades—becoming high wage earners on ship or on shore if they leave the navy. The navy employs over 50 different special trades.

If over 17, call at Navy Recruiting Station, 12th and Olive sts., St. Louis, Mo., and get full information about pay, hours, promotion, recreation, trades, training, chances to save up money, to see something of the United States and foreign countries, etc., etc. You'll enjoy meeting the officers and men there. And they'll be glad to talk with you—even if you don't join the navy. Make up your mind today—now—to call and get this information.

If you cannot call at the Recruiting Station, write for interesting booklet "The Making of a Man-o'-Warsman," which tells all about the life on the great U. S. battleships. Full of good, clear photographs. Written in simple, readable language. This is one of the best booklets ever written for American parents and sons.

Send a post card for a copy today. And send the addresses also of some other young men you'd like to have join the navy with you. We'll send books to them, too. If you put it off you may forget, and lose the chance to become one of the new men accepted befre July 1, so send for this valuable information without delay. Write to Bureau of Navigation, Box 200, Navy Dept., Washington, D. C. (c)

BUSINESS Wtd.—To buy small established mail-order business, on paying basis; no agents or other scheme need apply. Box W-11 Post-Dispatch.

BUSINESS—Yes, I can help you sell your business. Why? Because an honest endeavor is worth much and I can certainly promise this: My success justifies the assertion: "If anyone can sell your business I can;" I don't tell the buyer a pack of lies, but present my offers in a business-like and reasonable manner; I do not try to stuff them full of the impossible, but put up the real and probable advantages of the property under discussion. It is a well-known fact that I do not list dead ones; a business must be good and afford opportunities for betterment, if at fault, before I will submit it to my clients; I want buyers to become my friends; "I'm not the ordinary business seller." If you think I can be of benefit to you come to see me or phone Olive 4965.

MORE "WANT" GAINS

For last week the Post-Dispatch Auto Wants show a gain over the same week a year ago of 86.

The Post-Dispatch again, as usual, printed more of these wants than ALL of its competitors combined.

The figures were:

Post-Dispatch printed	464
Globe-Democrat, Republic, Times and Star combined	436

It's a verdict from the St. Louis advertiser whose judgment is expressed from a purely business standpoint—that of results.

Use Post-Dispatch Wants to buy or sell anything.

Phone your want.

Call Olive—6600—Central.

Your credit is good if you rent a phone; or your druggist will phone the ad.

Hillcrest
An Ideal Residence District

IT offers just the combination of advantages that people are seeking these days.

Fortunately situated next to Brentmoor, Forest Ridge and Skinker Heights brings it into a neighborhood of wealth and culture.

This establishes the class of people that will build there—it also assures increased property values, as it is right in the line of the westward trend.

Its splendid elevation—high above the surrounding country—provides an attractive and interesting view that is a big asset to this property; this also means air that is pure, clear and bracing, cool nights, no smoke or dust, restfulness, quiet; freedom from city distractions. It is only 40 minutes by trolley to Broadway—fare 5c; by motor, 20 minutes. Come out to-day and see how well suited to your needs Hillcrest is. Take University or Delmar car and transfer to Clayton car. Salesman will be on ground to show you everything.

This coupon when presented at Southampton office will entitle you to 10c cash or refund of car fare, only one to each individual arriving on car. Adults only. Good only during the month of June.

SOUTHAMPTON

If you come out you are likely to buy a lot or two yourself. If you do not buy you will at least tell your friends how beautiful the lots are and about the many pretty homes you will see.

Lots 30 to 50 feet by depth to alley at prices from $10 to $25 per foot

HOW TO GET THERE

"Southampton Cars" run direct from downtown to Southampton.
Take car anywhere along Pine St., from 4th to 21st. It then goes south to Chouteau Av., west on that street to Vandeventer, thence southwest to Southampton. Stay on car until it stops. Branch Office across street at the Southampton loop.

Those living in North or South St. Louis can get transfers from any east and west car to the Southampton line, either at Jefferson, Grand or Vandeventer, and at various other junctions.

You just cannot find a better place to live—THE BREEZE THAT COMES UP THE VALLEY makes it the ideal place for COMFORT ON A HOT DAY.

People in Southampton don't have to go to Parks or take trips to the country "to get a breath of pure, fresh air." No smoke, no smell, no grime, no dust in Southampton.

It will be easy for YOUR WIFE to keep the home tidy if you live in SOUTHAMPTON

YOU will rest better at night if you live in SOUTHAMPTON—be fit to do a better day's work the next day.

YOUR children will be healthy, happy, rosy cheeked, bright eyed—if you bring them up in SOUTHAMPTON

YOU can afford to own a big lot in SOUTHAMPTON—that means elbow room—garden spot, chickens, a cow, maybe; and all in 45 minutes' ride of 4th and Olive and 5-cent fare.

Man, quit MERELY EXISTING in stuffy, hot quarters—Wife, INSIST that the CHILDREN DESERVE better than to be made to suffer in hot yards, befouled with the odor of the streets.

You Can Afford It—
Read This Liberal Proposition—

Come out today and pick out a lot—your choice of 500 in the unimproved district, $10 per foot, payable $10 CASH AND $10 PER MONTH. You can buy 30, 60 or 90 feet or more on these terms.

Lots in improved section with everything as good as you would get in Portland or Westmoreland, $17 to $25 per foot $10 cash, balance easy payments. EQUALLY AS GOOD AS THE $40 PER FOOT ELSEWHERE IN THE CITY. Office S. E. Cor. Devonshire and Macklind Avenue. Open until sundown—come out, it's a pleasant ride.

Secretary of Agriculture D. F. HOUSTON, Says:

Most judges of the St. Louis climate are visitors who inhabit the valley of brick and mortar which composes the downtown district. I have had very little discomfort from the heat in St. Louis. I wish I could hope to be as little troubled by the heat in Washington this summer as I was when I lived on the hill over by the University.

FARMS FOR SALE

GOVERNOR

Norman J. Colman

Spent the last 30 years of his life in building up and improving, what he claimed to be the "best stock farm" in the entire State of Missouri.

212 acres of splendid, rich, fertile ground, rolling, but not broken; 12 miles from St. Louis, on the Olive st. and Mill Creek rds., near Creve Coeur Lake, and overlooking the Missouri River and its famous bottom lands for miles. Good house and all necessary outbuildings; family orchard of miscellaneous fruit, and plenty of fine water. This is a splendid farm, situated in the richest and most picturesque part of the county, on fine roads, and with good transportation. The Creve Coeur branch of the Missouri Pacific Railroad runs through the place, and Colman Station is only a short distance from the residence.

This must be sold; parties looking for a bargain should waste no time in seeing this. For price, terms and other information, see

HOTEL BUILDING—For sale or trade. I own a first-class hotel building, also has banking rooms, real estate office and telephone office in the building. The building is constructed of good cement blocks and finished with brick. There are 22 bedrooms, large office, dining room, about 40 feet square; kitchen, about 20x30 feet; pantry room about 12x24 feet; basement about 30x80 feet; has parlor, baggage room, 2 long halls upstairs, 2 rooms for the bank, 3 rooms for the real estate office, and 1 room for the telephone office; large porch in front, and a 12-foot concrete sidewalk; 2 bathrooms, with toilets upstairs, and toilet room downstairs. The hotel is furnished with first-class stuff, which is almost new. All rooms are plastered, has city water and an extra large cistern, large windows; the entire building is lighted throughout with electricity and is up-to-date and modern in every respect. It was built in 1910 and covers 4 lots on a business corner. The building is insured for $12,000, and the furniture for $1500. I have just leased the hotel part for $75 per month for 1 year with the privilege of 2 more years. The bank has a lease for about 3 years yet, and pays $30 per month for 2 rooms and vault; the real estate office pays $20 per month, and the telephone office pays $8 per month. So you see the whole building rents for $133 per month. This hotel is located in South Dakota, in a good railroad town, surrounded by a fine farming country. Only one hotel in town; a small frame building. Only 2 short blocks from depot. Will send photograph of building on application. I have good title. Price $26,000. There is a loan of $6000 on the building (not including furniture), that can run for 6 years, or be paid off any time. I will sell and take one-fourth cash with good terms on balance, or will trade for something worth the money. My property will bear inspection. Ad. Box E-197, Post-Dispatch, St. Louis, Mo. (c)

GERMANY'S CROWN PRINCE STIRS IRE OF LITERARY MEN

Objects to Portrayal, in Breslau Centenary Play, of Ancestor as Weak Monarch.

PUBLIC MEETING CALLED

Writers to Denounce 'Lickspittle Servility' as the Nation's Chief Failing.

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch and New York World.
Copyright, 1913, by Press Pub. Co. (New York World.)

BERLIN, June 21.—The trouble over Gerhardt Hauptmann's pageant play, which was to be produced at Breslau's centenary of the commencement of the fight against Napoleon, had its origin in Hohenzollern sensitiveness to any criticism of the family ancestry.

The great national movement began in Breslau. Hauptmann fully recognized this and his historic sense forbade him to portray King Frederick William III as anything except the weak, vascillating monarch history has shown him to be.

Apparently Hauptmann's sharp distinction between Napoleon, who always knew what he wanted and had the courage of his convictions, and King Frederick, who had to be driven into action by his ministers and by pressure from Russia, displeased the patriots and offended the Crown Prince, hence his interference.

Offended by Passage.

Breslau has been informed that the Prince will lay down his protectorate of the Breslau exhibition unless the pageant is discontinued. Max Reinhardt, who staged the production, says he probably will produce it in Berlin.

In a message to the press, Hauptmann says he will take public action to redeem his character. If he does so there may be interesting revelations concerning the intrigues around the Crown Prince.

The passage in the pageant play at which the Crown Prince took chief offense is one in which Napoleon is made to describe Frederick as a depositor of guano. This activity of the Crown Prince has rallied all the writers to the side of Hauptmann.

Ernst Hardt, whose "Tantris der Narr" (Tantris the Fool) is among the most successful of modern German plays, has published an address to the public, in which he says in part:

"I wish to express publicly the unspeakable shame and deep disgust with which the attack on Hauptmann fills me. The very same characteristics, defeated a century ago in order to save Germany, have in 1913 triumphed (to Germany's disgrace) over true manliness as expressed in Hauptmann's pageant play. These protests against the pageant are in reality an expression of Germany's bad conscience."

Hard Knocks for Prince.

Meetings of protest, at which the Crown Prince is sure to get some hard knocks, are to be held throughout Germany. The Central Association for the Protection of German Playwrights has called a public meeting for Monday, at which the most prominent German writers will denounce, as it is expressed, the "Pharisaical lackeydom, the lickspittle servility and illy-delivered obsequience to dignitaries," which the association declares is Germany's chief failing today.

Although Hauptmann won the Nobel prize for literature, he has lost popularity recently, owing to the mysticism of his later plays; but the reputation he had already won should have been sufficient, it is thought, to protect him from purely party intrigue. Anyway, the Crown Prince and his friends appear to have been again deluded, and they certainly are without popular support.

The Socialist press thinks such things must happen when a country allows itself to be fed with sweetmeats, royal meetings, parades and processions, and when the people permit the centenary festival of Germany's freedom from the Napoleonic yoke to be the mere glorification of the Hohenzollerns.

Another highly unpopular feature of the jubilee was the high order conferred upon the Emperor's bailiff at Cadinen, who was responsible for the Emperor's unjustified attack upon his tenant, Sohst. However, some distinctions are popular as well, such as the order bestowed upon Louis Adlon.

TRANSFER ON TRANSFER TO WALNUT PARK NOW

United Railways Company Concedes Point Fought for By Suburbanites.

Walnut Park residents will hereafter get a transfer on a transfer when they desire, by such an arrangement, to use the Union, Bellefontaine and some other connecting line. This new arrangement was put into effect yesterday by the United Railways Co. At the same time, a "tripper" car was placed in service on the Walnut Park extension.

Charles A. Green of Walnut Park, some time ago, refused to pay fare on the Union line unless he could get a transfer entitling him to a second transfer. He sent notice of this determination of his to President McCulloch of the company, and conductors, apparently by orders, let him ride without taking his fare or giving him the transfer.

Irish Alliance Plans Picnic.

The Irish National Alliance will today celebrate the commemoration of Wolfe Tone with a picnic and games in Hibernian Park, at Normandy. Besides the athletic events, the management has arranged contests for the Gaelic hornpipe and Irish jig stepping. There will also be a contest in which round dancers will compete. The sports will be under the direction of John J. O'Connor, chairman; Florence J. Curran, D. J. Enright, P. J. Murphy, William J. McEniry and John Clancy.

WOMEN TO TRY A WOMAN

California Court Holds Gentler Jurors Are Eligible.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 21.—A woman defendant can and ought to have women on the jury that tries her, in the opinion of Presiding Judge Frank Dunne of the Superior Court. This ruling, the first of the kind made in the State, was handed down today in the case of Mrs. Bertha Williams, charged with extortion by another woman.

The case will come to trial June 30 and the Court ordered that the names of 30 women be placed in the jury box along with the regular venire of men.

KENTUCKY GIRL MAY BE FIRST WOMAN IN TURKISH EMPIRE.

W. Morgan Shuster Slated to Reorganize Ottoman Finances as Result of His Persian Experiences.

A KIMONA party was the open sesame which admitted a pretty Kentucky girl into a career of romance and adventure in the Philippines and the Orient, as a climax to which she is expected to become a leading figure in the foreign society of exotic Constantinople.

While treasurer-general of Persia's finances, W. Morgan Shuster one day casually dropped a remark that a certain baker in Teheran was the head and front of bread riots which were embarrassing the Government, and added that he ought to be "gotten rid of." The next morning, as he relates in his book, he was horrified at being informed that the offending baker had been assassinated, "according to Your Excellency's wishes."

The wife who was at Shuster's side in a country were an incident so alien to America as this could occur was formerly Miss Pearl Trigg of the little town of Glasgow, Ky. It is expected that her husband will be chosen as Turkey's Commissioner of Finance for the purpose of reorganizing the country's treasury, now enormously involved by the Balkan War debt.

Mrs. Shuster is the daughter of Maj. H. C. Trigg, a banker and fox hunter. She was born and reared in Glasgow, and the most thrilling adventure of her girlhood was that of leaving her home to attend school at Potter College in Bowling Green.

In 1903 Miss Trigg was a handsome young woman whose most exciting experiences were the parties which she attended in Glasgow. At the same time Shuster, on the other side of the world in the Philippines, was beginning to make a mark in the Government service. Neither had ever heard of the other, but Cupid was about ready to put a girdle round the earth.

Three of Miss Trigg's Bowling Green friends were members of a party that went around the world in that year. They were a Mrs. Robinson, her sister, Miss Lottie Whitehead, and Miss Elizabeth Wood. In the Philippines they met Shuster, who exerted himself to entertain the girls from Kentucky.

According to the ethics of fiction, he should have fallen in love with one of the two single tourists. But Cupid remained aloof, and on the party's departure his only souvenir was an invitation to pay a visit in Bowling Green. They promised him that they would give a kimona party for him and permit him to be the escort of "the prettiest girl in Kentucky."

In the late summer of 1903, coming home on a furlough, Shuster stopped in Japan to buy several kimonas. On his way from San Francisco to Washington he made a detour to Bowling Green.

The kimona party is still remembered in central Kentucky, as is the fact that one of the most beautiful girls there was Miss Pearl Trigg, with her tall and slender figure, perfect features and graceful carriage. Her escort was the fateful W. Morgan Shuster.

His detour to attend a party lengthened itself into a visit to win a wife. So eloquently did he plead that when he sailed for the Philippines in May, 1904, Miss Trigg had been metamorphosed into Mrs. Shuster.

They lived for six years in Manila, and there their two daughters were born—Carolina and Litie, now 8 and 6 years old. Shuster was in the meantime Collector of Customs and Commissioner for the Philippines.

In 1910 they were settled in Washington, Shuster taking up the practice of law. Because of his brilliant record in the Philippines the Persian Government chose him for the difficult task of reorganizing her finances, completely in ruin because of graft both by her own citizens and by the corsair merchants of Russia and England.

For eight months, in Teheran, the girl from little Kentucky village exercised all the tact a diplomat's wife. The Russian and British governments at once distinguished the American financier by recognizing him as the chief barrier to their enterprises at the expense of Persia. He relates that numerous plots to assassinate him were detected and foiled.

In behalf of the constitutional party which had employed him, he was the Government's chief adviser in putting down a civil war instigated by Russia. Finally England sent warships and Russia poured 50,000 Cossacks into Persia for the sole purpose, Shuster declares, of ousting him so that the plunderbund might raid the treasury without obstacle.

Mrs. Shuster, having held her own with the wives of shrewd European diplomats, accompanied her husband on his thrilling automobile ride from Teheran to the Russian frontier, and thence by train through a country at nearly every station of which crowds gathered to gaze at and menace the "faranghi," or foreigner, who had dared command the Russian Bear to remove his paw from the honey-hives of Persia.

On his return to the United States, Shuster became connected with an Eastern banking house. But he was not foredestined to repose. His was the first name spoken when the Powers commissioned France, because of its great investments in Turkish securities, to put Turkey's financial affairs in order and enable it to pay its vast war debt.

If the Shusters go to Constantinople, his position would make him one of the most important and powerful men in the Turkish Empire, not only in finance, but in politics. In Persia Shuster speedily found that his efforts to protect and systematize the treasury instantly dragged him into the thick of every political intrigue.

Persian functionaries, both of diplomacy and the army, first attempted to browbeat him when he balked their attempted burglaries upon the public funds, then cringed to him, and then rebelled against the government which protected him.

Although holding no official commission from the American Department of State, he was on the footing of a diplomat. Important conclusions hung on the problem as to whether he would call first on the British Minister to Teheran or whether the British Minister would take the initiative by calling upon the American financier.

A place of similar altitude would await him in Turkey, and as the intrigues of European diplomats have their most fertile field in social life, the role of Mrs. Shuster would be, as it was in Persia, one requiring tact and dignity.

Social life may seem an impossible phrase in speaking of Turky, where women are secluded from public affairs. But it is to be remembered that of the million inhabitants of Constantinople one-tenth are foreigners from every part of Europe, and that they maintain a brilliant social system of their own, in which her husband's influence would make her a leading personage.

MYSTERY OF A MILLION DOLLAR WILL.

A TYPEWRITER CLEW

A SIMILAR oversight to that which, it is alleged, throws suspicion on the so-called Clarendon will, disposing of the estate of the late Mrs. Caroline Cloth of Memphis, vitiated a will recently in Oklahoma.

Josephus Morris of Newkirk left at his death a considerable estate. It was claimed by two parties of heirs, each of which produced a typewritten will. One was dated 1907 and the other 1910.

Albert S. Osborn of New York, who testified as an expert in the famous Patrick-Rice will case, swore in the County Court of Kay County that the will purporting to have been made in 1907 was written on a typewriter that was not manufactured until three years later.

On his testimony the 1907 will was thrown out and the estate awarded to the heirs named in the 1910 will. It developed, according to Osborn, that both wills were written on the same typewriter, which was first put on the market in 1910.

Invisible Watermark, Say Makers of Paper on Which Testament Is Written, Was Not Adopted Till Two Years After Date of the Instrument Which Disposes of Estate of Eccentric Memphis Woman

THE WATERMARKS

By M. K. DEALE,
Manager St. Louis Office of the Remington Typewriter Co.

THE "W. S. & B. Regent Linen, Made in U. S. A.," was first put on the market by Wyckoff, Seamans & Benedict in 1900. This water trade mark is stamped in every sheet of paper, and is only perceptible when the paper is held up to the light, or examined through a strong magnifying glass. There has been no paper manufactured since that time by any other company that has a similar water mark.

Prior to 1900 the Wyckoff, Seamans & Benedict Co., which is now a part of the Remington Typewriter Co., Incorporated, manufactured a paper which bore the letters "W. S. & B." for a water trade mark. This mark was changed in 1900 to "W. S. & B., Regent Linen, Made in U. S. A.," on account of the large shipments abroad of the paper, as the company desired to advertise the product in other countries.

The "W. S. & B., Regent Linen, Made in U. S. A." brand of paper has been advertised especially for use in public documents, or any other purpose where it is necessary to handle the paper frequently, because of its toughness and durability. Therefore it has been used extensively for wills and public records both by Government officials and private individuals.

It would have been a physical impossibility for Mrs. Cloth to have written her will on "W. S. & B., Regent Linen, Made in U. S. A." paper in 1898, for the simple reason that this brand of paper was not in existence at that time.

BECAUSE a mush of rags beaten to a pulp was rolled thinner in one spot than in another while passing through the cylinders of a paper factory in New York, a contest involving the alleged forgery of a will has arisen over a $1,000,000 estate in Memphis. The fortune which a merchant founded by a lifetime of shrewdness and toil and which his widow more than quadrupled by 30 years of solitary, miserly pinching and hoarding, literally depends as to its disposition upon the watermark of a sheet of paper.

In the Tennessee city Herman Cloth succeeded, after year upon year of the intense industry which in business does not disdain to figure profits by fractions of a cent, in amassing $200,000. After his death his wife, Mrs. Caroline Cloth, secluded herself like a hermit in her $60,000 mansion on South Front street, and living rigidly by her rule never spent more than $1 a day for her personal maintenance, let her whole being be swallowed up in a passion for saving money. When she died last summer it was estimated that she had increased the estate left by her husband fivefold.

What would the laborious merchant and the avaricious widow have thought could they have known that the fate of their fortune, upbuilt by such impassioned devotion to wealth, would one day hinge upon a mark, scarcely visible to the eye, in a scrap of paper? They would no doubt have felt it an overwhelming and terrible stroke of chance which made so vast a fact depend upon so small an accident.

The Cloths had no children, and when the widow died and the authorities were astounded at finding stacks of high-grade bonds and stocks lying in the clothes presses of the old woman hermit's palatial retreat, it was at first thought that the fortune would escheat to the State.

But in searching about the house, they found a holographic will—that is, a testament written entirely in the devisor's own hand. It appointed Miles S. Buckingham of Memphis as executor, set aside $400,000 for the erection of a tuberculosis hospital in Memphis and bestowed the remainder of the estate upon heirs who were named as Dr. John M. Shaller of Denver and his sister Mary, and a number of cousins in Germany.

But just as this will was about to be admitted to probate there appeared upon the scene a stranger—F. Bruce Garrett of Clarendon, Ark. He produced what appeared to be a later will of Mrs. Cloth and told a romantic story of how it came into his possession.

He related that he was a close friend of George Frick, a resident of Arkansas and a brother of Mrs. Cloth. When Frick died in May, 1898, she attended the funeral and became acquainted with the Garretts. F. Bruce Garrett, then a youth of 19, devoted himself to the lonely old recluse with such success that she offered to adopt him as her son. Because of his parents' objections, he stated, he refused.

When Garrett learned that Mrs. Cloth was dead and that it was believed she had made no will, he remembered that during her visit he had heard mention of her making a testament while in Arkansas. He spoke to his father's attorney, H. A. Parker, and was informed, according to Garrett, that Parker himself had drawn up a will and left it in the care of the elder Garrett, who afterwards died.

The Garrett farm had been sold to Robert J. Torrey, and many of the family effects had been included in the purchase. Garrett related that he made three visits to Torrey's home to search for the will, and on the third visit unearthed it from an old trunk, once the property of the senior Garrett. Torrey himself appeared as one witness to the document. The other was R. M. West of Clarendon, who had since died.

The "Clarendon will," as it came to be called, rescinded the bequest for the erection of the tuberculosis hospital and named Bruce Garrett as one of the principal heirs. He was to get one-fourth of the estate. Another fourth was to go to Buckingham and the remaining half to the Shallers and the German cousins. The date of the new will was July 18, 1898.

In resentment at the appearance of a stranger as an heir upon almost equal terms with themselves, the Shallers filed a contest in the Probate Court against the Clarendon will. But in August the contest was formally withdrawn, the claimants to the estate agreeing that it was Mrs. Cloth's genuine and final will. Under this testament the share of the Shallers was larger than it would have been according to the holographic will, in which Buckingham was not named as an heir but only as executor.

The treasure house of mystery on South Front street, Memphis, Tenn.

The estate would probably have been distributed without further confusion had not opposition arisen from the Second Presbyterian Church of Memphis, to which the holographic will made a substantial bequest. The officers of the church raised a question as to the genuineness of Garrett's will and caused an investigation to begin which soon culminated in developments.

It was Buckingham himself who, his curiosity aroused by the church's protest, discovered the strange and almost invisible clew on which is based the contest as to the authenticity of the Clarendon will. The testament was written on a sheet of thin but tough white paper. Who would have supposed that this scrap of paper, one of many millions of such sheets, would bear within itself its history, the date of its manufacture, and evidence, as is charged, of a purpose to plunder a $1,000,000 estate through a conspiracy of forgery?

While subjecting the paper to a minute examination, Buckingham noticed that in some places the light shone through it more brightly than in others, as if the paper were thinner in some spots than in others. By holding the paper to a strong light and by using a microscope he found that the light patches resolved themselves into letters. They formed the following watermark:

"W. S. & B. Regent Linen, Made in U. S. A."

The possible significance of this dim inscription did not at first dawn upon the executor. But soon the clever idea occurred to him that manufacturing firms change their watermarks for various causes on occasion, and that by this fact he might be able to learn at what date the paper on which the Clarendon will was written was produced.

Memphis.

Mrs. Caroline Cloth, who devoted 30 years of solitude to hoarding a fortune.

A telegram to the Remington Typewriter Co. of New York, which was formerly Wycoff, Seamans & Benedict—the "W. S. & B." of the watermark—elicited information so startling that the disposition of the Cloth estate was instantly thrown into controversy, with evidence at hand which, if uncontroverted, might prove that the Clarendon will was a forgery, exposed by one of the tiny errors of prudence which often betray the most carefully planned crimes.

The information which came from the Remington company was that their paper bearing the trademark "W. S. & B. Regent Linen, Made in U. S. A.," was not put on the market until 1900, two years after the date of the Clarendon will.

The conclusion was that by no possibility could a document executed in 1898 have been written on paper which did not come into existence until 1900.

The additional assertion was made that no paper manufactured either prior to or after 1900 by any other firm bore a watermark in any way similar to that of the Remington Co.

Before 1900, the firm continued, it used various watermarks, sometimes merely "W. S. & B.," and sometimes "Regent Linen W. S. & B." The distinctive words, "Made in U. S. A.," were added in 1900 because of the company's large shipments abroad and its desire to advertise the fact that their product was made in the United States.

The first effect of these disclosures was that J. M. West, a Clarendon dentist, made affidavit withdrawing his sworn statement that one of the signatures attached to the Garrett will was that of his father, the late R. M. West. "While accusing no person," he added the assertion that in his presence an attorney one day wrote the elder West's signature so skillfully that the son would, unless he had seen the attorney write it, have sworn that the signature was the authentic one of his father.

On the other hand, the other alleged witness, the only surviving one, Robert J. Torrey, on whose farm the Clarendon will was found, insists that his signature to the document is genuine. Garrett professes to have acted in good faith in the production of the will, which he never saw and only heard of by rumor until after Mrs. Cloth's death.

The heirs under the holographic will reinstated their contest against the Garrett will, and sent a representative to New York to obtain an affidavit from experts of the Remington Co. substantiating the evidence given in their telegram. It was corroborated in detail in an interview of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine with M. K. Deale, manager of the St. Louis office of the Remington Typewriter Co. It is predicted that the courts will be asked to review every phase of the Cloth will contest.

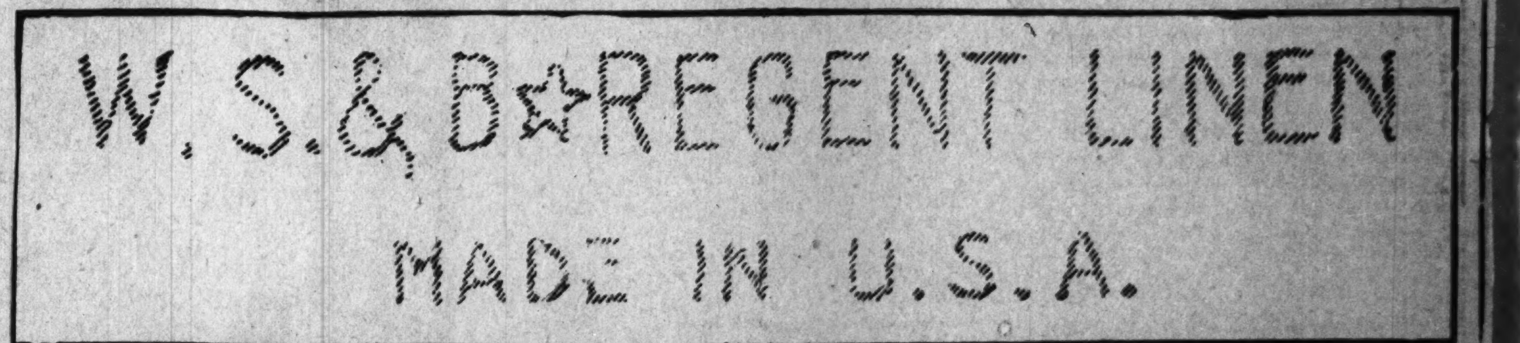
These developments are a dramatic climax to Mrs. Cloth's own eccentric life, which made her a mystery in Memphis. After her husband's death more than 30 years ago she became that strange prodigy, a hermit and miser in a palace. Many of her neighbors regarded her as insane, and it was believed she encouraged this impression to gain greater security for her hoarded wealth.

During three decades the handsome house stood dark and forbidding, its window blinds closely drawn and its doors locked. No visitors were admitted. A door was never opened save when an old woman servant, as mysterious as her mistress, stole forth stealthily at daybreak to go to the market, or when Mrs. Cloth, who seemed to have but one interest in life beyond saving money, sallied out furtively to attend a Confederate Reunion—this being her only diversion.

She died on June 9, 1912. The residence was found to be a veritable treasure house. Among the property discovered was $175,000 of bonds of the United Railways of St. Louis and $120,000 of stock in the State National Bank of Memphis. Although her real estate was listed in the tax assessments at only $60,000, she was found to have titles to property in Memphis valued at many times this sum.

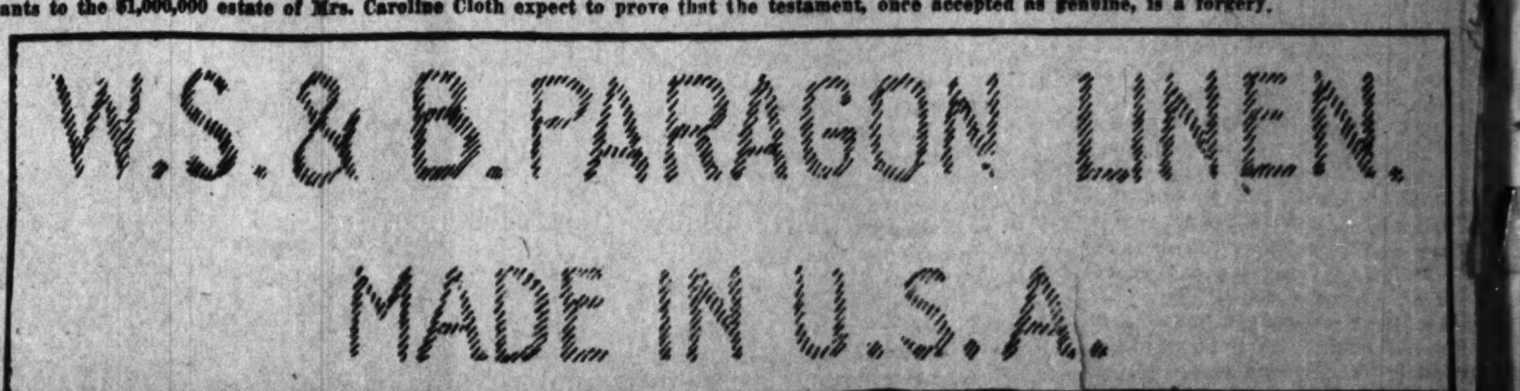
Two months after her death the "house of mystery," which had hidden so many years behind a towering wall and shrubbery so dense that the sun seemed scarcely able to penetrate it, was for the first time thrown open to the public at an auction sale of her effects. Popular curiosity attracted a great crowd. The street was blocked with automobiles and carriages, and the gloomy halls and rooms of the mansion were filled with a wondering throng.

Some of the closets, when forced open, disclosed a characteristic secret. In them were odds and ends like bolts of cloth, kegs of nails and boxes of pencils which had come into the possession of the woman miser and from which she had not been able to bring herself to part. They were sold for a song.



W. S. & B ☆ REGENT LINEN
MADE IN U.S.A.

This watermark, occurring in the paper on which the "Clarendon" will was written, is declared by the manufacturer to have been nonexistent in 1898, the purported date of the will, and to have been used for the first time not until two years later, in 1900. Thereby the claimants to the $1,000,000 estate of Mrs. Caroline Cloth expect to prove that the testament, once accepted as genuine, is a forgery.



W.S. & B. PARAGON LINEN.
MADE IN U.S.A.

This watermark of the same firm was also not used until after 1900, and shows how, through the frequent changes made in stationery trademarks, the approximate date of the manufacture of a sheet of paper may be determined. The phrase, "Made in U. S. A.," if occurring in any sheet of Remington paper, proves that it was made during or after the year 1900.

Experimenting to Save Birds.

EVERYONE interested in bird life will be interested to hear of the experiment that is about to be tried at two English lighthouses—St. Catherine's, off the Isle of Wight, and the Caskets, in the Channel, says The Tableto. It is well known that lighthouses cause great destruction among migrating birds.

Under certain conditions of weather they become "veritable shambles." Mr. Eagle Clarke, in his "Studies of Bird Migration," says: "Those who have not witnessed a 'bird-night' at a light station cannot form any conception of the appalling loss of life that takes place. I have stood in the galley of the Eddystone Lighthouse and watched the migrants striking the great lantern and falling into the surf beneath for ten and a half hours without a break. I have stood on the deck of the Kentish Knock Lightship from dusk to dawn, and seen birds falling thickly the whole time, to perish miserably, many of them being merely stunned, in the calmest of seas.

"What must the combined slaughter have been at these and neighboring stations, or perhaps at many British stations, for the conditions and the movements are often widespread? What for a whole season? Hundreds and thousands; I am convinced of this." These statements are fully borne out by other observers. Mr. Ogilvie Grant, in his well-known book on game birds, tells us that as many as 1800 woodcocks were killed in four nights at one lighthouse on the French coast.

It was until recently supposed that this pitiful waste of bird life was in the circumstances inevitable. Mr. Montagu Sharpe, in a letter to the Times, gives an interesting account of experiments carried out by the distinguished Dutch naturalist, Prof. Jac. P. Thijsse, at the great Terschelling Lighthouse on the Frisian Islands, which quite upsets this view.

Questioning the accepted theory that the destruction was caused altogether by the birds dashing themselves straightaway against the lantern, he held, on the other hand, that, attracted by the brilliant light, they circle about it for hours together until, exhausted, they fall and perish.

He therefore devised a series of resting-places of ladders and perches, to be placed around the platform and on the roof of the lantern without interfering with its illuminating powers. On these it is found that hundreds and thousands of tired birds crowd and cluster, and as soon as dawn breaks they rise up and pursue their journey.

It is claimed that while thousands formerly perished in a night at the Terschelling Lighthouse (the Brandaris), not more than a hundred birds are now killed there in a season. With the approval of the Trinity Board, the apparatus is to be tried experimentally in English waters.

"MOTHER" JONES COURTMARTIALLED BRINGS WEST VIRGINIA TO BAR OF U.S. SENATE

Woman Strike Leader, Tried by Drum-Head Court on Charges of Inciting Murder and Stealing Machine Gun, and Imprisoned Three Months in Military Bullpen, Says She Hates Violence, Deplores Strife Between Labor and Capital, Decries Socialism and Anarchy and Forsees Era of Industrial Peace

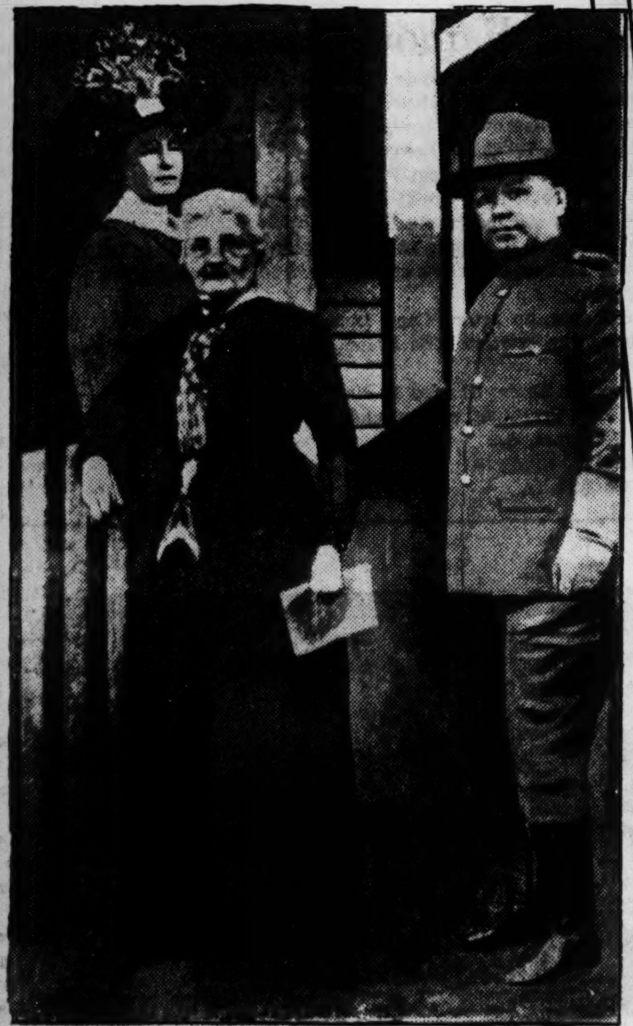
"'Mother' Jones' manner seems that of the mildest of grandmothers."



Woman strike leader under military arrest, about to be tried in drum-head court on the charges of inciting murder and stealing a machine gun.

DREADED by mine operators from Colorado to the Atlantic as a termagant of the Red Flag, and beloved as a guardian angel by workingmen throughout the country—what manner of person is the redoubtable "Mother" Jones? At the Biblical age limit of three score and ten years, she has just undergone the unique feminine distinction of being tried in a drumhead court and serving three months in a military bullpen, but turned these hardships to triumphs by utilizing them as evidence for arraigning West Virginia at the bar of the United States Senate.

Her very celebrity seems to have enveloped her personality as in a blazing garment of mystery. Her Christian name itself has long since been forgotten, having been eclipsed by the hallowed and endearing nickname of "Mother."

To her opponents she has appeared as a rabid virago of anarchy, a daughter of the Maenads of the French Revolution. To her allies she has appeared as a priestess of labor, a saint of the new social religion.

To both she has had the mysterious seeming of a twentieth century "dea ex machina," descending suddenly into the most violent scenes of civil strife, dealing deadly blows like a gray-haired Pallas Athene, and then vanishing as suddenly from public ken.

Her recent emergence into national notoriety as one of the leaders of the West Virginia coal strike, her trial by courtmartial—an almost unprecedented experience for a woman—her imprisonment behind the bayonets of the State militia and her appearance as a witness before an investigating committee of the Senate, so focused curiosity upon her that interviewers in New York sought to penetrate to the real woman behind her two-charactered renown as a "Doctoress Jekyll and Mrs. Hyde." What they discovered will startle both her enemies and her friends.

Those upon whose vision she looms as a portentous vixen armed with the crimson banner of havoc and bloodshed will perhaps gasp on being assured that her manner is that of the mildest of elderly ladies; that her speech is the scrupulously weighed language of a calm and judicial temperament; and that she holds a philosophy of life spacious enough to embrace both capitalist and laborer in equal sympathy or equal condemnation.

Those who expected to discover a fierce and hardy Amazon in the famous strike leader found a handsome, smiling, hospitable gentlewoman who might have been a kindly patroness at a charity ball. Her white hair was carefully dressed, her gown was of smart black silk, and she wore silk stockings and natty pumps. During the interview she indulged occasionally in the feminine luxury of dusting her nose daintily with a powder puff.

On the other hand, it is probable that not a few of the thorough-going spirits among her followers, those who believe in an "irrepressible conflict" between capital and labor as firmly as Seward did between freedom and slavery, will experience mixed emotions at finding her quoted as expressing, in the course of formal interviews lasting 10 hours, the following opinions:

I am neither Socialist nor Anarchist; I decry both and decry their causes.

Violence will never cure our labor troubles.

Employers in the condition of medievalism which exists in West Virginia are as unhappy as their men are.

The first step towards industrial peace must come from capital. It has more advantages. It must lead.

The capitalist who robs a bank is no worse than the labor agitator who blows up a mill.

I hate violence; I favor drama. We must wake the sleepers somehow.

I do not believe in shotguns for workers any more than I believe in injunctions for employers.

Fighting is a waste.

I am not a suffragist. In no sense am I in sympathy with woman's suffrage.

The capitalist and the striker—both men are all right, only they are sick; they need a remedy.

I'd rather wave a white flag with that lettered on it than to wave red flags.

Yet the white-haired woman who uttered these equable, quite respectable sentiments was a few weeks ago officially charged in a warrant issued by a West Virginia court with being an accessory before the fact to several murders; with inciting to murder; with stealing a machine gun from the Paint Creek Collieries Co.

It happened at the time that she was in Charleston, 20 miles away from the strike district in which martial law had been declared. Had she been within the military precinct her arrest could have been accomplished summarily.

With several others, including the editor of a Socialist newspaper in Charleston, she was thrown into the bullpen, or military prison, to await trial. This did not prove to be an action in the civil courts. It was a courtmartial, a drum-head inquisition.

Prior to the trial attorneys for the miners obtained a decision from a Circuit Court restraining the drum-head tribunal, but the decision was overruled by the Supreme Court of the State. The prisoners' counsel also brought habeas corpus proceedings before the Supreme Court of Appeals, but the writs were refused by the bench, Justice Robinson alone dissenting in a scorching opinion.

So, in a court composed of uniformed soldiers and upheld by the bayonets of the militia, "Mother" Jones was convicted of various crimes and misdemeanors, along with 45 or 50 miners. She had languished in the bullpen three months less five days when Gov. Hatfield, bowing to public criticism, issued a pardon to all the prisoners sentenced by the military court.

"I didn't suffer in the bullpen," said the dauntless old woman. "I was never really uncomfortable. But who gained anything?"

Not so magnanimous was Gov. Hatfield's attitude. "I do not intend to permit 'Mother' Jones or any other person," he said in a public statement, "to come into West Virginia and make inflammatory speeches that have a tendency to produce riot and bloodshed. There was evidence in abundance to prove that speeches made by her and her workers did bring about a riotous state which resulted in murder and the destruction of property."

But her inning had now come. Repeatedly published charges that the mine operators had reduced their employes to a state of peonage; that they were systematically plundered of their poor wages by "company stores," nicknamed "Pluck Me's," by the miners; and that they were held in forcible subjection by armed guards recruited from a detective agency, led Senator Kern of Indiana to introduce a resolution for an investigation to ascertain whether a Federal inquiry into conditions in West Virginia should be authorized.

"Mother" Jones was probably the most important witness in the preliminary inquiry. Some of the Senators who knew her only by reputation were astounded when she stood before them in person—rosy-cheeked and smiling, her black silk dress relieved at the throat and wrists by white lace, and a modish bonnet on her white hair. Jet beads adorned her neck and her comb was set off by a gold band.

Her attitude was more surprising than her physical appearance. Her point of view was almost detached, calmly judicial, scholarly, almost academic. She gave way to no outbursts of emotion. She merely permitted herself to criticise some of the West Virginia capitalists in mild terms, condemned the West Virginia industrial system as a definite infamy, and told sad stories of the sufferings of its women and children victims.

But even as she told of the fighting and her willingness to fight to extreme circumstances, she declared fighting unnecessary and wasteful and advised that the men and bosses ought to get together for the common good, each make some concession, and then go on about their business like calm, co-operating human beings.

So impressive was her testimony that it aided substantially in causing the Senate to decide upon an official investigation into conditions in West Virginia, under the direction of the Senate Committee on Education and Labor. Senator Borah of Idaho was named chairman of the subcommittee conducting the inquiry.

After giving her testimony, "Mother" Jones went to New York. During her interview there with reporters, she gave some sparse information concerning her private life. Her name is Mrs. Mary Jones. She is a widow whose husband died many years ago in the South of yellow fever. She was born in Canada 70 years ago, and was educated in the Toronto public and high schools and in a convent.

"Mother" Jones Against Woman's Suffrage.

By "MOTHER" JONES.

IN no sense of the word am I in sympathy with woman's suffrage. In a long life of study of these questions I have learned that women are out of place in political work. There already is a great responsibility upon women's shoulders—that of rearing rising generations.

The average woman is unfitted for the ballot. She will rarely join an organization of the industry she works in. Give her the vote and she'll neglect it. Home training of the child should be her task, and it is the most beautiful of tasks. Solve the industrial problem and the men will earn enough so that women can remain at home and perform it.

It has been in part woman's sad neglect of motherhood which has filled reform schools and which keeps juvenile courts busy. If women had been really industrious in their home field they might have warded off some horrors of the time.

"Yellow fever has made widows by the tens of thousands," she said. "It is making no more widows because we have mastered it. The world is suffering today from an industrial yellow fever, not less fatal, but, I am certain, as preventable.

"Search for the mosquito! That ought to be a slogan with labor investigators on both sides of the labor question. Personally I think the swamps it hides in are more frequently in the domain of the employers than in that of the employes, but what I think doesn't matter if only we find the insect's habitat and drain it dry.

"I thoroughly believe that in the not distant future an era of industrial peace is waiting; we shall overtake it. Real education is all we need to help us find it.

"I don't believe in fighting in an economic battle any more than I believe in shotgun quarantine for yellow fever. Yet we are all at it. It is silly. It's a sign that we are not yet civilized.

"It's tragic as well as silly. It brutalizes both sides. The spirit of implacable vengeance developed in employer and employed through all these years of labor strife, will bear its sad fruit in coming generations.

"The hopeful side is that the scientific investigation which will end in finding the mosquito and the swamps for drainage is already under way. We have uncovered the germ in some phases of its ailment; we have begun to drain some swamps. The campaign against child-labor was the first triumph of science in this country's economic field. Perhaps the pleasantest thing I have to remember is that it was through working for the mitigation of its horrors that I found my entrance into the field of labor-work.

"I do not hate employers. What I hate is the cause of labor troubles. There are those among the mine owners in West Virginia who deserve less hate than pity; they deserve more sympathy than I do, more sympathy than any of the striking miners do, for they are going to be beaten into doing right. The man forced into righteousness is a sorry spectacle.

"I feel this: If labor would eliminate its violence and capital would eliminate injunctions, the battle would be practically over. We could then go sanely at arranging peace. Common sense, uninflamed, productive, could step in. But labor will be violent as long as capital swears out injunctions.

"The capitalist, the striker—both men are all right, only they are sick; they need a remedy. Let's kill the virulent mosquito and then find and drain the swamp in which he breeds. That is the advice of 'Mother' Jones. I'd rather wave a white flag with that lettered on it than to wave red flags.

"I'll fight when I'm forced to and urge my boys to fight when they are forced to, but I wish we might all be quite reasonable and stop fighting. Fighting is a waste."

Collapsible Tubes for Butter.

THEY want butter in collapsible tubes in India. The heat is so intense there that it is almost impossible to pack butter in tubs or tins, as it is fluid almost from the moment it is made. Then again, it spoils rapidly when exposed to the hot, moist air. This has seriously retarded the efforts of the Government to stimulate the dairy industry.

So the Director-General of Commercial Intelligence has opened negotiations with the makers of machinery for the manufacture and filling of such tubes as are used for oil, paints, vaseline and tooth pastes. One of these manufacturers says the tubes would have to be made of pure tin, as the volatile fatty acids of the butter would act upon lead and copper and form poisons. And such parts of the filling machines as are now made of copper would have to be of porcelain.

According to the Indian Trade Journal of Calcutta the tubes are wanted in sizes to contain one pound, one-half a pound and a quarter of a pound, and they will be ordered in lots of from 2000 gross to 5000 gross.

Duplicates in St. Louis of Woodrow Wilson, Taft, Roosevelt and McKinley, While Cleveland, Grant and Lincoln Had "Walking Images" That Caused Much Amusement

As GOVERNOR of New Jersey, presidential nominee and President, Woodrow Wilson has possessed so universal a pictorial publicity that no man, woman or child in the nation, it would seem, could possibly mistake the features of another for the keen and scholarly visage of the Democratic chieftain. But nature, like a practical joker, planned many years ago and reared a number of men so closely resembling the President as to give rise to comical errors of identification; and the same confusion of doubles has been true in the cases of several other occupants of the White House.

John E. Gill, a Pittsburg capitalist, was sitting in a hotel lobby in his home city recently when he was astonished to find himself the center of a flock of suffragettes, who pounced down upon him and addressed him as "Mr. President." Respectfully but firmly they demanded that he give official utterance to an expression favorable to their cause.

For some minutes it was in vain that he protested it was a case of mistaken identity. The suffragettes politely declined to believe him. They asked whether it was possible for them to make an error in regard to a face so well known as that of President Wilson, and hinted that his denial of his identity was a rather unskilful attempt to evade their demand.

It was not until the hotel manager assured the women that their victim was not Woodrow Wilson but John E. Gill, that they reluctantly permitted him to escape. Even then some of them were still skeptical, saying that so extraordinary a resemblance could not exist.

On a visit to New York some weeks ago, John Gerber of Omaha was followed by a crowd which blocked traffic on Broadway, cheering him in the belief that he was President Wilson.

When he went to a theater at night, with his wife and two daughters, his appearance aroused a storm of applause. A lively press agent telephoned to every newspaper in the city that the President and his family were attending a musical burlesque, and a detachment of reporters and artists swept down upon the theater.

Reporters Seek to Interview "Wilson" at Musical Burlesque.

While the artists were busily sketching the "presidential family," the reporters surrounded the box and respectfully requested Gerber to gratify the public's curiosity with his views on the subject of musical comedy and popular amusements. Their chagrin may be imagined when they learned that the "President" was an Omaha business man.

John D. Johnson, a St. Louis attorney, is often rallied by his friends upon his resemblance to President Wilson. A remarkable replica of him is shown in the features of Thomas A. Downe of Detroit. The President's resemblance to the Right Hon. Joseph Chamberlain, the English statesman, has often been remarked.

A remarkable fact as to nature's creation of doubles is that a man with features so distinctive as those of Theodore Roosevelt should possess so many facial facsimiles. A remarkable case of resemblance to the Colonel is presented by Col. John A. Laird, former President of the St. Louis Police Board.

NELSON WESLEY McLEOD

While Mrs. Roosevelt was on a visit to Florence, Italy, some years ago, she was informed that a picture-frame maker in the city, Pietro Casini by name, astonishingly resembled her husband. Her curiosity was aroused and she went to the humble artisan's shop. Even she, though prepared to see a likeness, was startled—so much so that she told Casini who she was and gave him a photograph of the Colonel.

The story ran all over Florence and made Casini famous. He employed his celebrity so well that he became rich through the vogue conferred on his store.

F. G. Huddleston of Los Angeles was in Phoenix, Ariz., soon after the Spanish-American War had raised the Rough Riders to fame and Col. Roosevelt to the vice-presidency.

In the public square several cowboys were lounging. One of them glanced at Huddleston, exclaimed in surprise and delight and seized his hand, greeting him effusively as "Colonel." The cowpuncher affectionately reproached the visitor for taking the town unawares, and assured him that had Phoenix known of his coming it would have prepared a welcome he would never have forgotten.

Other cowboys crowded around, wrung Huddleston's hand and drowned his protests under a salvo of cheers. At last, when space was left for his voice to enter the air, he disclaimed all title to the honors which had been bestowed on him.

The cowboys deferentially declined to believe that he was speaking the truth. For half an hour he insisted that he was just Mr. Huddleston of Los Angeles. For half an hour his hosts insisted that he was Vice-President of the United States. Then they withdrew to talk it over. About half of them were persuaded that they had been the victims of an astonishing resemblance. The others, still unconvinced, suffered from wounded feelings until it was suggested that probably the Colonel had reasons for traveling incognito which they were bound to respect. Then Huddleston was permitted to escape without further molestation.

Col. John M. Keyes of Concord, Mass., who was a delegate to the Republican National Convention at Chicago a year ago, almost broke up a ball game at the American League Park by appearing in a box there. The moment he appeared the crowd mistook him for Col. Roosevelt, then in the midst of his fight against the Republican party. The game had to be stopped while the fans vociferously advised Keyes to "Eat 'em alive!" "Slug 'em through the ropes!" and "Lick 'em to a frazzle!" Having a sense of humor, Keyes assisted the joke by brandishing his arms, waving his hat and displaying his teeth in the true Roosevelt manner.

Thomas J. Morley, a police Sergeant in Pittsburg, held an impromptu reception in a theater lobby one night and sent about 2000 persons home happy, in the belief that they had shaken hands with President Taft. When he had first appeared in his box, the audience arose and cheered him several minutes.

During Taft's administration, Magistrate John B. Wharton of Dover, Del., sent his photograph to the White House, with a letter complaining that his resemblance to the President had made him the victim of a crowd of women who stormed upon him and kissed him one after another, in the impression that they were saluting the nation's chief.

William Lucas, a yardmaster in Wilmington, Del., so resembles Taft that on one occasion when both happened to be in Denver at the same time, Lucas' photographs readily sold on the streets as those of the President. Another man said to resemble the former President closely is William H. Frame of New York, who has a further claim to fame in that, despite his 320 pounds, he is an agile buck and wing dancer.

A few years ago a crowd in front of the Planters Hotel in St. Louis burst into cries of "Taft!" when a stout and beaming figure appeared on the balcony. It was not the President, however, but a St. Louisan—Jackson Johnson, a wealthy shoe man.

During one of President McKinley's visits to Chicago he became exhausted under the strenuous welcome extended to him. One of the committee in charge of his entertainment called attention to the fact that a policeman, William A. Murphy, resembled the President closely enough to be his twin. The likeness was at once taken advantage of for the relief of the distinguished visitor.

Murphy, in a frock coat and silk hat, was ensconsed in the presidential carriage, while McKinley took refuge in a closed vehicle and slumbered peacefully while the glorified patrolman, hat in hand and bowing to all sides, acknowledged the cheers of the unsuspecting thousands in the streets. Nelson M. McLeod, a St. Louis lumberman, is considered to resemble McKinley.

Some months after the retirement of President Cleveland, Walter H. French, a file clerk in the House of Representatives, went out strolling one Sunday and was observed looking into a Washington shop window. Soon a crowd gathered, and the next day the newspapers contained stories to the effect that the former President had returned to Washington and was studying the shops in order to select a gift for Mrs. Cleveland.

The resemblance between Ulysses S. Grant and Richard Croker, former boss of New York, has often been noticed. A likeness which, deliberately heightened by art and dress, is almost uncanny is that between Benjamin Chapin, an actor, and Abraham Lincoln. Chapin is famous for his impersonations of the martyred President, imitating him so closely in voice and physique and even mannerisms that men who knew Lincoln declare the illusion is almost absolute.

Many rulers of other countries have had doubles, whose wits often became so addled by their resemblance to august personages that they went mad. Such a case was that of Baron Alfred Stein, who bore a strong likeness to the Prince of Wales, afterwards King Edward VII.

At first the Baron took the resemblance as a pleasant joke. But when crowds, taking him for the Prince of Wales, paid public obeisance to him, he became exceedingly vain and at last was fully convinced that he was really the Prince.

He acquired the delusion that the attendants of Marlborough house were in a conspiracy to prevent his living there and to keep him from the throne. One day he went to Marlborough house to chastise his enemies. His entrance was resisted and the servants were handling him rather roughly when bystanders, horrified in the belief that the heir to the crown was being beaten, went to his rescue. Constables subdued the riot and the Baron was lodged in a madhouse.

Another man who resembled King Edward was Percy Marsden, a wealthy English broker. It was a frequent episode on 'Change in London for the brokers to surround Marsden, sing "God Save the King" and demand "a speech from the throne," with which he always obliged.

A Danish banker named Carlsen closely resembled Czar Alexander III of Russia, and took pains to heighten the likeness by copying the ruler's dress and mannerisms. Finally the banker became convinced that he was really the Czar and was taken to an asylum mad with horror of assassination.

A newspaper reporter in Paris received a public ovation one day when a crowd mistook him for King Alfonso of Spain. The rumor spread that the monarch was visiting Paris incognito. When Alfonso was next in Paris he sent for the reporter and was photographed with him so that Queen Victoria might see the resemblance.

Napoleon III had a double in the famous Godillot and took advantage of it by having Godillot impersonate him on many occasions. It happened that one of them attended a dinner given by a woman who was a German spy. The Emperor's enemies formally declared it was he who attended the dinner. The truth of the matter was never known.

Abdul Hamid, "the damned," former Sultan of Turkey, had a valet who resembled him so closely that he frequently impersonated his royal master in official functions, especially those of a religious nature, which the monarch found particularly tedious.

163-Pound Lump of Ambergris Found

MANY mariners who hunted whales in the icy waters of the North Atlantic Ocean are today living a life of ease and retirement because they found floating on the waves a grayish mass, fatty in substance, and knew it was ambergris. This substance is one of the most valuable products of the sea. The finest piece, if not the largest, obtained in recent years, weighed 163 pounds. It has been sold in London for an almost fabulous figure.

There is no longer any mystery as to the origin of ambergris. It is a morbid secretion due to a disease of the liver of the sperm whale, in the intestines of which animal lumps of it are occasionally, though rarely, discovered.

Anciently the substance was known as amber—a name which was subsequently applied also to the fossil gum now commonly so called. But to distinguish the two one was called "amber gris" (gray) and the other "amber juane" (yellow).

So it appears that ambergris means simply gray amber. Like the fossil gum pieces of it were found now and then on the seashore, where they had been cast up by the waves: hence, doubtless, the giving of the name to both.

The substance has been used for centuries in sacerdotal rites of the church, and with fragrant gums was formerly burned in the apartments of royalty. To some extent it was employed as a medicine and to flavor certain dishes. Nowadays it is utilized almost exclusively by perfumers in the preparation of fine scents, being first converted into a tincture by dissolving it in alcohol.

Capt. James Earle of New Bedford, Mass., is said to have been the luckiest of all skippers in the old whaling days. From a single sperm whale he realized more than $100,000. It was not the 90 barrels of oil which gave the leviathan its extraordinary value, for that was sold for something like $4000; but within the whale's vast interior there was found a solid piece of ambergris weighing 780 pounds. This was sold in chunks in all markets of the world for about $100,000.

The area under cultivation on the island of Cyprus last year was estimated at 1,100,000 acres, while the area of uncultivated land was estimated at 1,193,760 acres, of which forest land made up about 450,000 acres and land susceptible of cultivation about 420,000 acres.

Theodore Roosevelt's Story of His Life

Completing the Account of His Debut in Practical Politics the Author Passes to the Introduction of a Picturesque Narrative Concerning His Adventures "In Cowboy Land"

AGAIN, I at one period began to believe that I had a future before me, and that it behooved me to be very far-sighted and scan each action carefully with a view to its possible effect on that future. This speedily made me useless to the public and an object of aversion to myself; and I then made up my mind that I would try not to think of the future at all, but would proceed on the assumption that each office I held would be the last I ever should hold, and that I would confine myself to trying to do my work as well as possible while I held that office. I found that for me personally this was the only way in which I could either enjoy myself or render good service to the country, and I never afterwards deviated from this plan.

As regards political advancement, the bosses could, of course, do a good deal. At that time the warring Stalwart and Halfbreed factions of the Republican party were supporting respectively President Arthur and Senator Miller. Neither side cared for me. The first year in the Legislature I rose to a position of leadership, so that in the second year, when the Republicans were in a minority, I received the minority nomination for Speaker, although I was still the youngest man in the House, being 24 years old. The third year the Republicans carried the Legislature, and the bosses at once took a hand in the speakership contest.

I made a stout fight for the nomination, but the bosses of the two factions, the Stalwarts and the Halfbreeds, combined and I was beaten. I was much chagrined for the moment. But the fact that I had fought hard and efficiently, even though defeated, and that I had made the fight single-handed, with no machine back of me, assured my standing as floor leader.

Bosses Combine, Beat Roosevelt for Speaker of Legislature.

My defeat, in the end, materially strengthened my position, and enabled me to accomplish far more than I could have accomplished as Speaker. As so often, I found that the titular position was of no consequence; what counted was the combination of the opportunity with the ability to accomplish results. The achievement was the all-important thing; the position, whether titularly high or low, was of consequence only in so far as it widened the chance for achievement.

After the session closed four of us who looked at politics from the same standpoint and were known as independent or anti-machine Republicans were sent by the State convention as delegates-at-large to the Republican National Convention in 1884, where I advocated, as vigorously as I knew how, the nomination of Senator George F. Edmunds. Mr. Edmunds was defeated and Mr. Blaine nominated. Mr. Blaine was clearly the choice of the rank and file of the party; his nomination was won in fair and above-board fashion, because the rank and file of the party stood back of him; and I supported him to the best of my ability in the ensuing campaign.

The speakership contest enlightened me as regards more things than the attitude of the bosses. I had already had some exasperating experiences with the "silk stocking" reformer type, as Abraham Lincoln called it, the gentlemen who were very nice, very refined, who shook their heads over political corruption and discussed it in drawing rooms and parlors, but who were wholly unable to grapple with real men in real life.

"Silk Stocking" Reformers Classed as Undesirable Citizens.

These parlor reformers made up for inefficiency in action by zeal in criticising; and they delighted in criticising the men who really were doing the things which they said ought to be done, but which they lacked the sinewy power to do. They often upheld ideals which were not merely impossible, but highly undesirable, and thereby played into the hands of the very politicians to whom they professed to be most hostile. Moreover, if they believed that their own interests, individually or as a class, were jeopardized, they were apt to show no higher standards than did the men they usually denounced.

One of their shibboleths was that the office should seek the man and not the man the office. This is entirely true of certain offices at certain times. It is entirely untrue when the circumstances are different.

It would have been unnecessary and undesirable for Washington to have sought the presidency. But if Abraham Lincoln had not sought the presidency he never would have been nominated. The objection in such a case as this lies not to seeking the office, but to seeking it in any but an honorable and proper manner.

The effect of the shibboleth in question is usually merely to put a premium on hypocrisy, and therefore to favor the creature who is willing to rise by hypocrisy.

When I ran for Speaker, the whole body of machine politicians was against me, and my only chance lay in arousing the people in the different districts. To do this I had to visit the districts, put the case fairly before the men whom I saw, and make them understand that I was really making a fight and would stay in the fight to the end. Yet there were reformers who shook their heads and deplored my "activity" in the canvass. Of course, the one thing which corrupt machine politicians most desire is to have decent men frown on the activity, that is, on the efficiency, of the honest man who genuinely wishes to reform politics.

If efficiency is left solely to bad men, and if virtue is confined solely to inefficient men, the result cannot be happy. When I entered politics there were, as there always had been—and as there always will be—any number of bad men in politics who were thoroughly efficient, and any number of good men who would like to have done lofty things in politics but who were thoroughly inefficient. If I wished to accomplish anything for the country, my business was to combine decency and efficiency; to be a thoroughly practical man of high ideals who did his best to reduce those ideals to actual practice. This was my ideal, and to the best of my ability I strove to live up to it.

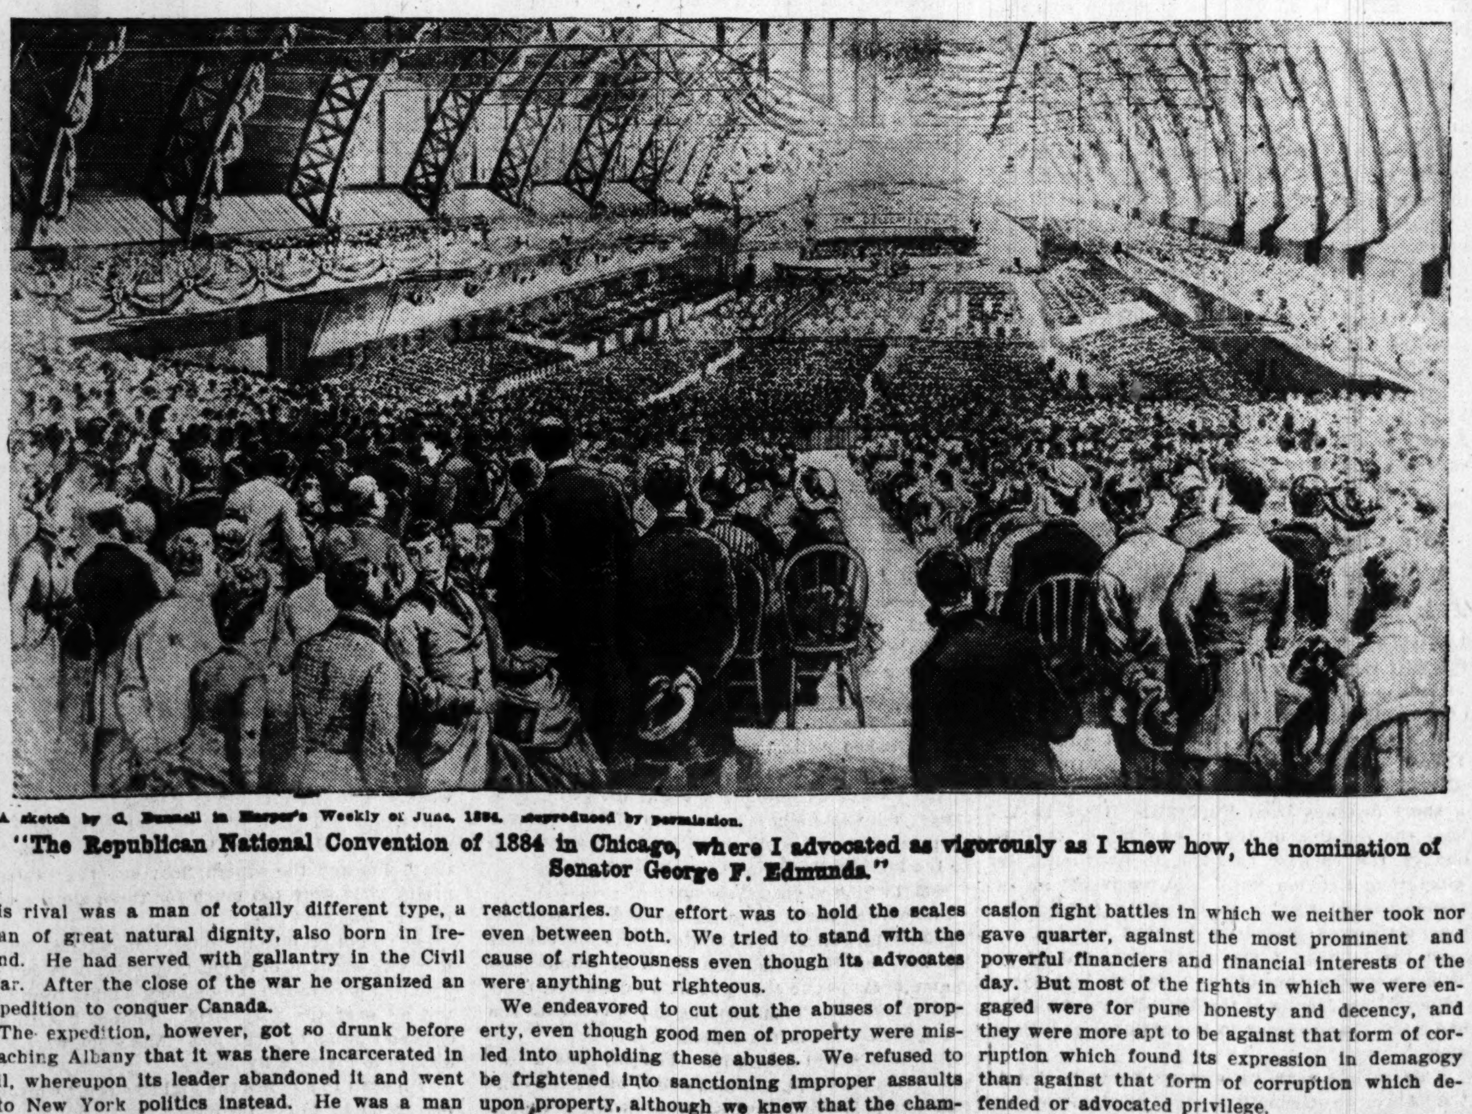
Origin of Phrase "What's Constitution Between Friends?"

To a young man, life in the New York Legislature was always interesting and often entertaining. There was always a struggle of some kind on hand. Sometimes it was on a naked question of right and wrong. Sometimes it was on a question of real constructive statesmanship.

Moreover, there were all kinds of humorous incidents, the humor being usually of the unconscious kind. In one session of the Legislature the New York City Democratic representatives were split into two camps, and there were two rivals for leadership. One of these was a thoroughly good-hearted, happy-go-lucky person who was afterwards for several years in Congress. He had been a local magistrate and was called Judge. Generally he and I were friendly, but occasionally I did something that irritated him. He was always willing to vote for any other member's bill himself, and he regarded it as narrow-minded for anyone to oppose one of his bills, especially if the opposition was upon the ground that it was unconstitutional—for his views of the Constitution were so excessively liberal as to make even me feel as if I belonged to the straitest sect of strict constructionists.

On one occasion he had a bill to appropriate money, with obvious impropriety, for the relief of some miscreant whom he styled "one of the honest yeomanry of the State." When I explained to him that it was clearly unconstitutional, he answered, "My friend, the Constitution don't touch little things like that," and then added, with an ingratiating smile, "Anyhow, I'd never allow the Constitution to come between friends." At the time I was looking over the proofs of Mr. Bryce's "American Commonwealth," and I told him the incident. He put it into the first edition of the "Commonwealth." Whether it is in the last edition or not I cannot say.

On another occasion the same gentleman came to an issue with me in a debate, and wound up his speech by explaining that I occupied what "lawyers would call a quasi position on the bill."



—A sketch by C. Bunnell in Harper's Weekly of June, 1884, reproduced by permission.

"The Republican National Convention of 1884 in Chicago, where I advocated as vigorously as I knew how, the nomination of Senator George F. Edmunds."

His rival was a man of totally different type, a man of great natural dignity, also born in Ireland. He had served with gallantry in the Civil War. After the close of the war he organized an expedition to conquer Canada.

The expedition, however, got so drunk before reaching Albany that it was there incarcerated in jail, whereupon its leader abandoned it and went into New York politics instead. He was a man of influence, and later occupied in the Police Department the same position as Commissioner which I myself at one time occupied.

He felt that his rival had gained too much glory at my expense, and, walking over with ceremonious solemnity to where the said rival was sitting close beside me, he said to him: "I would like you to know, Mr. Cameron (Cameron, of course, was not the real name), that Mr. Roosevelt knows more law in a wake than you do in a month; and more than that, Michael Cameron, what do you mane by quoting Latin on the floor of this House when you don't know the alpha and omayga of the language?"

During my three years' service in the Legislature I worked on a very simple philosophy of government. It was that personal character and initiative are the prime requisites in political and social life. It was not only a good, but an absolutely indispensable theory as far as it went; but it was defective in that it did not sufficiently allow for the need of collective action.

"I had no sympathy with the man who was merely a money king, and did not regard the 'money touch' as entitling a man to either respect or consideration."

I shall never forget the men with whom I worked hand in hand in these legislative struggles, not only my fellow legislators, but some of the newspaper reporters, such as Spinney and Cunningham; and then in addition the men in the various districts who helped us. We had made up our minds that we must not fight fire with fire, that on the contrary the way to win out was to equal our foes in practical efficiency and yet to stand at the opposite plane from them in applied morality.

It was not always easy to keep the just middle, especially when it happened that on one side there were corrupt and unscrupulous demagogues, and on the other side corrupt and unscrupulous reactionaries. Our effort was to hold the scales even between both. We tried to stand with the cause of righteousness even though its advocates were anything but righteous.

We endeavored to cut out the abuses of property, even though good men of property were misled into upholding these abuses. We refused to be frightened into sanctioning improper assaults upon property, although we knew that the champions of property themselves did things that were wicked and corrupt. We were as yet by no means as thoroughly awake as we ought to have been to the need of controlling big business and to the damage done by the combination of politics with big business. In this matter I was not behind the rest of my friends; indeed, I was ahead of them, for no serious leader in political life then appreciated the prime need of grappling with these questions.

One partial reason—not an excuse or a justification, but a partial reason—for my slowness in grasping the importance of action in these matters was the corrupt and unattractive nature of so many of the men who championed popular reforms, their insincerity and the folly of so many of the actions which they advocated. Even at that date I had neither sympathy with nor admiration for the man who was merely a money king, and I did not regard the "money touch," when divorced from other qualities, as entitling a man to either respect or consideration.

As recited above, we did on more than one occasion fight battles in which we neither took nor gave quarter, against the most prominent and powerful financiers and financial interests of the day. But most of the fights in which we were engaged were for pure honesty and decency, and they were more apt to be against that form of corruption which found its expression in demagogy than against that form of corruption which defended or advocated privilege.

To play the demagogue for purposes of self-interest is a cardinal sin against the people in a democracy, exactly as to play the courtier for such purposes is a cardinal sin against the people under other forms of government. A man who stays long in our American political life, if he has in his soul the generous desire to do effective service for great causes, inevitably grows to regard himself merely as one of many instruments, all of which it may be necessary to use, one at one time, one at another, in achieving the triumph of those causes; and whenever the uselessness of any one has been exhausted it is to be thrown aside.

If such a man is wise, he will gladly do the thing that is next, when the time and the need come together, without asking what the future holds for him. Let the half-god play his part well and manfully, and then be content to draw aside when the god appears. Nor should he feel vain regrets that to another it is given to render greater services and reap a greater reward. Let it be enough for him that he too has served, and that by doing well he has prepared the way for other men who can do better.

"In Cowboy Land"

THOUGH I had previously made a trip into the then Territory of Dakota, beyond the Red River, it was not until 1883 that I went to the Little Missouri and there took hold of two cattle ranches, the Chimney Butte and the Elkhorn.

It was still the Wild West in those days, the Far West, the West of Owen Wister's stories and Frederick Remington's drawings, the West of the Indian and the buffalo hunter, the soldier and the cowpuncher. That land of the West has gone now, "gone, gone with lost Atlantis," gone to the isle of ghosts and of strange dead memories. It was a land of vast silent spaces, of lonely rivers and of plains where the wild game stared at the passing horseman. It was a land of scattered ranches, of herds of long-horned cattle and of reckless riders who unmoved looked in the eyes of life or of death.

In that land we led a free and hardy life, with horse and with rifle. We worked under the scorching midsummer sun, when the wide plains shimmered and wavered in the heat; and we knew the freezing misery of riding night guard round the cattle in the late fall roundup. In the soft springtime the stars were glorious in our eyes each night before we fell asleep; and in the winter we rode through blinding blizzards, when the driven snow-dust burnt our faces. There were monotonous days, as we guided the trail cattle or the beef herds, hour after hour, at the slowest of walks; and minutes or hours teeming with excitement as we stopped stampedes or swam the herds across rivers treacherous with quicksands or brimmed with running ice.

We knew toil and hardship and hunger and thirst; and we saw men die violent deaths as they worked among the horses and cattle, or fought in evil feuds with one another; but we felt the beat of hardy life in our veins, and ours was the glory of work and the joy of living.

The Joy of Living in the Wild West, Now Banished.

It was right and necessary that this life should pass, for the safety of our country lies in its being made the country of the small homemaker. The great unfenced ranches, in the days of "free grass," necessarily represented a temporary stage in our history. The large migratory flocks of sheep, each guarded by the hired shepherds of absentee owners, were the first enemies of the cattlemen; and owing to the way they ate out the grass and destroyed all other vegetation, these roving sheep bands represented little of permanent good to the country.

But the homesteaders, the permanent settlers, the men who took up each his own farm on which he lived and brought up his family, these represented from the national standpoint the most desirable of all possible users of and dwellers on the soil. Their advent meant the breaking up of the big ranches; and the change was a national gain, although to some of us an individual loss.

I first reached the Little Missouri on a Northern Pacific train about three in the morning of a cool September day in 1883. Aside from the station, the only building was a ramshackle structure called the Pyramid Park Hotel. I dragged my duffle-bag thither, and hammered at the door until the frowsy proprietor appeared, muttering oaths. He ushered me upstairs, where I was given one of the 14 beds in the room which by itself constituted the entire upper floor. Next day I walked over to the abandoned army post, and, after some hours among the gray log shacks, a ranchman who had driven into the station agreed to take me out to his ranch, the Chimney Butte ranch, where he was living with his brother and their partner.

The ranch house was a log structure with a dirt roof, a corral for the horses near by and a chicken house jabbed against the rear of the ranch house. Inside there was only one room, with a table, three or four chairs, a cooking stove and three bunks. The owners were Sylvane and Joe Ferris and William J. Merrifield.

Bobcat's Raid on Chicken House Breaks Off Sledge Game.

Later all three of them held my commissions while I was President. Merrifield was Marshal of Montana, and as Presidential Elector cast the vote of that State for me in 1904; Sylvane Ferris was Land Officer in North Dakota and Joe Ferris Postmaster at Medora. There was a fourth man, George Meyer, who also worked for me later. That evening we all played old sledge round the table, and at one period the game was interrupted by a frightful squawking outside, which told us that a bobcat had made a raid on the chicken house.

After a buffalo hunt with my original friend, Joe Ferris, I entered into partnership with Merrifield and Sylvane Ferris, and we started a cow ranch, with the maltese cross brand—always known as "maltee cross," by the way, as the general impression along the Little Missouri was that "maltese" must be plural.

Twenty-nine years later my four friends of that night were delegates to the first Progressive National Convention at Chicago. They were among my most constant companions for the few years next succeeding the evening when the bobcat interrupted the game of old sledge. I lived and worked with them on the ranch, and with them and many others like them on the roundup; and I brought out from Maine, in order to start the Elkhorn ranch lower down the river, my two backwoods friends, Sewall and Dow. My brands for the lower ranch were the elkhorn and triangle.

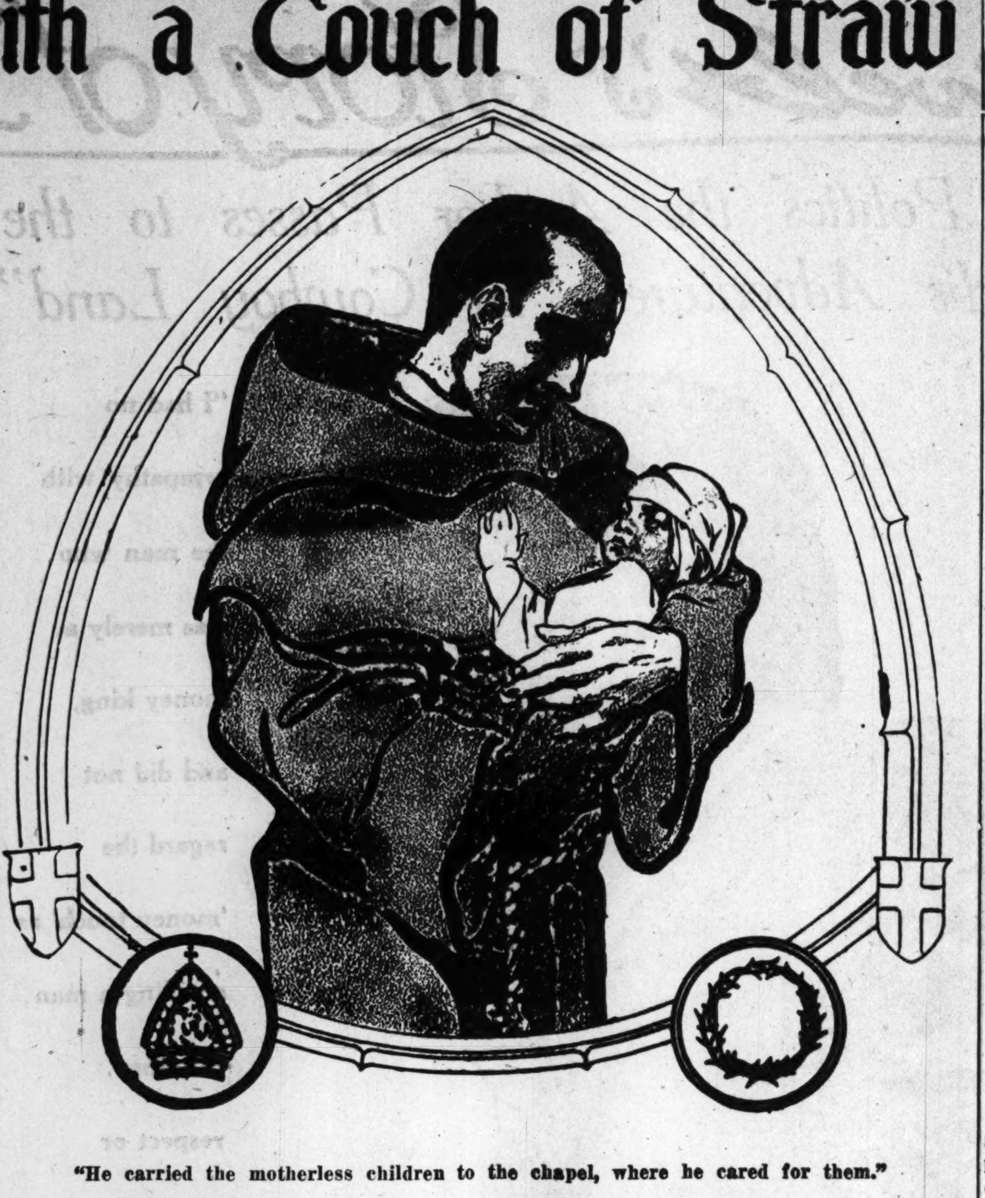
I do not believe there ever was any life more attractive to a vigorous young fellow than life on a cattle ranch in those days. It was a fine, healthy life, too; it taught a man self-reliance, hardihood and the value of instant decision—in short, the virtues that ought to come from life in the open country. I enjoyed the life to the full. After the first year I built on the Elkhorn ranch a long, low ranch house of hewn logs, with a veranda, and with, in addition to the other rooms, a bedroom for myself and a sitting room with a big fireplace. I got out a rocking chair—I am very fond of rocking chairs—and enough books to fill two or three shelves, and a rubber bathtub so that I could get a bath. And then I do not see how anyone could have lived more comfortably.

Theodore Roosevelt

Adventures of the roundup and of ranch life in the Dakota of 30 years ago comprise a remarkably thrilling chapter in the ensuing installment of Theodore Roosevelt's own story of his life, to appear in this magazine next Sunday. How he, as a newcomer and tenderfoot, won a place in Cowboy Land is described with cordial humor.

A Bishop with a Couch of Straw

How Father Paul, a Barefoot Monk, After Facing Bullets and Plague to Work Among Poor in South America, Has Been Appointed Ruler of the New See at Corpus Christi, Tex., Where He Will Wear the Woolen Habit and Sandals and Live in the Bare Cell of the Passionist Order.



"He carried the motherless children to the chapel, where he cared for them."

WHEN the long arm of Rome reaches out across the world and places the purple mantle of a bishop on the shoulders of a barefooted monk whose identity has been buried a quarter of a century in a simple Christian name and whose life has been spent in poverty, penance and self-denial, there is an interesting tale to be told.

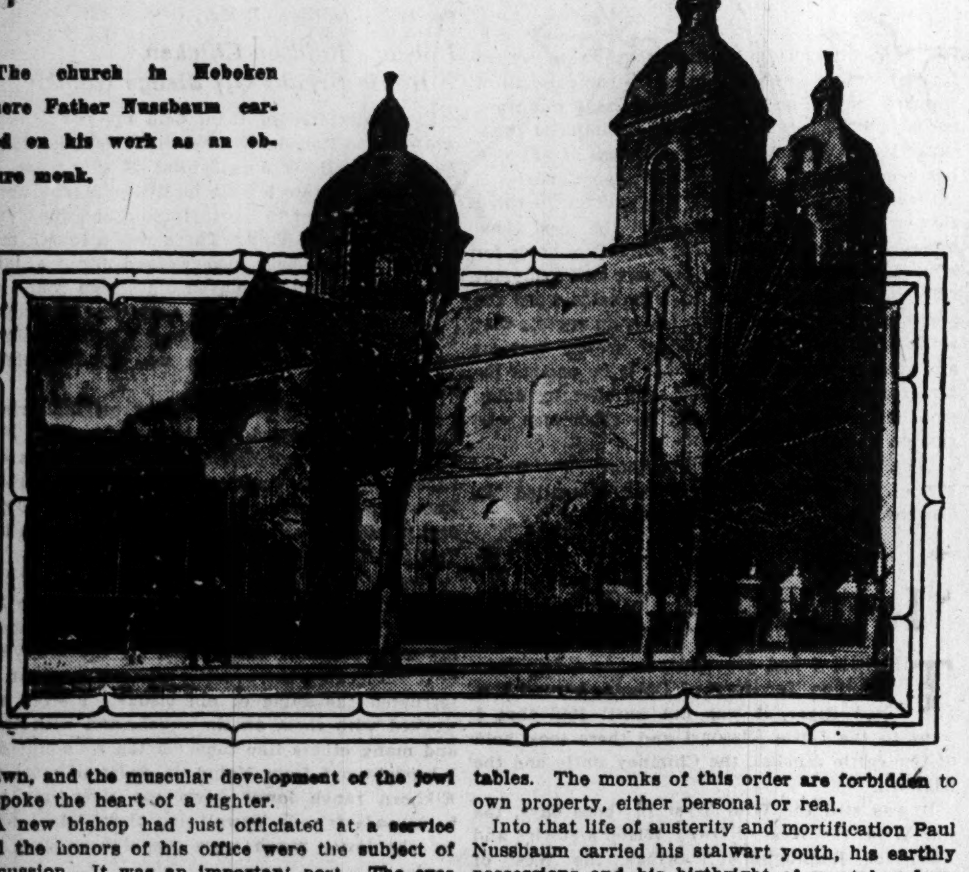
Pope Pius X created the new diocese of Corpus Christi, Tex., several months ago. While speculation and suggestions were being offered concerning the ruler of the new diocese, announcement came from Rome that the "Rev. P. J. Nussbaum, C. P.," had been chosen for the See. Inquiry revealed Rev. J. P. Nussbaum, C. P., to be Father Paul, Passionist monk and missionary.

Many priests and high officials of the Church in this country asked: "How did it happen that an obscure monk in Hoboken, N. J., was chosen for the heirachy?"

Those who asked did not know the history of Father Paul.

A small group of church dignitaries stood in the shadows of the great dome of the Church of Sts. John and Paul in Rome. There were two cardinals, an archbishop, a superior general of a religious order, several monsignori and a young barefoot monk. The monk was a tall, powerfully built man with an uncommon personality. In contrast to the splendid physical development was a face that proclaimed him all mental, a typical intellectual.

The dark brown hair was combed straight back from the brow. It was the brow of an ascetic, as was the nose—the brow and nose of a Savonarola. The eyes, which were large and full, were the eyes of a dreamer. The mouth was sensitive and finely chiseled. The lines of the chin were sharply drawn, and the muscular development of the jowl bespoke the heart of a fighter.



The church in Hoboken where Father Nussbaum carried on his work as an obscure monk.

A new bishop had just officiated at a service and the honors of his office were the subject of discussion. It was an important post. The eyes of the world were on the See in question. Various comments had been made. Finally the elder cardinal said:

"What do you think, Father Paul?"

"I think," said the young monk, "that the weight of the mitre is greater than its sheen. After all, the honors we wear are soon forgotten by men, but the work we do and the work we leave undone is never forgotten by God."

Then he added, with a characteristic twinkle in his eye, which is almost Celtic, "and as I have some work to do, I must bid this very charming company good evening."

"Who is Father Paul?" asked the Archbishop.

That was eight years ago. Several members of that group have since been elevated by the Pope. The man who asked "Who is Father Paul?" is now a member of the Sacred College of Cardinals.

The following is the story that he heard. It is the answer to "Why was an obscure monk in Hoboken, N. J., chosen for the heirarchy?"

Father Paul was born in Philadelphia 43 years ago. His parents were intellectual persons and devout Catholics. He began his education with the Christian Brothers in Philadelphia. When he reached his seventeenth year he felt that his vocation was the priesthood. The active but austere life of the Passionist Monks appealed to Paul Nussbaum. He sought admission to their monastery in Pittsburg. Then he began the hard life of a mendicant.

The Passionist Order combines the solitary life of the Trappist Monks with the activity of the Jesuits and the Lazarists. Five hours are spent every day in the choir, chanting the Divine Office or in meditation. Every night in the year the monastery bell at midnight summons the monks to chapel, where they kneel one hour and a half chanting the Matins and the Lauds. They abstain from flesh meat three days in the week throughout the year and during the whole of Lent and Advent.

Their habit is a coarse brown woolen tunic and they wear only sandals on their feet. Every hour of their day is filled with study and work among the poor and wretched. When the day is done and they seek their rest they lie down on a rough pallet of straw with a pillow of the same hard substance. There is no mark of comfort, no suggestion of luxury, no ornament in their habitation. The floors and walls are bare, the furniture consists only of hard chairs and plain tables. The monks of this order are forbidden to own property, either personal or real.

Into that life of austerity and mortification Paul Nussbaum carried his stalwart youth, his earthly possessions and his birthright of mental endowment. Ambitions, boyhood ties and even his family name were left behind. From that time until ordination he was known as "Brother Paul."

After five years of study Brother Paul went with a band of missionaries to South America. His first real work began in Brazil, which was then in the throes of a revolution. The rebel forces and the federal troops were in the thick of battle the October morning that Brother Paul entered the bay of Rio Janeiro.

"Better not land just yet," advised a young officer of the boat.

"On the contrary, this is the time for me to land. I might be of some service in there," was Brother Paul's answer.

"Anybody who steps into a South American revolution this early in the morning is likely to be shot," warned the first officer. "They will knock off fighting in the heat of the day. We can get in then."

"If you can lower a boat and get a man or two to help me, I will row in," was the young monk's answer.

And he landed. He ministered to the dying and later in the day he buried the dead.

That was Father Paul's beginning. His next heroic work was at Rosario. He had just completed a mission and had started back to his monastery when he was warned by a villager to hurry away because the town had suddenly been gripped by bubonic plague. Brother Paul turned back. That night he buried 15 victims. He carried a score of motherless children to the chapel, where he cared for them. He stayed in that pest-ridden village until the plague had passed.

That winter Father Paul was ordained to the priesthood in Buenos Ayres and became known as "Father Paul." Before his ordination he had gone among the people preaching, and by his wholesome, kindly philosophy had created a following. Two missions were established as a result of his labor.

After his ordination Father Paul went back into Brazil. There he preached, taught the people, organized missions and built churches and schools.

Two years later he was in the Argentine when a record epidemic of yellow fever swept hundreds of lives into the trenches. He went among the victims, making a record of the identified dead, marking the trenches where they were buried. He organized hospitals which were temporary affairs then, but which grew into permanent institutions. He fought for sanitation. He preached cleanliness with godliness. The people knew he feared neither pestilence nor bullets, that he would defend their interests at the risk of his life. So they listened to him and he became as a prophet and a reformer to his people.

Rumor of this man's work finally reached Rome. The Provincial General of the Passionist Order looked into the record of the young American monk called Father Paul and then called him to the head monastery of the order in Rome.

When the story of Father Paul had been told, the venerable Cardinal said:

"He would make a noble bishop."

"If he were not a monk," added an American Monsignor. No Passionist Monk had ever been made a bishop in this country.

"He is still very young, and precedent is a transitory thing," was the Cardinal's comment.

Five years ago Father Paul asked to be sent back to his native land. He was appointed consultor of the Eastern Province and assigned to the monastery of St. Michael's in Hoboken. He has given the past five years of his life to work among the poor. Very few of the richer churches know him at all.

The vows of self-denial which were taken by Father Paul were life vows. Back of the bishop, the administrator of a big diocese, he will still be the monk. When the pomp and ceremony of his office are done he will adhere, as far as lies in his power, to the rules of his austere order. In his house he will wear the rough brown woolen habit and the sandals. His sleeping quarters will be as the bare cell of the monk and his couch a bed of straw.

It will be a strange turn of life for this monk. From the desolate halls of a monastery to the dignity of a bishop's residence; from blind obedience to a position of authority and great power.

Finding the "Tower of Babel."

ARCHAEOLOGISTS in Paris have been stirred by the remarkable report laid before the Academy of Inscriptions Belles-Lettres by the Abbe Henri de Genouillac, who has just returned from the excavations at Babylonia and believes that he has found the original of the Biblical Tower of Babel.

The Abbe de Genouillac was sent out by the French Institute on a mission of research to El Ahymer, about eighty miles south of Bagdad and a short distance from Euphrates. Here he laid bare the remains of the primeval City of Kiss, one of the earliest capitals of Babylonia, far older than Babylon itself, and uncovered an immense palace, similar to the early royal buildings discovered elsewhere in that country.

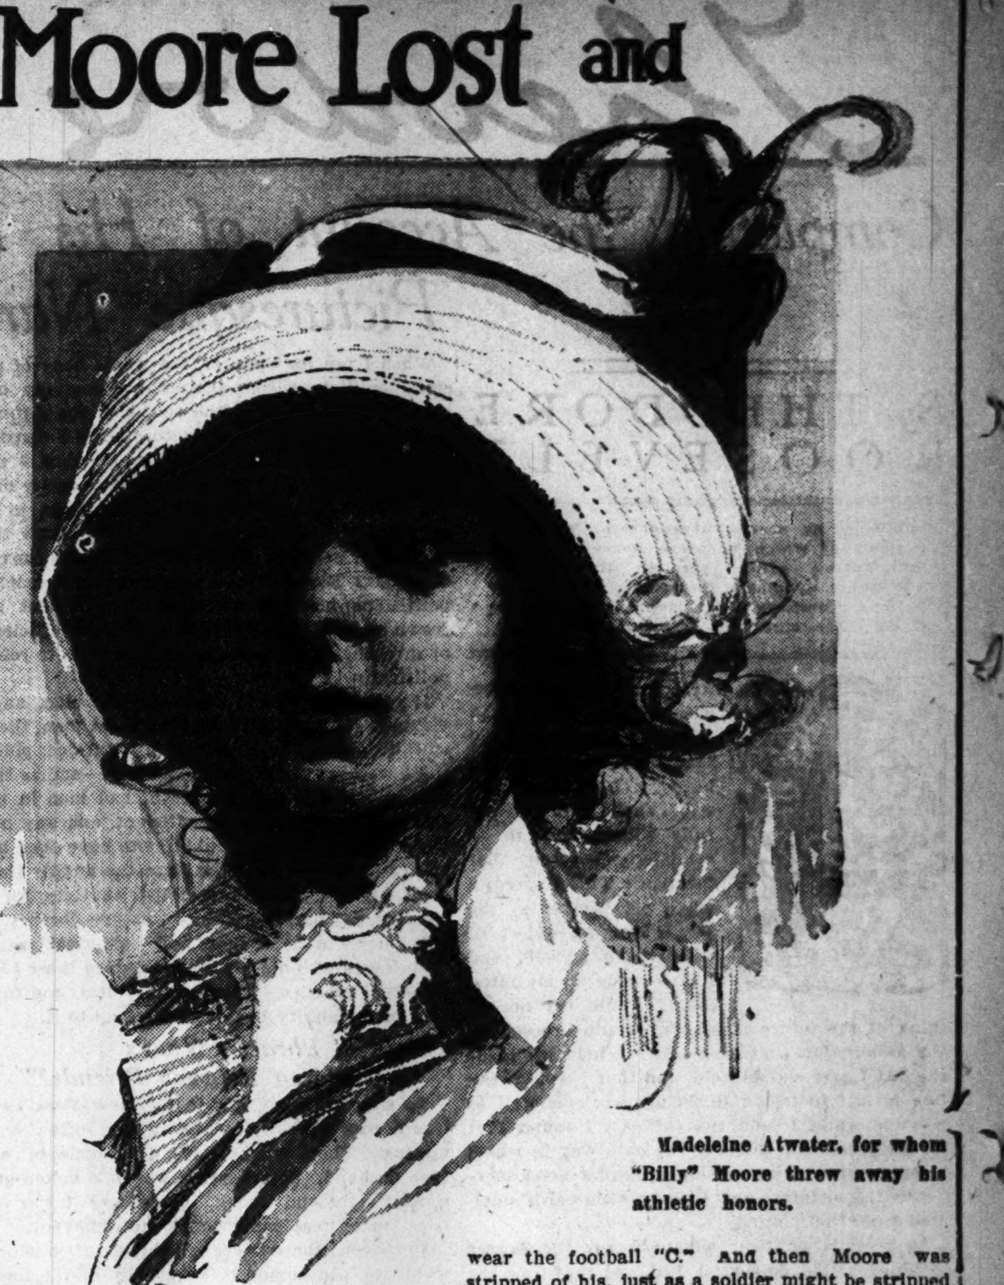
In the middle of the great courtyard of the palace were the ruins of an immensely high tower, named "The Temple of the Foundation of Heaven and Earth," and sacred to the national god, Zamama.

This temple with its strange name is, thinks the Abbe de Genouillac, the original of the Biblical legend of the tower which should reach from earth to heaven. Statuettes and vases were found among the ruins, showing that the latter were not later than the reign of Ham Murabi, (2100 B. C.).

The Abbe's discovery is thought very important by Biblical critics also.

How "Billy" Moore Lost and Won Back His School "C"

He "Broke Training' to go to a Dance, and DeWitt Clinton Lost the Football Game That Cost Him His Letter, But Now He Has Won It Back Through Athletic Cleverness



Madeleine Atwater, for whom "Billy" Moore threw away his athletic honors.

"COMMERCE won!"

A sad story is summed up in these two words—sad for DeWitt Clinton High School in New York, whose red and black colors were dragged in the gridiron's mud to the score of 41 to 0; sadder for pretty Miss Madeleine Atwater, one of the innocent causes of the catastrophe; but saddest of all for William Moore—the "Billy" Moore of gridiron, diamond, track and swimming pool, captain of Clinton's football team and star athletic of the school!

That one game cost him his coveted "C."

And what is that, pray? Nothing more nor less than that a cruel school faculty deprived him of all his athletic honors and actually took from him all his toggery—football, baseball, track and swimming—the initial of his school, the outward proof that he played and won for Clinton High.

And all because Billy Moore was gallant. He escorted a pretty girl to a dance rather than break his promise to her. To do it he broke training—the cardinal athletic sin. To be specific, he didn't get to bed in time the night before the great game!

Never a likelier lad stepped into the big halls of DeWitt Clinton High than Billy Moore, when he entered the freshman class there four years ago, lithe and 14. He weighed 95 pounds then; every ounce of it was muscle. He bounced into athletics right away, and before the bigger boys could realize it, he was getting placed in the sprints and the swims, and looked a likely candidate for the nine and the eleven.

Sophomore year found the youngster right halfback on the football team and a member of the champion swimming relay team which took down the Public School Athletic League championships. In the springtime his name was hung up enough times to net him 10 points in the track games and, so as a sophomore he got his first "C," under the rules. Besides, he played centerfield on the nine and was a substitute pitcher.

In junior year young Moore really found himself. He played right half again on the gridiron and helped down all the elevens of Manhattan and the Bronx. He was one of the speedy members of the relay swimming team which won the schoolboy championship of the United States down at the University of Pennsylvania. He was always placed in the sprints, wherever he ran.

He dropped baseball for the track. He won the 100 and the 220-yard sprints in the dual meet with Commerce High School, and was on the mile relay team, which won the P. S. A. L. championship. That summer, too, he took up rowing on Lake George; the four-oared crew that won the cup at The Hague regatta had him as a member.

No boy ever had a brighter athletic future than Billy Moore when he came back to school last autumn. The younger fellows just beginning high school looked up to him as a hero and his mates elected him not only captain of the eleven, but of the swimming and track teams as well. Tall, rangy; bone and sinew every inch of his six feet; good looking and popular, Billy Moore seemed to be the luckiest boy in all Clinton High.

And he had a dandy eleven!

Game after game fell to the red-and-black-stockinged young giants from Clinton. Only one contest lay between them and the thing of things—the championship—and that was with Commerce, their hereditary foes. Thanksgiving day was set for the great game—last of the season.

But fate willed otherwise. The day was a terror. It snowed and it rained and it blew; the conflict was postponed until Saturday, while anticipation kept white-hot.

That very next evening there was to be a holiday dance in West One Hundred and Fifty-second street. Haaren and Wacker, both members of the team, and Capt. Billy, had made arrangements to be there. Young Mr. Moore had asked Miss Madeleine Atwater of Morris High School, who lives at 2583 Sedgwick avenue, the Bronx, to be his guest.

William Moore of DeWitt Clinton High, New York.

Billy Moore left the others to their own devices and took up his particular case by himself. What was he to say to Miss Atwater, who had set her heart on going?

"The game's called off," he began, as soon as he could get her on the phone.

"Isn't that too bad?"

"Yes," said young Moore, "and the worst of it is that they've set it down for Saturday."

"Oh, I hope you have better weather then," said the sweet voice over the wire.

"So do I," answered Capt. Billy, faintly. "Of course, you're going with me to the dance tomorrow night?" he ran on, secretly hoping that under the conditions Miss Madeleine would break the appointment.

"Of course," just as sweetly never taking the hint.

"I'll be there," went on the young fellow, rather weakly, but the girl never guessed.

Not only did Capt. Billy not get home early, but neither did Haaren or Wacker. The music and the lights and the superb floor and the swarm of pretty girls were too much for these stern gladiators of the gridiron.

Let us not go into the miserable details. Suffice it to say that not only did Commerce win, but her padded warriors ran the luckless wights from Clinton all over the gory field. Seldom has Clinton been so thoroughly whipped. And some were mean enough to blame Billy Moore.

"He went to a dance the night before," whispered one, "and he broke training."

The sad story ran the rounds; and then to the faculty. A meeting of the General Organization, which consists of 2500 students and instructors, was called.

Moore's name and those of the 15 other members of the team were written out on the blackboard before the entire assemblage as entitled to wear the football "C." And then Moore was stripped of his, just as a soldier might be stripped of his uniform.

Like the true sportsman he is, the boy took his medicine.

He entered the sprints and middle distances whenever he got a chance; he ran at all the high school games in New York and Brooklyn, winning point after point for Clinton High and helping land many a championship. His wins he topped off only a few days ago by taking down first in the 100 and 220-yard dashes at the Columbia interscholastic meet, and by being a member of the mile relay team which won the inter-high school contest down in Philadelphia at the University of Pennsylvania.

What's more, he goes to Princeton in the autumn, and let Harvard, Yale, Columbia and the rest of them look to their laurels. Moore, Princeton '17, is as likely a looking freshman as ever stepped beneath old Nassau's classic shades.

Every Blemish Removed In Ten Days

I Will Tell Every Reader of This Paper How FREE.

Your Complexion Makes or Mars Your Appearance.

PEARL LA SAGE, former actress who now offers to tell women of the most remarkable complexion treatment ever known.

This great beauty marvel has instantly produced a sensation. Stubborn cases have been cured that baffled physicians and beauty specialists for years. You have never in all your life used or heard of anything like it. Makes muddy complexions, red spots, pimples, blackheads, eruptions vanish almost like magic. No cream, lotion, enamel salve, plaster, bandage, mask, massage, diet or apparatus, nothing to swallow. It doesn't matter whether or not your complexion is a "fright," whether your face is full of muddy spots, peppery blackheads, embarrassing pimples and eruptions, or whether your skin is rough and "porey," and you've tried almost everything under the sun to get rid of the blemishes. This wonderful treatment, in just ten days, positively removes every blemish and beautifies your skin in a marvelous way. You look years younger. It gives the skin the bloom and tint of purity of a freshly-blown rose. In ten days you can be the subject of wild admiration by all your friends, no matter what your age or condition of health. All methods now known are cast aside. There is nothing to wear, nothing to take internally. Your face, even arms, hands, shoulders are beautified beyond your fondest dreams. All this I will absolutely prove to you before your own eyes in your mirror in ten days. This treatment is absolutely harmless to the most delicate skin, and very pleasant to use. A PAGE FOR WOMEN

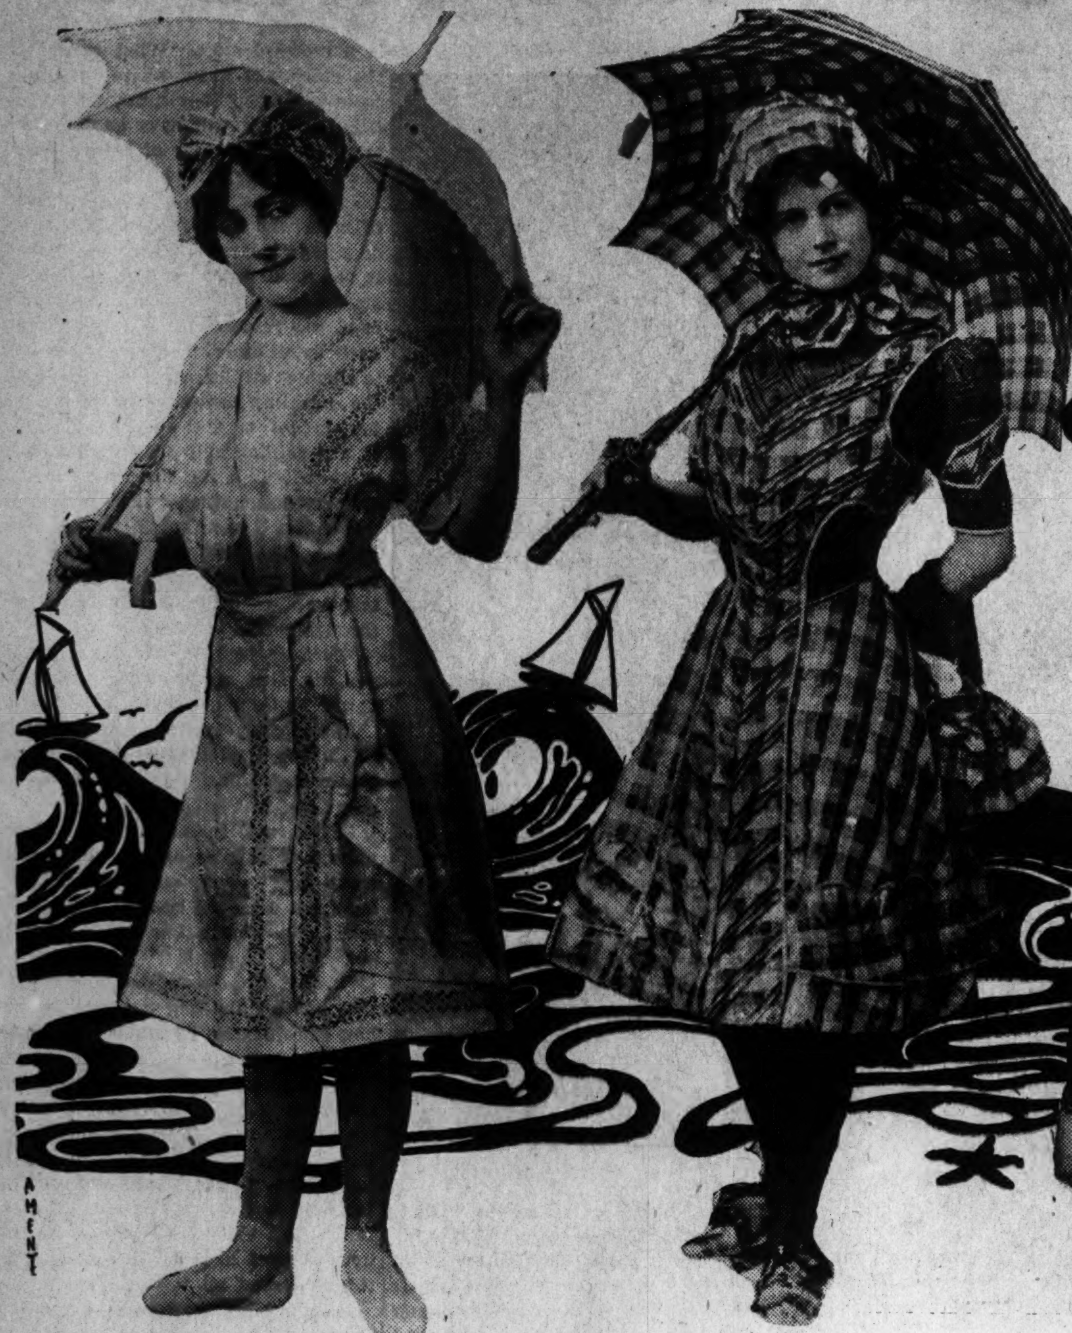
Silken Suits for the Summer Surf



A white satin creation.

A high-necked novelty of pleated satin.

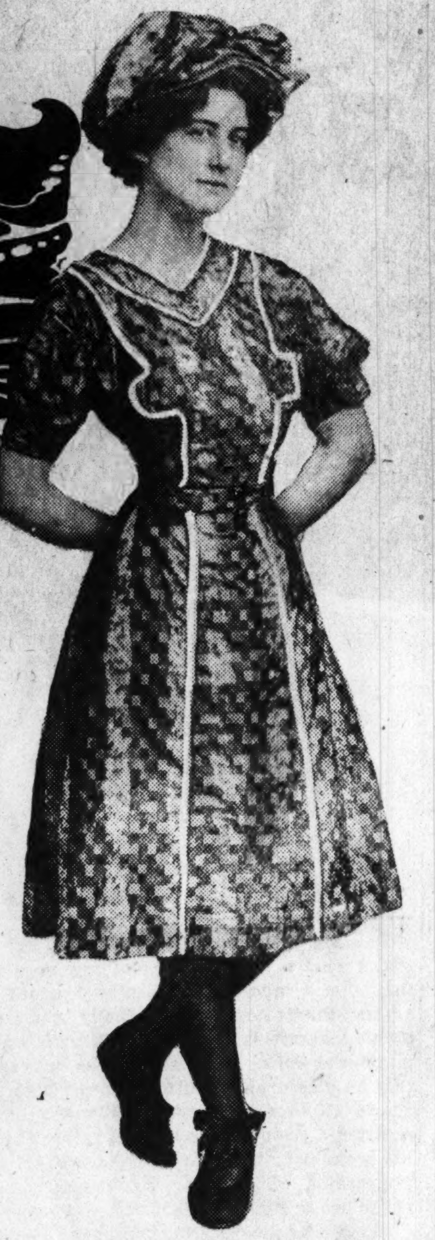
BATHING suits for this summer are of such exquisite fabrics and of such elaborate design that the suspicion whispers itself they are not intended to be worn in the surf, but to display the charms of their fair wearers on promenade along the beach.

On this page are illustrated four of the most charming models of the suits now in vogue at the seashore and lakeside. All are of silk and satin and all are as richly ornamental as if they were intended for summer frocks instead of being destined to be drenched in the ocean.

The suit to the left at the top is of white satin, elaborately adorned with lace. The one next to it is of pleated satin and has a striking feature in its high cut about the neck. The suit to the right is of Dresden silk, with a checker-work of brilliant hues.

The fourth costume is of moire silk and carries the promenade idea so far that a corset is worn beneath it.

Many of the fashionable bathing suits have parasols and handbags of the same fabric to go with them, and also bathing caps.



A striking costume of Dresden silk.

Every Woman Her Own Button Maker

THE use of buttons has been continued on the season's dresses, and as a decorative feature of importance it should be recognized by all women who are clever enough to emphasize little things. Buttons in the wonderful variety of forms are attractive, but they need not be bought if you are clever enough with your eyes and your needle.

Molds are purchasable in all sizes and shapes. It is wise to have a collection of them always at hand, for frequently one or two are necessary to finish a drapery, a sash or a band.

When covering a button mold, cut a disk of material twice the diameter of the mold. Gather the edges, draw up, clip the mold into the little bag and sew on the wrong side over and over. Do not have the materials so large that a lump is formed in the center of the under side, as this prevents a flat adjustment on the dress.

Many little ways of decorating these hand-covered buttons are yours if you will but heed the notes on effective gowns.

One type of ratine-covered form has a double row of stitches around the edge, made of coarse silk in two colors. This gives a beautiful effect.

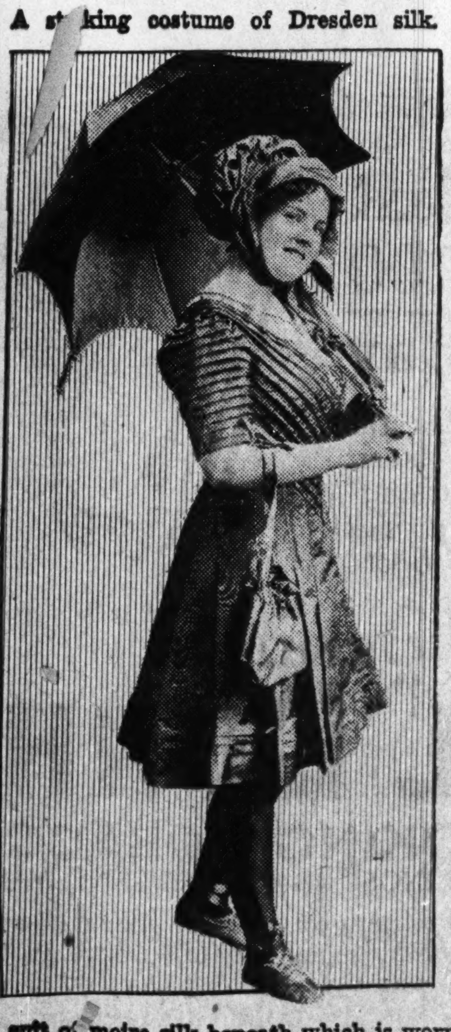
French knots, made before the molds are covered, are easily applied, and in either one color or a combination of shades make quick decoration.

Net or lace covering satin molds of a contrasting color makes an attractive background for quick embroidery. One exquisite model of flowered voile has a girdle of tapestry-blue silk and a new guimpe. Buttons are made of blue silk, covered with net and embroidered in pink and blue floss in flowers to echo the blossoms scattered over the voile. Any flower idea can be carried out in this way.

Square buttons, covered and embroidered in solid stitch so that a square on the diagonal forms the center, are very new. Conventional forms are easily embroidered, if you take the weave of the goods for a guide. Sometimes the pattern of the material will give an excellent background, which you can work in solid colors and have an expensive disk for a few minutes' work.

Tiny buttons, covered with taffeta or satin and shaped to resemble berries, are made by gathering a disk over a pad of raw cotton, sewing and attaching to twisted silk for the stems. These are applied as if they grew on a running vine, the twisted silk threads forming the stem.

These hints should prove an impetus to the home dressmaker who can follow a suggestion to its embroidery finish.



A suit of moire silk beneath which is worn a corset.

Many Chemisettes a Wardrobe Necessity

THIS season one of the features emphasized by fashion is the chemisette of sheer white material. Scarcely a frock appears without its yoke of shadow lace or net. As a rule, these are detachable, for they become soiled very quickly, therefore require frequent laundering. If the chemisette is separate from the frock, it is extremely practical, and it is a wise plan to have an assortment of guimpes and chemisettes. Many attractive designs appear in the shops, and these can be easily copied by the clever woman who sews.

One of the loveliest chemisettes is of white net embroidered with the Bulgarian colors.

Purchase net of a firm quality and fit it perfectly to the neck. About the bottom place a band of white elastic to hold it tightly about the waist. Stitch a finely tucked strip down the front and embroider the design in red, blue, yellow and black. The base of the collar is adorned in the same manner. Fine white net is used for another chemisette, and this has a simple little design embroidered in dark blue and white on the collar and front of the chemisette.

These chemisettes of net are especially cool and give a neat appearance to the neck. A smart little chemisette is fashioned of white crepe de chine joined to a strip of strong net.

Beneath a hemstitched fold stitch a graduated pleating of the crepe de chine and cover three small button molds with the crepe de chine to adorn the front. Finish the top of the collar with a pleating of crepe de chine. If desired the neck can be made low and finished with a pleating.

Should your frock require a guimpe with long sleeves, purchase shadow lace and plain white net. First fit the net perfectly and over this place the shadow lace and cut the net from beneath.

Stitch two narrow pleatings of plain net down the front and sew a line of small black-covered buttons from the collar to the end of the lace.

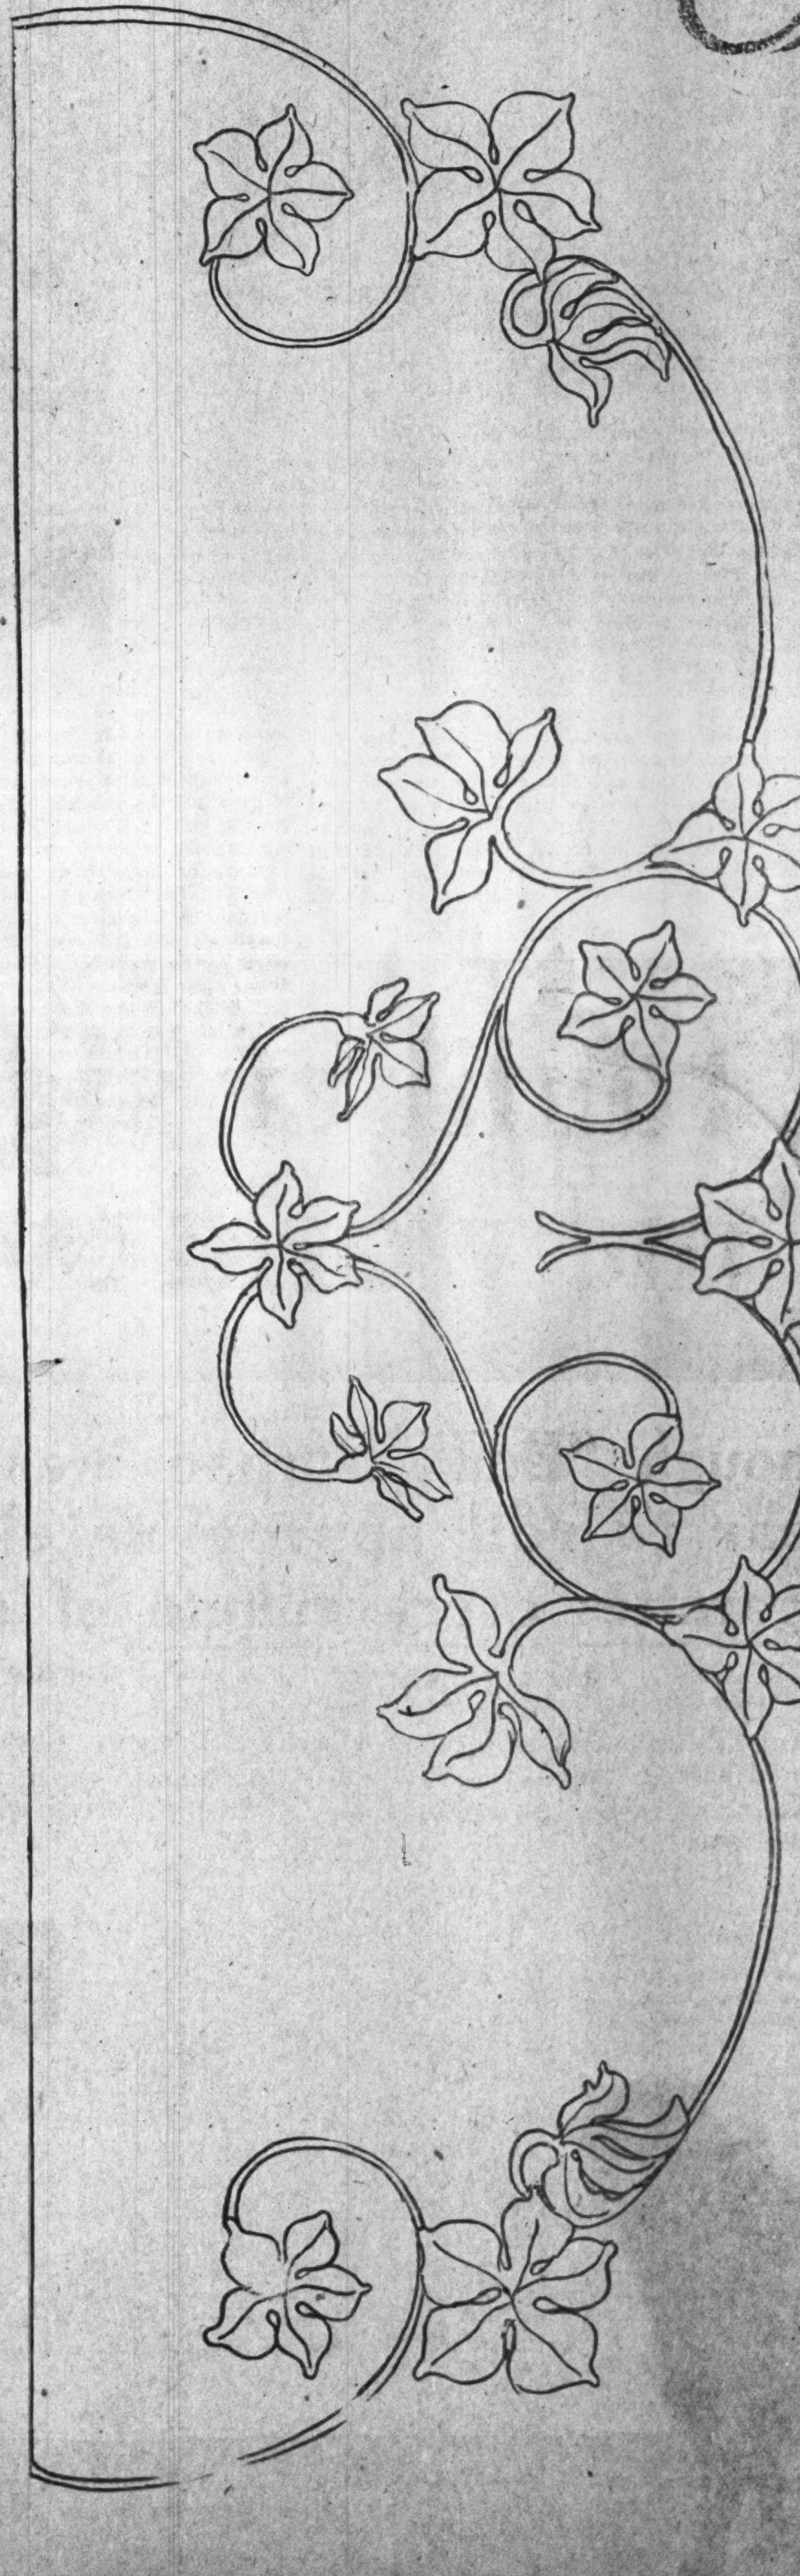
Make the lower portion of the sleeves of the shadow lace either of the full bishop type or closely fitted to the arm. Shadow lace can be had at moderate prices, and being wide a very small amount is required for a chemisette or guimpe. If you embroider well, many attractive touches of hand-work can be added to your guimpes of net with a very little expenditure of time or money.

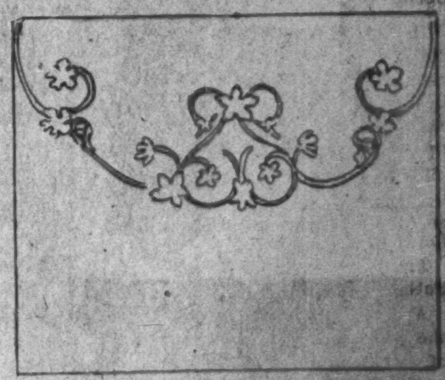
Supply your wardrobe with a variety of chemisettes, for the summer weather demands a fresh one each day.

The corsage bouquet which fashion will favor for the next few weeks is to be composed of white sweet peas and sunset roses, which are yellowish pink in tone. Of course the mode in corsage bouquets changes with the weeks under the stress of garden changes. However, the orchid known as the Purple Cattleya combined with lilies of the valley—one orchid to each bouquet—is never out of season or mode.

Japan's foreign purchases of five articles of food in 1912 aggregated more than $24,000,000, the total imports of the products referred to being: Wheat, $2,196,149; rice, $15,036,353; flour, $857,626; beans and peas, $5,084,454; condensed milk, $1,070,086.

EMBROIDERY DESIGN for HANDKERCHIEF CASE





Directions for Transferring Pattern.

IF YOU follow the directions carefully, three to five transfers may be made from the pattern on this page to cloth.

The process is simple: Spread the cloth on a smooth, hard surface. Dampen the back of the pattern until you can see the print through the paper. Lay the paper upon the cloth and with the bowl of a spoon press down upon the cloth, being careful to press firmly and not tear the paper. If a dry piece of paper is laid over the dampened paper the danger of tearing is lessened. By this means the pattern will be printed on the cloth.

Cut out and preserve this page. If you desire additional copies, buy them from your newsdealer immediately, as he does not keep back numbers of the Sunday Post-Dispatch in stock.

HAS WOMAN NO WITS WHEN SHE FACES FIRE ?

Mrs. Valesh Urges Upon Her Sex the Necessity of Remaining Cool-Headed in Times of Danger, and Also Presents Some Practical Rules of Prevention.

By Eva McDonald Valesh,
President National Woman's Fire Prevention Association.

YOU, woman, upset an alcohol stove. You, another woman, wear a flimsy, fluffy white dress and you step on a match-head.

What do you do? We all know. You scream, you wring your hands and you rush up and down, fanning the flames. Then you die, or else you are scarred with burns for life. And it is all unnecessary.

Only the occasional woman is cool and self-poised. The average woman is subject to panic; in time of danger she is paralyzed with fear. What is the use of denying it? In facing death and disaster the average woman is not the equal of the average man. Why shouldn't women admit this obvious fact?

Some of us do. So we have organized the National Woman's Fire Prevention Association with the idea of teaching women poise, nerve, self-control, caution—in emergencies. Thirty seconds of wits is worth thirty minutes of screaming. We propose to teach women to use their wits, not their voices, when the calamity comes which a little calm will prevent or lessen nine times out of ten.

Our main idea is—poise in thirty seconds.

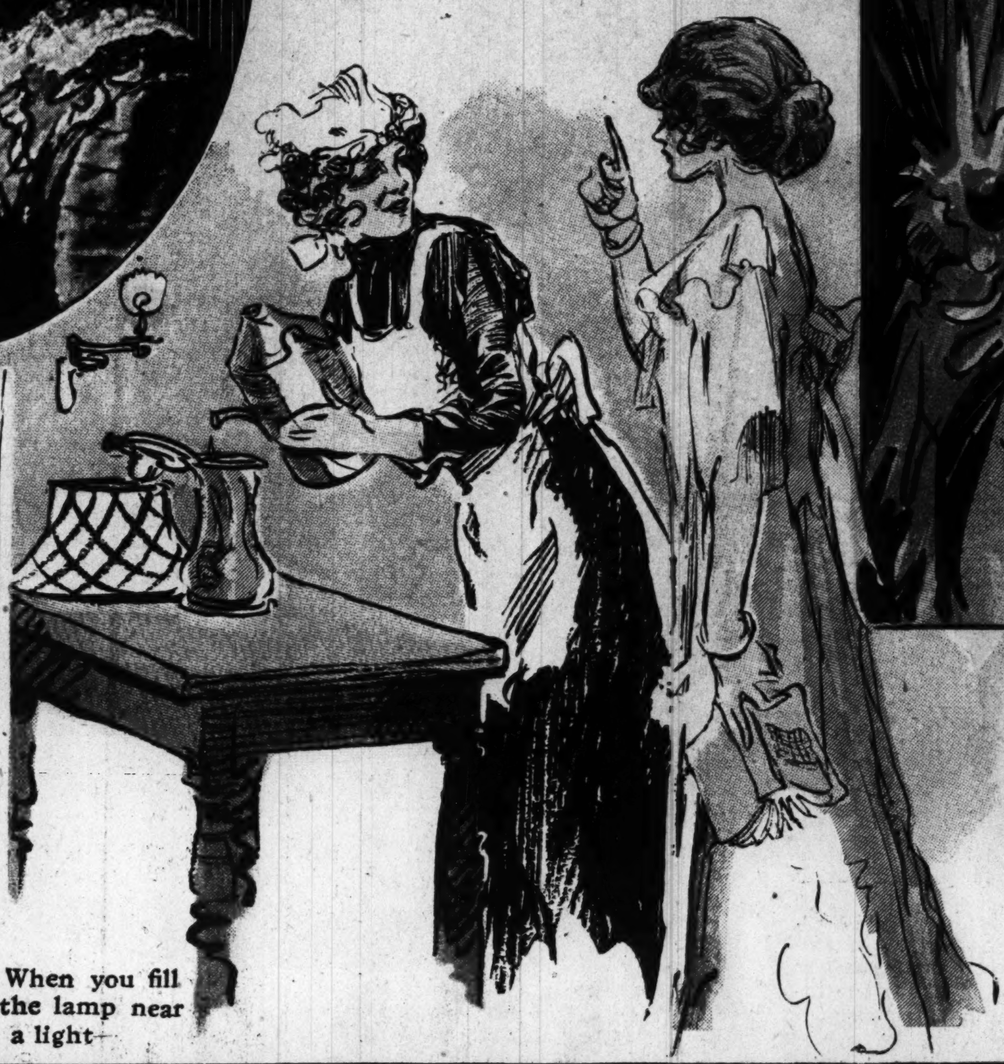
Suppose a woman catches fire at the stove or from the grate; or another steps on a match, or a puff of wind blows a gas jet against her dress. Our purpose is to instil in them just one thing—stop! think! just for a moment. Don't run. Pick up the nearest rug or table cover and wrap up in it. Then roll on the flames, or beat them out under the covering. But what does the average woman do at such a time? She screams, runs up and down, often jumps out the window and dies miserably.

Again, your home has its little fire. Don't waste time trying to put it out. You may catch on fire yourself. Turn in an alarm. Very often you will have the engines in one minute. And every woman ought to know the location of the nearest fire-box.

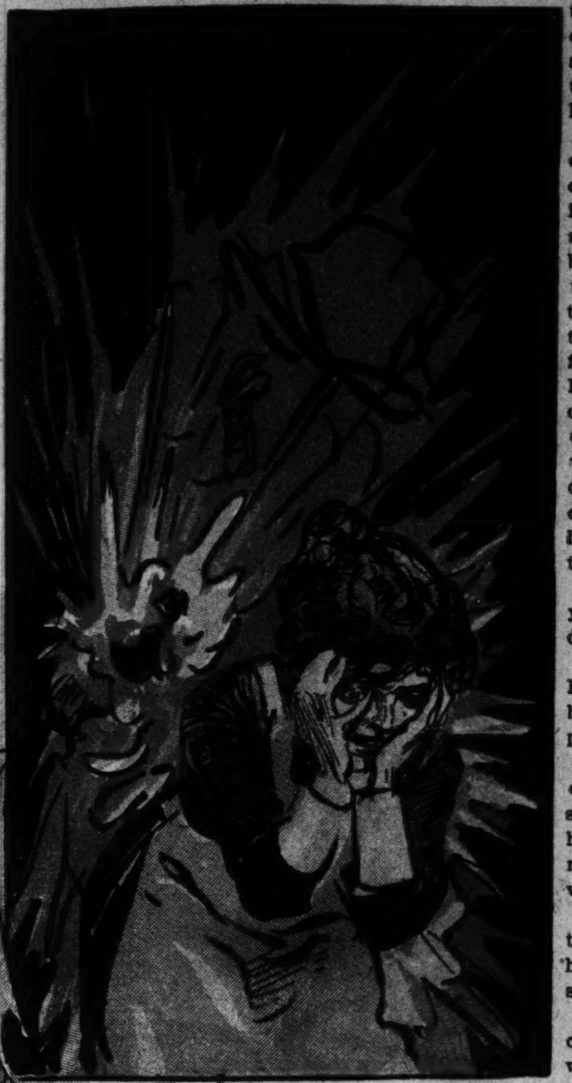
Eva McDonald Valesh.

One of my friends saw just what a woman ought not to do at a fire the other day. In the rear of an apartment house a big shed caught fire. The flames were shooting up two stories high, threatening at least two buildings filled with people. This woman could have turned in an alarm in fifteen seconds and brought the firemen. Instead, she filled a dishpan with water and poured it on the roaring flames below; then she filled another and another. It took three engines pumping like mad to get the flames under control when they arrived ten minutes later. If the lady with the dishpan had turned in an alarm instead of running to her kitchen sink the damage would have been nothing, and $100,000 worth of property, besides a hundred lives, would not have been put in danger.

How many women know what to do in a theatre horror?—and we will have one some day. There is fire to face, and panic, too. The impulse of the crowd is to escape by the way it came in, heedless of, perhaps, the twenty other exits which the law requires. We shall teach our women to look about them when they settle in their seats before the curtain goes up and pick out the nearest exit in case of fire or panic. That will divide the fleeing audience into a dozen streams of humanity and perhaps let every one escape. But who are the women today who take a look about them and pick out their particular exit in case of emergency?



When you fill the lamp near a light—



This is what happens.

Some day we shall have a great fire in a crowded store. What women in the store will know where the staircases are when they must get out in a hurry? We will have another factory fire. How many of the girls will know the quickest and safest way out?

Take another case of poise—a friend of mine who lived on the sixth story of a big apartment house was waked in the small hours of the morning by smoke and the cry of fire. Her husband was rescuing their little girl and their small store of jewelry. They had to climb down the rear fire-escape, with the crackling flames below them—the fire was on the first and second floors. It was raining and pitch dark. Back of them was a big apartment house, the windows filled with screaming women, who were not in the slightest danger. Yet those who were in danger could not see to clutch the rungs of the ladders down which they had to climb through smoke to safety.

"Turn on your electric lights, all of you, so that we can see to climb down!" cried my friend.

And so they saw their way to safety. But nobody had thought of the lights before that. That was an example of poise, and in a woman!

As we get further along in our classes we purpose to show the women some real examples—horrible, perhaps, but none the less real. We may read of a woman burned to death—very well.

"Please, Mrs. So-and-So, go down to that address and find out for yourself how the woman's life could have been saved."

The real thing is to get that subconscious help to self-control which we all have in us if we can only bring it out. And right here let me say it is easier to teach the working girl or business woman this very thing than it is to teach the society woman or the housekeeper; and the housekeeper is the hardest of all.

Many society women have the fad that they owe a duty to the community. But they are nearly all hazy as to what particular duty they owe, and just how much time they ought to spend in doing it. Suppose we send one of these ladies down to the home where a little mother has been burned to death. Let her see the poor, tired, fragile frame at rest at last—then perhaps she may do some thing.

"The Story of Red Eve, the Dauntless, and of Murgh, Gateway of the Gods, Whose Dreadful Galley Still Sails from East to West and from West to East, Yes, and Evermore Shall Sail."

(Copyright, by Doubleday, Page & Co.)

SYNOPSIS OF PRECEDING CHAPTERS.

MURGH, the mysterious, the doom of the East, starts West.

Eve Clavering and her cousin Hugh de Cressi her sweetheart, and Grey Dick, the archer, in the year 1346, after a conflict with Eve's father and Sir Edmund Acour, who wishes to marry Eve, and the noblemen's fighting men, escape through a Blythburgh marsh fire, set to trap them, and a fight, in which Hugh kills Eve's brother John, and swims the River Blyth, to sanctuary with Father Andrew Arnold in Dunwich. Father Andrew tells Hugh he has discovered that Acour is a spy, seeking to find a safe place to land 50,000 Normans on the Suffolk coast to set the crown of England on Duke John as a vassal to Philip of France.

Father Andrew forbids Hugh and Eve to marry for a year as penance for the killing of John. He tells Hugh of a trip to Cathay, where he met Murgh, and predicts that Hugh and Eve will live through all their troubles. The priest sends Hugh and Grey Dick to London with a letter of recommendation for pardon and a note warning King Edward against Acour. The King forgives Hugh and Dick, and in a contest Dick beats all the King's archers. Hugh and Dick then start home.

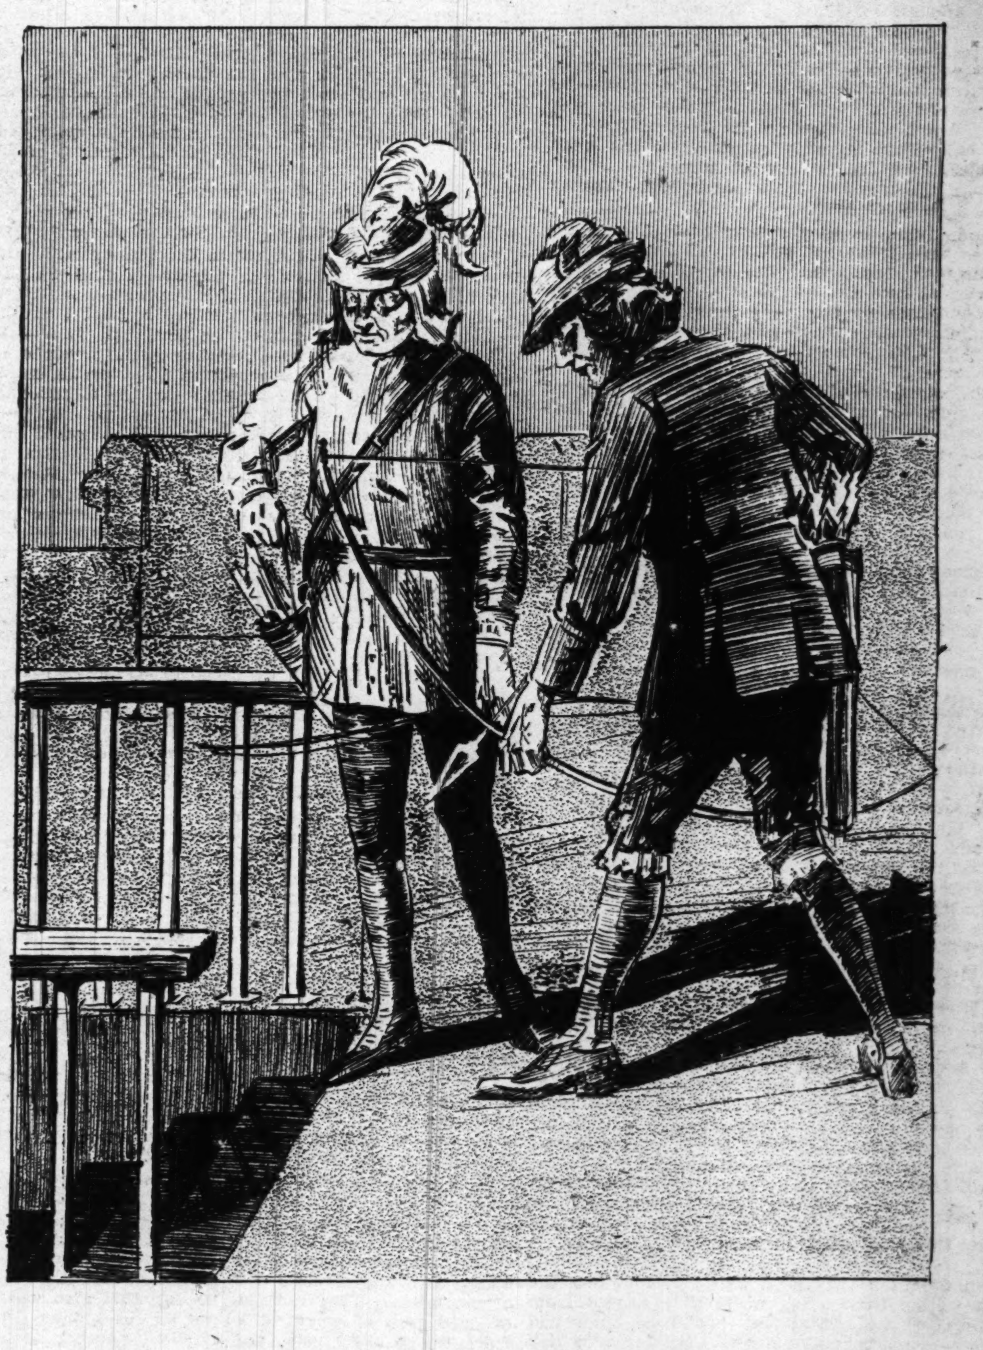
Acour, aided by his chaplain, sets a snare for Eve, who, believing that he and his men have gone away, returns to her father's home. Her father imprisons her. Acour tells her that Hugh is dead. She refuses to marry Acour. His chaplain prepares a love philtre, which is given to her in her food. When the drug takes effect, she is led with Acour before the marriage altar, and the chaplain marries them just as Father Andrew and Hugh arrive at the chapel. In a fight Hugh is wounded and Acour and the chaplain escape. Father Andrew tells Eve that "the knot the church ties it can unloose." He promises to lay the matter before the Pope.

Hugh and Dick fight valorously on the field of Crecy. Hugh lets a pleading French knight escape. Later he strikes down Pierre de la Roche in combat, thinking he has beaten Acour, but finds that he has spared Acour's life and slain de la Roche, with whom Acour had changed armour to escape Dick's arrows. Hugh and Dick ask permission of the English King to follow the fleeing Acour but they are told to wait. After the fall of Calais, Hugh's father visits him and reports Eve is well and sends her love. Father Andrew writes to Hugh that the Pope has refused to dissolve Eve's marriage to Acour until he can hear all parties to the case. Eve in a letter urges Hugh to get the King's permission to follow Acour. She trusts in the outcome if they meet. The King gives this permission and Hugh and Dick go to Venice. They inform the English Envoy there that Hugh has come to offer combat to Acour.

A fog creeps upon Venice. Hugh, accompanied by Dick, is received by the Doge, and Hugh challenges Acour to combat. Acour and Nicholas plot to kill Hugh, for which Nicholas has little stomach, for he, like most others in Venice, has a feeling of disaster about to come upon the city. Dick and Hugh go at night to look over the field of honor. They view the arrival of the Mysterious Murgh, the Man from the East. Murgh looses the arrow of death over Venice.

Hugh and Dick, on going to the field of combat, find that Acour has fled, and Hugh is declared to be victor. Suddenly the earth rocks and heaves and the sea rolls in upon Venice. The multitude at the place of arms flee in terror. Following the earthquake comes from the East the Black Death, which travels to all Europe. Hugh and Dick go to Acour's palace. Before the private altar they find Nicholas, who is smitten with the plague. He says Acour has fled to Avignon, there to obtain confirmation of his marriage to Eve, after hearing that Eve and Father Andrew were on their way to Avignon to have the marriage to Acour dissolved. Nicholas writes a confession of his part in Acour's treachery to be presented to the Pope. Nicholas dies.

Hugh and Grey Dick go to Avignon. Outside the city they come upon a mob attacking Jews, whom the people suspect of having caused the plague. Hugh and Dick save the Jews. A man who says he is a notary named Basil tells them he will get audience with the Pope for them. Then Basil and Acour plan to let the people of Avignon attack Hugh and Dick as friends of the Jews. Hugh and Dick meet Father Andrew and learn Eve is ill in Avignon. Hugh sees Eve. Hugh and Dick are summoned by Basil with a false message to the Pope's palace. Basil leads them into a mob. They fight their way out and flee to a great tower. They draw up the drawbridge, safe for a time.



Hugh and Dick shot their arrows, nor could they miss, seeing what was their target.

CHAPTER XVIII.

The Plague Pit.

SEVEN long days had gone by and still Hugh and Grey Dick held out in their Tower fortress.

Though as yet unhurt, they were weary indeed, since they must watch all night and could only sleep by snatches in the daytime, one lying down to rest while the other kept guard.

As they had foreseen, except by direct asault, the place proved impregnable, its moat protecting it upon three sides and the sheer wall of the old city terminating in the deep fosse upon the fourth. In its little armory, among other weapons they had found a great store of arrows and some bows, whereof Hugh took the best and longest. Thus armed with these they placed themselves behind the loopholes of the embattled gateway, whence they could sweep the space before them. Or if danger threatened them elsewhere, there were embrasures whence they could command the bases of the walls. Lastly, also, there was the central tower, whereof they could hold each landing with the sword.

Thrice they had been attacked, since there seemed to be hundreds of folk in Avignon bent upon their destruction, but each time their bitter arrows, that rarely seemed to miss, had repulsed the foe with loss. Even when an onslaught was delivered on the main gateway at night, they had beaten their assailants by letting fall upon them through the machicoulis or overhanging apertures, great stones that had been piled up there, perhaps generations before, when the place was built.

Still the attacks did not slacken. Indeed the hate of the citizens of Avignon against these two bold Englishmen, whose courage and resource they attributed to help given them by the powers of evil seemed to grow from day to day, even as the plague grew in the streets of that sore-afflicted city. From their walls they could see friars preaching a kind of crusade against them. They pointed toward the tower with crucifixes, invoking their hearers to pull it stone from stone and slay the wizards within, the wizards who conspired with the accursed Jews even beneath the eyes of His Holiness the Pope, to bring doom on Avignon.

The eighth morn broke at length, and its first red rays discovered Hugh and Dick kneeling side by side, behind the battlements of the gateway. Each of them was making petition to heaven in his own fashion for forgiveness of his sins, since they were outworn and believed that this day would be their last.

"What did you pray for, Dick?" asked Hugh, glancing at his companion's face, which in that half light looked deathlike and unearthly.

"What did I pray for? Well, for the first part let it be; that's betwixt me and whatever Power sent me out to do its business on the earth. But for the last—I'll tell you. It was that we may go hence with such a guard of dead French as never yet escorted two Englishmen from Avignon to heaven—or hell. Ay, and we will, master, for today, as they shouted to us, they'll storm this tower; but if our strength holds out there's many a one who'll never win its crest."

"Rather would I have died peacefully, Dick. Yet the blood of these hounds will not weigh upon my soul, seeing that we saved a woman and two children from their cruel deviltries. Oh! could I know that Red Eve and Sir Andrew were safe away, I'd die a happy man."

"I think we shall know that and much more before tomorrow's dawn, master, or never know anything again. Look! they gather yonder. Now let us eat, for perhaps later we shall find no time."

The afternoon drew on toward evening and still these two lived. Of all the hundreds of missiles which were shot or hurled at them, although a few struck, not one of them pierced their armor so as to do them hurt. The walls and battlements or some good Fate had protected them. Thrice had the French come on, and thrice they had retreated before these arrows that could not miss, and as yet bridge and doors were safe.

"Look," said Dick as he set down a cup of wine that he had drained, for his thirst was raging, "they send an embassy," and he pointed to a priest, the same mad-eyed fellow who preached in the square when the notary Basil led them into a trap, and to a man with him who

"What then?" asked Dick. "As we cannot fly, where shall we die?"

"On the roof of the old tower, I think, whence we can hurl ourselves at last and so perhaps escape being taken alive, and torment. Look you, Dick, that tower is mounted by three straight flights of steps. The first two of these we'll hold with such arrows as remain to us—there are three and twenty, as I think—and the last with ax and sword. Listen! They come! Take a brand from the hall hearth and let us go light the flambeaux."

So they went and set fire to the great torches of wood and tallow that were set in their iron holders to light the steps of the tower. Ere the last of them was burning they heard their enemies ravening without.

"Listen!" said Hugh as they ascended to the head of the first flight of stairs. "They are across the moat."

As he spoke the massive doors crashed in beneath the blows of a baulk of timber.

"Now," said Hugh, as they strung their bows, "six arrows apiece here, if we can get off so many, and the odd 11 at our next stand. Ah, they come."

The mob rushed into the hall below, waving torches and swords and hunting it as dogs hunt a covert.

"The English wizards have hid themselves away," cried a voice. "Let us burn the place, for so we are sure to catch them."

"Nay, nay," answered another voice, that of the mad friar. "We must have them beneath the torture, that we may learn how to lift the curse from Avignon, and the names of their accomplices on earth and in hell. Search, search, search!"

"Little need to search," said Grey Dick, stepping out on the landing. "Devil, go join your fellow-devils in the hell you talk of," and he sent an arrow through his heart.

For a moment there followed the silence of consternation while the mob stood staring at their fallen leader. Then with a yell of rage they charged the stair and that fray began which was told of in Avignon for generations. Hugh and Dick shot their arrows, nor could they miss, seeing what was their target; indeed some of those from the great black boy pinned foe to foe beneath them. But so crowded were the assailants on the narrow stair that they could not shoot back. They advanced helpless, thrust to their doom by the weight of those who pressed behind.

Now they were near, the dead, still on their feet, being borne forward by the living, to whom they served as shields. Hugh and Dick ran to the head of the second flight and thence shot off the arrows that remained.

Dick loosed the last of them, and of this fearful shaft it was said that it slew three men, piercing through the body of one, the throat of the second and burying its barb in the skull of the third on the lowest step. Now Dick unstrung his bow, and thrust it into its case on his shoulder, for he was minded that they should go together at the last.

"Shafts have sung their song," he said, with a fierce laugh; "now it is the turn of ax and sword to make another music."

Then he gripped Sir Hugh by the hand, saying:

"Farewell, master. Oh, I hold this a merry death, such as the Saints grant to few. Ay, doubtless your lady has gone before. Or at worst soon she will follow after and greet you in the Gate of Death, where Murgh sits and keeps his count of passing souls."

"Farewell, friend," answered Hugh, "be she quick or dead, thus Red Eve would wish that I should die. A Cressi! A Cressi!" he cried and drove his sword through the throat of a soldier who rushed at him.

They had fought a very good fight, as doubtless the dead were telling each other while they passed from that red stair to such rest as they had won. They had fought a very good fight and it was hard to say which had done the best, Hugh's white sword or Dick's gray ax. And now, unwounded still save for a bruise or two, they stood there in the moon light upon the stark edge of the tall tower, the foe in front and black space beneath. There they stood leaning on ax and sword and drawing their breath in great sobs, those two red harvestmen who that day had toiled so hard in the rich fields of death.

For a while the ever-gathering crowd of their assailants remained still staring at them. Then the leaders began to whisper to each other, for they scarcely seemed to dare to talk aloud.

"What shall we do?" asked one. "These are not men. No men could have fought as they have fought for seven days and at last have slain us like sparrows in a net and themselves remained unhurt."

"No," answered another, "and no mortal archer could send his shaft through the bodies of three. Still it is finished now unless they find wings and fly away. So let us take them."

"Yes, yes," broke in Grey Dick with his hissing laugh, "come and take us, you curs of Avignon. Having our breath again, we are ready to be taken," and he lifted his ax and shook it.

"Seize them," shouted the leader of the French. "Seize them!" echoed those who poured up the stairs behind.

But there the matter ended, since none could find stomach to face that ax and sword. So at length they took another counsel.

"Bring bows and shoot them through the legs. Thus we shall still bring them living to their trial," commanded the captain of the men of Avignon. He was their fourth captain on that one day, for the other three lay upon the stairs or in the hall.

Now Hugh and Dick spoke together, few words and swift, as to whether they should charge or leap from the wall and have done with it. While they spoke a little cloud floated over the face of the moon, so that until it had gone the French could not see to shoot.

"It's too risky," said Hugh. "If they capture us we must die a death to which I have no mind. Let us hurl our weapons at them, then leap."

"So be it," whispered Dick. "Do you aim at the captain on the left and I will take the other. Ready now! I think one creeps near to us."

"I think so, too," Hugh whispered back, "I felt the touch of his garments. Only he seemed to pass us from behind, which cannot be."

The cloud passed, and once again they were bathed in silver light. It showed the men of Avignon already bending their bows; it showed Hugh and Grey Dick lifting ax and sword to hurl them. But between them and their mark it showed also a figure that they knew well, a stern and terrible figure, wearing a strange cap of red and yellow and a cape of rich, black fur.

"O God of Heaven! 'tis Murgh the Helper," gasped Hugh.

"Ay, Murgh the Fire, Murgh the Sword," said Dick, adding quietly, "it is true I was wondering whether he would prove as good as his word. Look now, look! they see him also!"

See him they did, indeed, and for a moment there was silence on that crowded tower top where stood at least a score of men, while their fellows packed the hall and stair below by hundreds. All stared at Murgh, and Murgh stared back at them with his cold eyes. Then a voice screamed:

"Satan! Satan come from hell to guard his own! Death himself is with you! Fly, men of Avignon, fly!"

Small need was there for this command. Already, casting down their bows, those on the tower top were rushing to the mouth of the stair, and, since it was blocked with men, using their swords upon them to hew a road. Now those below, thinking that it was the English wizards who slew them, struck back.

Presently all that stair and the crowded hall below, black as the mouth of the pit, for such lights as still burned soon were swept away, rang with the screams and curses and stifled groans of the trodden down or dying. In the pitchy darkness brother smote brother, friend trampled out the life of friend, till the steep steps were piled high and the doorways blocked with dead. So hideous were the sounds indeed, that Hugh and Grey Dick crossed themselves, thinking that hell had come to Avignon, or Avignon sunk down to hell. But Murgh only folded his white-gloved hands upon his breast and smiled.

At length, save for the moaning of those hurt men who still lived, the dreadful tumult sank to silence. Then Murgh turned and spoke in his slow and icy voice:

"You were about to seek me in the fosse of this high tower, were you not, Hugh de Cressi and Richard Archer? A foolish thought, in truth, and a sinful, so sinful that it would have served you well if I had let you come. But your strait was sore and your faith was weak, and I had no such command. Therefore I have come to others whose names were written in my book. Ay, and being half human after all—for does not your creed tell you that I was born of Sin? I rejoice that it is given to me to protect those who would have protected me when I seemed to stand helpless in the hands of cruel men. Nay, thank me not. What need have I of your thanks, which are due to God alone! And question me not, for why should I answer your questions, even if I know those answers? Only do my bidding. This night seek whom you will in Avignon, but tomorrow ere the dawn ride away, for we three must meet again at a place appointed before this winter's snows are passed."

"O dread lord of Death, one thing, only one," began Hugh.

But Murgh held up his white-gloved hand and replied:

"Have I not said that I answer no questions? Now go forth and follow the promptings of your heart till we meet again."

Then gliding to the head of the stair he vanished in the shadow.

"Say, what shall we do?" asked Hugh in amazed voice.

"It matters little what we do or leave undone, master, seeing that we are fore-fated men whom, as I think, none can harm until a day that will not dawn tomorrow nor yet awhile. Therefore let us wash ourselves and eat and borrow new garments, if we can find any that are not soiled, and then, of the horses are still unharmed, mount and ride from this accursed Avignon for England."

"Nay, Dick, since first we must learn whether or no we leave friends behind us here."

"Ay, master, if you will. But since yonder Murgh said nothing of them, it was in my mind that they are either dead or fled."

"Not dead, I pray, Dick. Oh, I am sure, not dead, and I left living! When Red Eve and I met, Murgh had been with her and promised that she would recover and be strong," answered Hugh bravely, although there was a note of terror in his voice.

"Red Eve has other foes in Avignon besides the pest," muttered Grey Dick, adding: "still, let us have faith; it is a good friend to man. Did not yonder Helper chide us for our lack of it?"

They forced a way down the dead-cumbered tower stair, crawling through the darkness over the bodies of the fallen. They crossed the hall that also was full of dead, and of wounded whose pitiful groans echoed from the vaulted roof, and climbed another stair to their chamber in the gateway tower. Here from a spark of fire that still smouldered on the hearth, they lit the lamps of olive-oil and by the light of them washed off the stains of battle, and refreshed themselves with food and wine. These things done, Dick returned to the hall and presently brought thence two suits of armor and some cloaks which he had taken either from the walls or from off the slain. In these they disguised themselves as best they could, as De Noyon had disguised himself at Crecy.

Then, having collected a store of arrows whereof many lay about, they departed by the back entrance. The great front doorway was so choked with corpses that they could not pass it, since here had raged the last fearful struggle to escape. Going to the little stable yard, where they found their horses unharmed in the stalls, although frightened by the tumult and stiff from lack of exercise, they fed and saddled them and led them out. So presently they looked their last upon the Bride's Tower that had sheltered them so well.

"It has served our turn," said Hugh, glancing back at it from the other side of the deserted square, "but oh, I pray heaven that we may never see that charnel-house again!"

As he spoke a figure appeared from the shadow of a doorway, and ran toward them. Thinking it was that of some foe, Dick lifted his ax to cut him down, whereon a voice cried in English:

"Hold! I am David!"

"David!" exclaimed Hugh. "Then thanks be to God, for know, we thought you dead these many days."

"Ay, sir," answered the young man, "as I thought you. The rumor reached the Jews, among whom I have been hiding while I recovered of my hurts, that the Mad Monk and his fellows had stormed the tower and killed you both. Therefore I crept to learn for myself. Now I have found you by your voices, who never again hoped to look upon you living," and he began to sob in his relief and joy.

"Come on, lad," said Grey Dick kindly, "this is no place for greetings."

"Whither go you, sir?" asked David as he walked forward alongside of the horses.

"To seek that house where we saw Sir Andrew Arnold and the Lady Eve," answered Hugh, "if by any chance it can be found."

"That is easy, sir," said David. "As it happens, I passed it not much more than an hour ago and knew it again."

"Did you see anyone there?" asked Hugh eagerly.

"Nay, the windows were dark. Also the Jew guiding me said he had heard that all who dwelt in that house were dead of the plague. Still of this matter he knew nothing for certain."

Hugh groaned, but only answered:

"Forward!"

As they went David told them his story. It seemed that when he was struck down in the square where the crazy friar preached, and like to be stabbed and trampled to death, some of the Jews dragged him into the shadows and rescued him. Afterward they took him to a horrid and squalid quarter called La Juiverie, into which no Christian dare enter. Here he lay sick of his hurts and unable to get out until that very afternoon; the widow Rebecca, whom they had saved, nursing him all the while.

"Did you hear aught of us?" asked Dick.

"Ay, at first that you were holding Dead Bride's Tower bravely. So as soon as I might, I came to join you there if I could win in and you still lived. But they told me that you had fallen at last."

"Ah!" said Dick, "well, as it chances it was not we who fell, but that tale is long. Still, David, you are a brave lad who would have come to die with us, and my master will thank you when he can give his mind to such things. Say, did you hear aught else?"

"Ay, Dick; I heard two days ago that the French lord, Cattrina, whom Sir Hugh was to have fought at Venice, had left Avignon, none knew why or whither he went."

"Doubtless because of the plague and he wished to go where there was none," answered Dick.

But Hugh groaned again, thinking to himself that Acour would scarcely have left Avignon if Eve were still alive within its walls.

After this they went on in silence, meeting very few and speaking with none, for the part of the great city through which they passed seemed to be almost deserted. Indeed in this quarter the pest was so fearful that all who remained alive and could do so had fled elsewhere, leaving behind them only the sick and those who plundered houses.

"One thing I forgot to say," said David presently. "The Jews told me that they had certain information that the notary knave Basil was paid by the Lord Cattrina to lead us to that square where the fires burned in order that we might be murdered there. Further, our death was to be the signal for the massacre of all the Jews, only, as it chanced, their plan went awry."

"As will Basil's neck if ever I meet him again," muttered Grey Dick beneath his breath. "Lord! what fools we were to trust that man. Well, we've paid the price and, please God, so shall he."

They turned the corner and rode down another street, till presently David said:

"Halt! yonder is the house. See the cognizance above the gateway!"

Hugh and Dick leaped from their horses, the latter bidding David lead them into the courtyard and hold them there. Then they entered the house, of which the door was ajar, and by the shine of the moon that struggled through the window places, crept up the stairs and passages till they reached those rooms where Sir Andrew and Eve had lodged.

"Hist!" said Dick, and he pointed to a line of light that showed beneath the closed door.

Hugh pushed it gently and it opened a little. They looked through the crack, and within saw a man in a dark robe who was seated at a table counting out gold by the light of a lamp. Just then he lifted his head, having felt the draft of air from the open door. It was the notary Basil!

Without a word they entered the room, closing and bolting the door behind them. Then Dick leapt on Basil as a wolf leaps, and held him fast, while Hugh ran past him and threw wide the door of that chamber in which Eve had lain sick. It was empty. Back he came again and in a terrible voice, said:

"Now, Sir Notary, where are the Lady Eve and Sir Andrew her guardian?"

"Alas, Sir Knight," began the knave in a quavering voice, "both of them are dead."

"What!" cried Hugh supporting himself against the wall, for at this terrible news his knees trembled beneath him, "have you or your patron Cattrina murdered them?"

"Murdered them, Sir Knight! I do murder? I, a Christian and a man of peace! Never! And the noble Lord of Cattrina, Count de Noyon! Why, he wished to marry the lady, not to murder her. Indeed he swore that she was his wife."

"So you know all these things, do you, villain?" said Grey Dick, shaking him as a terrier shakes a rat.

"Sir Knight," went on the frightened fellow, "blame me not for the acts of God. He slew these noble persons, not I; I myself saw the lovely lady carried from this house wrapped in a red cloak."

"So you were in the house, were you?" said Grey Dick shaking him again. "Well, whither did they carry her, thief of the night?"

"To the plague pit, good sir; where else in these times?"

Now Hugh groaned aloud, his eyes closed, and he seemed as though he were about to fall. Grey Dick, noting it, for a moment let go of the notary and turned as though to help his master. Like a flash Basil drew a dagger from under his dirty robe and struck at Dick's back. The blow was well aimed, nor could an unprotected man on whom it fell have escaped death. But although Basil did not see it because of Dick's long cloak, beneath this cloak he wore the best of mail, and on that mail the slender dagger broke, its point falling harmless to the ground. Next instant Dick had him in his iron grip. Paying no further heed to Hugh, who had sunk to the floor a huddled heap, he began to speak into the lawyer's ear in his slow, hissing voice.

"Devil," he said, "whether or no you murdered Red Eve and Sir Andrew Arnold the saint, I cannot say for certain, though doubtless I shall learn in time. At least a while ago you who had taken our money, strove to murder both of us, or to cause us to be torn in pieces upon yonder square where the fires burned. Now, too, you have striven to murder me with that bodkin of yours, not knowing, fool, that I am safe from all men. Well, say your prayers, since you, too, journey to the plague pit, for so the gatherers of the dead will think you died."

"Sir," gasped the terrified wretch, "spare me and I will speak"——

"More lies," hissed Dick into his ear. "Nay, go tell them to the father of lies, for I have no time to waste in hearkening to them. Take your pay, traitor!"

A few seconds later Basil lay dead upon the floor.

Grey Dick looked at him. Kneeling down, he thrust his hands into the man's pockets, and took thence the gold that he had been hiding away when they came upon him, no small sum as it chanced.

"Our own come back with interest," he said with one of his silent laughs, "and we shall need monies for our faring. Why, here's a writing also which may tell those who can read it something."

He cast it on the table, then turned to his master, who was awakening from his swoon.

Dick helped him to his feet.

"What has passed?" asked Hugh in a hollow voice.

"Murgh!" answered Dick, pointing to the dead man on the floor.

"Have you killed him, friend?"

"Ay, sure enough, as he strove to kill me," and again he pointed, this time to the broken dagger.

Hugh made no answer, only seeing the writing on the table, took it up, and began to read like one who knows not what he does. Presently his eyes brightened and he said:

"What does this mean, I wonder. Hearken."

"Rouge, you have cheated me as you cheat all men and now I follow her who is gone. Be sure, however, that you shall reap your reward in due season.

"De Noyon."

"I know not," said Dick, "and the interpreter is silent," and he kicked the body of Basil. "Perhaps I was a little over hasty who might have squeezed the truth out of him before the end."

"'Her who is gone,'" reflected Hugh aloud. "'Tis Red Eve who is gone and De Noyon is scarcely the man to seek her among passed souls. Moreover, the Jews swear that he rode from Avignon two days ago. Come, Dick, let that carrion lie, and to the plague pit."

An hour later and they stood on the edge of that dreadful place, hearing and seeing things which are best left untold. A priest came up to them, one of those good men who, caring nothing for themselves, still dared to celebrate the last rites of the Church above the poor departed.

"Friends," he said, "you seem to be in trouble. Can I help you, for Jesus' sake?"

"Perchance, holy Father," answered Hugh. "Tell us, you who watch this dreadful place, was a woman wrapper in a red cloak thrown in here two or three days gone?"

"Alas, yes," said the priest with a sigh, "for I read the Office over her and others. Nay, what are you about to do? By now she is fathoms deep and burned away with lime so that none could know her. If you enter there the guards will not let you thence living. Moreover, it is useless. Pray to God to comfort you, poor man, as I will, who as sure it will not be denied."

Then Dick led, or rather carried, Hugh from the brink of that awesome, common grave.

CHAPTER XIX.

The Doom.

IT was the last night of February, the bitterest night perhaps of all that sad winter, when at length Hugh de Cressi, Grey Dick and David Day rode into the town of Dunwich. Only that morning they had landed at Yarmouth after a long, long journey whereof the perils and the horrors may be guessed but need not be written. France, through which they had passed, seemed to be but one vast grave over which the wail of those who still survived went up without cease to the cold, unpitying heavens.

Here in England the tale was still the same. Thus in the great seaport of Yarmouth scarcely enough people were left alive to inter the unshriven dead, nor of these would any stay to speak with them, fearing lest they had brought a fresh curse from overseas. Even the horses that they rode they took from a stable where they whinnied hungrily, none being there to feed them, leaving in their place a writing of the debt.

Betwixt Yarmouth and Dunwich they had traveled through smitten towns and villages, where a few wandered fearfully, distraught with sorrow or seeking food. In the streets the very dogs lay dead and in the fields they saw carcasses of cattle half hidden in a winding-sheet of snow. For the Black Plague spared neither man nor beast.

At the little port of Lowestoft they met a sullen sailorman who stood staring at the beach whereon his fishing boat lay overturned and awash for lack of hands to drag it out of reach of the angry sea. They asked him if he knew of how it fared with Dunwich.

By way of answer he cursed them, adding:

"Must I be forever pestered as to Dunwich? This is the third time of late that I have heard of Dunwich from wandering folk. Begone thither and gather tidings for yourselves, which I hope will please you as well as they do me."

"Now, if I were not in haste I would stay a while to teach you manners, you foul-mouthed churl," muttered Grey Dick between his teeth.

"Let the fellow be," said Hugh wearily; "the men of Lowestoft have ever hated those of Dunwich, and it seems that a common woe does not soften hearts. Soon enough we shall learn the truth."

"Ay, you'll learn it soon enough," shouted the brute after them. "Dunwich boats won't steal Lowestoft herrings for many a year!"

So they rode on through Kessland, which they reached as night was closing in, through Benacre and Wrenthem, also pest houses in which none seemed to dwell.

"Murgh has been here before us, I think," said Dick at length.

"Then I hope that we may overtake him," answered Hugh with a smile, "for I need his tidings—or his rest. Oh! Dick, Dick," he added, "I wonder has ever man borne a heavier burden for all this weary while? If I were sure, it would not be so bad, for when earthly hope is done we may turn to other comfort. But I'm not sure; Basil may have lied. The priest by the pot could swear only to a red cloak, of which there are many, though few be buried in them. And, Dick, there are worse things than that. Perchance Acour got her after all."

"And perchance he didn't," answered Dick. "Well, fret on if you will; the thing does not trouble me who for my part am sure enough."

"Of what, man, of what?"

"Of seeing the Lady Eve ere long."

"In this world or the next, Dick?"

"In this. I don't reckon of the next, mayhap there we shall be blind and not see. Besides, of what use is that world to you where it is written that they neither marry nor are given in marriage, but are as the angels? You'll make no good angel, I'm thinking, while as for the Lady Eve, she's too human for it as yet."

"Why do you think we shall see her on earth?" asked Hugh, ignoring these reflections.

"Because he who is called the Helper said as much, and whatever he may be he is no liar. Do you not remember what Red Eve told you when she awoke from that dream of hers, which was no dream? And do you not remember what Sir Andrew told you as to a certain meeting in the snow—pest upon it!" and he wiped some of the driving flakes from his face—"Sir Andrew, who is a saint, and, therefore, like Murgh, can be no liar?"

"If you think thus," said Hugh in a new voice, "why did you not say so before?"

"Because I love not argument, master, and if I had, you would ever have reasoned with me from Avignon to Yarmouth town and spoilt my sleep of nights! Oh! where is your faith?"

"What is faith, Dick?"

"The gift of belief, master. A very great gift, seeing what a man believes is and will be true for him, however false it may prove for others. He who believes nothing, sows nothing, and therefore reaps nothing, good or ill."

"Who taught you these things, Dick?"

"One whom I am not likely to forget, or you, either. One who is my master at archery and whose words, like his arrows, though they be few, yet strike the heart of hidden truth. Oh, fear not, doubtless sorrow waits you yonder," and he pointed toward Dunwich. "Yet it comes to my lips that there's joy beyond the sorrows, the joy of battle and of love—for those who care for love, which I think foolishness. There stands a farm, and the farmer is a friend of mine, or used to be. Let us go thither and feed these poor beasts and ourselves, or I think we will never come to Dunwich through this cold and snow. Moreover," he added thoughtfully, "joy or sorrow or both of them are best met by full men, and I wish to look to your harness and my own, for sword and ax are rusted with the sea. Who knows but that we may need them in Dunwich or beyond, when we meet with Murgh, as he promised that we should."

So they rode up to the house and found Dick's friend, the farmer, lying dead there in his own yard, whither his family had dragged him ere they determined to fly the place. Still, there was fodder in the stable and they lit a fire on the kitchen hearth and drank of the wine which they had brought with them from the ship, and ate of the bacon which still hung from the rafters. This done, they lay down to sleep a while. About 1 in the morning, however, Hugh roused Dick and David, saying that he could rest no more and that something in his heart bade him push on to Dunwich.

"Then let us follow your heart, master," said Dick, yawning. "Yet I wish it had waited till dawn to move you. Yes, let us follow your heart to good or ill. David, go you out and saddle up those nags."

For Dick had worked late at their mail and weapons, which now were bright and sharp again, and was very weary.

It was after 3 in the morning when at length, leaving the heath, they rode up to Dunwich Middlegate, expecting to find it shut against them at such an hour. But it stood open, nor did any challenge them from the guardhouse.

"They keep an ill watch in Dunwich nowadays," grumbled Dick. "Well, perchance there is one here to whom they can trust that business."

Hugh made no answer, only pressed on down the narrow street, that was deep and dumb with snow, till at length they drew rein before the door of his father's house, in the market place, the great house where he was born. He looked at the windows and noted that, although they were unshuttered, no friendly light shone in them. He called aloud, but echo was his only answer, echo and the moan of the bitter wind and the sullen roar of the sea.

"Doubtless all men are asleep," he said. "Why should it be otherwise at such an hour? Let us enter and waken them."

"Yes, yes," answered Dick as he dismounted and threw the reins of his horse to David. "They are like the rest of Dunwich—asleep."

So they entered and began to search the house by the dim light of the moon. First they searched the lower chambers, then those where Hugh's father and his brothers had slept, and lastly the attics. Here they found the pallets of the serving-folk upon the floor, but none at rest upon them.

"The house is deserted," said Hugh heavily.

"Yes, yes," answered Dick again, in a cheerful voice; "doubtless Master de Cressi and your brothers have moved away to escape the pest."

"Pray God they have escaped it!" muttered Hugh. "This place stifles me," he added. "Let us out."

"Whither shall we go, master?"

"To Blythburgh Manor," he answered, "for there I may win tidings. David, bide you here, and if you can learn aught follow us across the moor. The manor cannot be missed."

So once more Hugh and Dick mounted their horses and rode away through the town, stopping now and again before some house they knew and calling to its inmates. But though they called loudly none answered. Soon they grew sure that this was because there were none to answer, since of those houses many of the doors stood open. Only one living creature did they see in Dunwich. As they turned the corner near to the Blythburgh Gate they met a gray-haired man wrapped up in tattered blankets which were tied about him with haybands. He carried in his hand a beautiful flagon of silver. Doubtless he had stolen it from some church.

Seeing them, he cast this flagon into the snow and began to whimper like a dog.

"Mad Tom," said Dick, recognizing the poor fellow. "Tell us, Thomas, where are the folk of Dunwich?"

"Dead, dead; all dead!" he wailed, and fled away.

'Stay! What of Master de Cressi?" called Hugh. But the tower of the church round which he had vanished only echoed back across the snow, "What of Master de Cressi?"

Then at last Hugh understood the awful truth.

It was that, save those who had fled, the people of Dunwich were slain with the Sword of Pestilence, and all his kin among them.

They were on the Blythburgh Marshes, traveling thither by the shortest road. The moon was down and the darkness dense, for the snow-clouds hid the stars.

"Let us bide here a while," said Grey Dick as their horses blundered through the thick reeds. "It will soon be sunrise, and if we go on in this gloom we shall fall into some boghole or into the river, which I hear running on our left."

So they halted their weary horses and sat still, for in his wretchedness Hugh cared not what he did.

At length the east began to lighten, turning the sky to a smoky red. Then the rim of the sun rising out of the white-flecked ocean, threw athwart the desolate marsh a fierce ray that lay upon the snows like a sword of blood. They were standing on the crest of a little mound, and Dick, looking about him, knew the place.

"See," he said, pointing toward the river that ran near by, "it is just here that you killed young Clavering this day two years ago. Yonder also I shot the French knights, and Red Eve and you leapt into the Blyth and swam it."

"Ay," said Hugh, looking up idly, "but did you say two years, Dick? Nay, surely 'tis a score. Why," he added in a changed voice, "who may that be in the hollow?" and he pointed to a tall figure which stood beneath them at a distance, half hiden by the dark snow mists.

"Let us go and see," said Dick, speaking almost in a whisper, for there was that about this figure which sent the blood to his throat and cheeks.

He drove the spurs into his tired horse's sides, causing it to leap forward.

Half a minute later they had ridden down the slope of the hollow. A puff of wind that came with the sun drove away the mist. Dick uttered a choking cry and leapt from his saddle. For there, terrible, mighty, clothed in his red and yellow cap and robe of ebon furs, stood he who was named Murgh the Fire, Murgh the Sword, Murgh the Helper, Gate of the Gods!

They knelt before him in the snow, while, screaming in their fright, the horses fled away.

"Knight and Archer," said Murgh, in his icy voice, counting with the thumb of his white-gloved right hand upon the hidden fingers or his left. "Friends, you keep your tryst, but there are more to come. Have patience, there are more to come."

Then he became silent, nor dared they ask him any questions. Only at a motion of his arm they rose from their knees and stood before him.

A long while they stood thus in silence, till under Murgh's dreadful gaze Hugh's brain began to swim. He looked about him, seeking some natural thing to feed his eyes. Lo! yonder was that which he might watch, a hare crouching in its form not 10 paces distant. See, out of the reeds crept a great red fox. The hare smelt or saw, and leaped away. The fox sprang at it, too late, for the white fangs closed emptily behind its scut. Then with a little snarl of hungry rage it turned and vanished into the brake.

The hare and the fox, the dead reeds, the rising sun, the snow—oh, who had told him of these things?

Ah! he remembered now, and that memory set the blood pulsing in his veins. For where these creatures were should be more besides Grey Dick and himself and the Man of many names.

He looked toward Murgh to see that he had bent himself and with his gloved hand was drawing lines upon the snow. Those lines when they were done enclosed the shape of a grave!

"Archer," said Murgh, "unsheath your ax and dig."

As though he understood, Dick obeyed, and began to hollow out a grave in the soft and boggy soil.

Hugh watched him like one who dreams, wondering who was destined to fill that grave. Presently a sound behind caused him to turn his head.

Oh! certainly he was mad, for there over the rise not a dozen yards away came the beautiful ghost of Eve Clavering, clad in her red cloak. With her was another ghost, that of old Sir Andrew Arnold, blood running down the armor beneath his robe and in his hand the hilt of a broken sword.

Hugh tried to speak, but his lips were dumb, nor did these ghosts take any heed of him, for their eyes were fixed elsewhere. To Murgh they went and stood before him silent. For a while he looked at them, then asked in his cold voice:

"What am I, Eve Clavering?"

"The Man who came to visit me in my dream at Avignon and told me that I should live," she answered slowly.

"And who say you that I am, Andrew Arnold, priest of Christ the God?"

"He whom I visited in my youth in far Cathay," answered the old knight in an awed whisper. "He, who sat beside the pool behind the dragon-guarded doors and was named Gateway of the Gods. He who showed to me that we should meet again in such a place and hour as this."

"Whence come you now, priest and woman, and why?"

"We come from Avignon. We fled thence from one who would have done this maiden grievous wrong. He followed us. Not an hour gone he overtook us with his knaves. He set them on to seize this woman, hanging back himself. Old as I am I slew them both and got my death in it," and he touched the great wound in his side with the hilt of the broken sword. "Our horses were the better; we fled across the swamp for Blythburgh, he hunting us and seeking my life and her honor. Thus we found you as it was appointed."

Murgh turned his eyes. Following their glance, for the first time they saw Hugh de Cressi and near him Grey Dick laboring at the grave. Eve stretched out her arms and so stood with head thrown back, the light of the daybreak shining in her lovely eyes and on her outspread hair. Hugh opened his lips to speak but Murgh lifted his hand and pointed behind them.

They turned and there, not 20 paces from them, clad in armor and seated on a horse was Edmund Acour, Count de Noyon, Seigneur of Cattrina.

He saw, then wheeled round to fly.

"Archer, to your work!" said Murgh, "you know it."

Ere the words had left his lips the great black bow was bent and ere the echoes died away the horse, struck in its stride by the keen arrow, sank dying to the ground.

Then Murgh beckoned to the rider and he came as a man who must. But, throwing down the bow, Grey Dick once more began to labor at the grave like one who takes no further heed of aught save his allotted task.

Acour stood before Murgh like a criminal before his judge.

"Man," said the awful figure addressing him, "where have you been and what have you done since last we spoke together in the midday dark at Venice?"

Now, dragged word by slow word from his unwilling lips, came the answer of the traitor's heart.

"I fled from the field at Venice because I feared this knight, and you, O Spirit of Death. I journeyed to Avignon, in France, and there strove to possess myself of yonder woman whom here in England, with the help of one Nicholas, I had wed, when she was foully drugged. I strove to possess myself of her by fraud and by violence. But some fate was against me. She and that aged priest bribed the knave whom I trusted. He caused a dead man and woman dressed in their garments to be borne from their lodging to the plague pit while they fled from Avignon disguised."

Here for a moment Grey Dick paused from his labors at the grave and looked up at Hugh. Then he fell to them again, throwing out the peaty soil with both hands.

"My enemy and his familiar, for man he can scarcely be," went on Acour, pointing first to Hugh and then to Dick, "survived all my plans to kill them and instead killed those whom I had sent after them. I learned that the woman and the priest were not dead, but fled, and followed them, after me came my enemy and his familiar. Twice we passed each other on the road, once to Dick, "survived all my plans to kill them and instead knew me not and the Fate which blinded me from them, saved them also from all my plots to bring them to their doom. The woman and the priest took ship to England, and I followed in another ship, being made mad with desire and with jealous rage, for there I knew my enemy would find and win her. In the darkness before this very dawn I overtook the woman and the priest at last and set my fellows on to kill the man. Myself I would strike no blow, fearing lest my death should come upon me, and so I should be robbed of her. But God fought with His aged servant who in his youth was the first of knights. He slew my men, then fled on with the woman, Eve of Clavering. I followed, knowing that he was sore wounded and must die, and that then the beauty which has lured me to shame and ruin would be mine, if only for an hour. I followed, and here at this place of evil omen, where first I saw my foe, I found you, O Incarnate Sword of Vengeance."

Murgh unfolded his bare arms and lifted his head, which was sunk upon his breast.

"Your pardon," he said gently, "my name is Hand of Fate and not Sword of Vengeance. There is no vengeance save that which men wreak upon themselves. What fate may be and vengeance may be I know not fully, and none will ever know until they have passed the Gateway of the Gods. Archer, the grave is deep enough. Come forth now and let us learn who it is decreed shall fill it. Knights, the hour is at hand for you to finish that which you began at Crecy and at Venice."

Hugh heard and drew his sword. Acour drew his sword also, then cried out, pointing to Grey Dick:

"Here be two against one. If I conquer he will shoot me with his bow."

"Have no fear, Sir Thief and Liar," hissed Grey Dick, "for that shaft will not be needed. Slay the master if you can and go safe from the squire," and he unstrung his black bow and hid it in its case.

Now Hugh stepped to where Red Eve stood, the wounded Sir Andrew leaning on her shoulder. Bending down he kissed her on the lips, saying:

"Soon, very soon, my sweet, whom I have lost and found again, you will be mine on earth, or I shall be yours in heaven. This, then, in greeting or farewell."

"In greeting, beloved, not in farewell," she answered as she kissed him back, "for if you die, know that I follow hard upon your road. Yet I say that yonder grave was not dug for you."

"Nay, not for you, son, not for you," said Sir Andrew lifting his faint head. "One fights for you whom you do not see, and against Him Satan and his servant cannot stand," and letting fall the sword hilt he stretched out his thin hand and blessed him.

Now when Acour saw that embrace his jealous fury prevailed against his fears. With a curse upon his lips he leapt at Hugh and smote, thinking to take him unawares. But Hugh was watching, and sprang back, and then the fray began, if fray it can be called.

A wild joy shining in his eyes, Hugh grasped his long sword with both hands and struck. So great was that blow that it bit through Acour's armor, beneath his right arm, deep into the flesh and sent him staggering back. Again he struck and wounded him in the shoulder; a third time and clove his helm so that the blood poured down into his eyes and blinded him.

Back reeled Acour, back to the very edge of the grave, and stood there swaying to and fro. At the sight of his helplessness Hugh's fury seemed to leave him. His lifted sword sank downward.

"Let God deal with you, knave," he said, "for I cannot."

For a while there was silence. There they stood and stared at the smitten man waiting the end, whatever it might be. They all stared save Murgh, who fixed his stony eyes upon the sky.

Presently it came. The sword, falling from Acour's hand into the grave, rested there point upward. With a last effort he drew his dagger. Dashing the blood from his eyes, he hurled it with all his dying strength, not at Hugh, but at Red Eve. Past her ear it hissed, severing a little tress of her long hair, which floated down on to the snow.

Then Acour threw his arms wide and fell backward —fell backward and vanished in the grave.

Dick ran to look. There he lay dead, pierced through back and bosom by the point of his own sword.

For one brief flash of time a black dove-shaped bird was seen hovering round the head of Murgh.

"Finish!" said Dick straightening himself. "Well, I had hoped to see a better fight, but cowards die as cowards live."

Leaning on Red Eve's shoulder Sir Andrew limped to the side of the grave. They both looked down on that which lay therein.

"Daughter," said the old man, "through many dangers it has come about as I foretold. The bond that in your drugged sleep bound you to this highborn knave is severed by God's sword of death Christ have pity on his sinful soul. Now, Sir Hugh de Cressi, come hither and be swift, for my time is short."

Hugh obeyed, and at a sign took Eve by the hand. Then, speaking very low and as quickly as he might for his life was draining from him through the red wound in his side, the old priest spoke the hallowed words that bound these two together till death should part them. Yes, there by the graveside, over the body of the dead Acour, there in the red light of the morning, amidst the lonely snows, was celebrated the strangest marriage the world has even seen. In nature's church it was celebrated, with the grim, gray archer for a clerk, and Death's own fearful minister for congregation.

It was done and with uplifted, trembling hands Sir Andrew blessed them both—them and the fruit of their bodies which was to be. He blessed them in the name of the all-seeing God he served. He bade them put aside their grief for those whom they had lost. Soon, he said, their short day done, the lost would be found again, made glorious, and with them himself, who, loving them both on earth, would love them through eternity.

Then, while their eyes grew blind with tears, and even the fierce archer turned aside his face, Sir Andrew Arnold staggered to where he stood who in the Land of Sunrise had been called Gateway of the Gods. Before him he bent his gray and ancient head.

"O thou who dwellest here below to do the will of heaven, to thee I come as once thou badest me," he said, and was silent.

Murgh let his eyes rest on him. Then stretching out his hand, he touched him very gently on the breast, and as he touched him smiled a sweet and wondrous smile.

"Good and faithful servant," he said, "thy work is done on earth. Now I, whom all men fear, though I be their friend and helper, am bidden by the Lord of life and death to call thee home. Look up and pass!"

The old priest obeyed. It seemed to those who watched that the radiance on the face of Murgh had fallen upon him also. He smiled, he stretched his arms upward as though to clasp what they might not see. Then down he sank gently, as though upon a bed, and lay white and still in the white, still snow.

The Helper turned to the three who remained alive.

"Farewell for a little time," he said. "I must be gone. But when we meet again, as meet we shall, then fear me not, for have you not seen that to those who love me I am gentle?"

Hugh de Cressi and Red Eve made no answer, for they knew not what to say. But Grey Dick spoke out boldly.

"Sir Lord, or Sir Spirit," he said, "save once at the beginning, when the arrow burst upon my string, I never feared you. Nor do I fear your gifts," and he pointed to the grave and to dead Sir Andrew, "which of late have been plentiful throughout the world, as we of Dunwich know. Therefore I dare to ask you one question ere we part for a while. Why do you take one and leave another? Is it because you must, or because every shaft does not hit its mark?"

Now Murgh looked him up and down with his sunken eyes, then answered:

"Come hither, archer, and I will lay my hand upon your heart also and you shall learn."

"Nay," cried Grey Dick, "for now I have the answer to the riddle, since I know you cannot lie. When we die we still live and know, therefore I'm content to wait."

Again a smile swept across Murgh's awful face though that smile was cold as the winter dawn. Then he turned and slowly walked away toward the west.

They watched him go till he became but a blot of fantastic color that soon vanished on the moorland.

Hugh spoke to Red Eve and said:

"Wife, let us away from this haunted place and take what joy we can. Who knows when Murgh may return again and make us as are all the others whom we love?"

"Ay, husband won at last," she answered, "who knows? Yet, after so much fear and sorrow, first I would rest a while with you."

So hand in hand they went till they, too, grew small and vanished on the snowy marsh.

But Grey Dick stayed there alone with the dead, and presently spoke aloud for company.

"The woman has him heart and soul," he said, "as is fitting, and where's the room between the two for an archer-churl to lodge? Mayhap, after all, I should have done well to take yonder Murgh for lord when I had the chance. Man, or god, or ghost, he's a fellow to my liking, and once he had led me through the Gates no woman would have dared to come to part us. Well, good-by, Hugh de Cressi, till you are sick of kisses and the long shafts begin to fly again, for then you will bethink you of a certain bow and of him who alone can bend it."

Having spoken thus in his hissing voice, whereof the sound resembled that of an arrow in its flight, Grey Dick descended into the grave and trod the earth over Acour's false and handsome face, hiding it from the sight of men forever.

Then he lifted up the dead Sir Andrew in his strong arms and slowly bore him thence to burial.
